KICKING THE OVAL BALL.

CORNELL DEFEATS THE CRESCENTS BY 22 POINTS TO NOTHING.

The Ithaca Players Score All of Their Touch Downs and Goals in the First Half and Then, with Substitutes in the Places of Stars, Prevent the Brooklynites from Scoring in the Second.

Cornell's expert leather kickers showed the Crescents a thing or two about football at Eastern Park yesterday afternoon. In the first half the Ithacans, with their strongest team in the field, simply cut holes in the Crescents' line, and rolled up twenty-two points with consummate ease. Then several of the star players withdrew in order to save themselves for the game with Williams College next Saturday, and in the second half neither side scored. The Crescents resorted to the roughest kind of tactics at the start, but later in the game they were paid back in their own coin, and deservedly so. With Cornell's regular team lined up against them throughout the entire battle, the Crescents would have been beaten 40 to 0.

There were about 4,000 persons on the field when the sport began. There were more adherents for the Crescents than for the men up the State, but the latter's followers had all the fun. The big covered stand back of first base was crowded with enthusiasts who waved flags and handkerchiefs at every opportunity. Each side of the gridiron was fringed with howling spectators, who poked fun at everybody in sight. Still, it was a most orderly crowd, and the blue-coats who were scattered about the arena had a cinch. The crowd was considerably amused at one old fellow who had a Grand Army wreath on the front of his Derby hat and a special policeman's shield on the breast of his coat.

Without question, the star player of the day was Beacham, Cornell's left end. This young man was everywhere, and attracted much more attention than the wonderful Taussig, on the other end of the line, who played good football too. Beacham's tackling was superb, but his rushing was simply marvellous. The ball had been in play for about four minutes, and was down on Cornell's twenty-yard line. Beacham fell back of the line and received the oval from Wyckoff. Warner and Fennell made an opening for him in the Crescent's line, through which he dashed like a runaway locomotive. A series of wild grabs by the Crescent backs proved ineffectual, and the long-haired Ithacan plunged madly on. Little Taussig and the catlike Wyckoff quickly joined him, and bowled over the Crescent tacklers like so much chaff before the wind. In a jiffy Beacham had eluded the deathlike clutch of Full Back Whitney, and then dashed in toward the Crescents' goal line with the entire army of opponents in full pursuit. Once he staggered, but Taussig, who was sprinting behind, interfered with Pratt, whose arms were working in windmill fashion, and Beacham sprinted on like a frightened deer. Just as he neared the coveted line he wabbled for a second, just long enough to enable two of the Crescents to throw their arms about him, but he fell headlong over the line for a touch down just the same, after a magnificent run of eighty-five yards. Then the Cornell men yelled with all their might, but their joy was cut short a moment later when Ohl missed an easy goal. That run was the play of the game, and one of the longest of the season. In addition to this, Beacham made two other touch downs by splendid line bucking and good dodging.

Ohl kicked up to his usual standard, but he fumbled the ball on punts and gave the Cornell shouters heart disease on several occasions. Kelley, Dyer, and Starbuck gained plenty of ground as half backs, but Dyer was "done up" in the first half of what looked like an intentionally rough tackle by Hotchkiss and Wingate. Dyer while running with the ball was thrown out of bounds. He cried "Down!" but Hotchkiss and Wingate dashed him to the ground with great force and then fell on him. He was badly hurt about the head and had to give way to Starbuck. Wyckoff's work at quarter back was a star performance. He got into every play, carried the ball well, and made beautiful tackling. Warner, Fennell, and Colnan, Cornell's big three in the centre, were like a brick wall when the Crescents tried bucking.

Cornell's offensive play in the first half was something worth going miles to see. The ends were placed behind the line with the backs and the interference for the man with the ball resulted in remarkable gains. The Crescents' line was like paper before the constant pounding, and, in spite of the vociferous coaching of Harry Beecher, his men could put up little or no defence. Back of the line the Brooklyn team was also weak, in that what little interference was formed for the rushers was quickly broken up by the Cornell men. Whitney and Zimmerman were all at sea whenever Ohl punted, which of course gave the Cornell ends many excellent opportunities to nail the ball. Judging from the play of the Ithacans in the first half, it would appear that Pennsylvania will have no easy time on Nov. 17, when she meets Cornell at Philadelphia.

The game was scheduled to begin at 2:30 o'clock, but it was half an hour later before the Cornell team showed up. The Crescents, meanwhile, gave an exhibit of what they knew about practising, and the pretty girls who looked on began to hope for victory. Big Sanford, the ex-Yale athlete, made himself conspicuous by wearing a cap that looked like an old stocking and coaching the Crescents in substitute tones. From his energetic actions people began to believe that he would play, and also play the whole game for the home team, but he disappointed the crowd by withdrawing at the last moment in favor of McKenzie. The best playing for the Crescents was done by Curry, Pratt, Zimmerman, and Crowell. The last named did not get into the game until the last half, but he was quickly in evidence.

Cornell won the toss and took the eastern end of the field, having a strong wind to help along Ohl's punts. Whitney kicked off for the Crescents, and Ohl boomed the leather back to Goodwin, who was instantly downed by Beacham on Cornell's 43-yard line. Zimmerman made three yards around Beacham, and Zimmerman then punted to Ohl, who fumbled and carried the ball outside at Cornell's 45-yard line. The ball was passed to Dyer, who fumbled long enough to let Crescent get it. Short rushes at Cornell's centre availed little or nothing, and Ithaca took the ball on her 20-yard line. Ohl's punt was caught by Goodwin, but, after the latter had run back ten yards, Warner threw him upon the ground like a ton of coal.

Bucking the centre resulted in no gain, so that Zimmerman was forced to punt. The ball rolled outside at Cornell's twenty-yard line, and then Beacham made the wonderful run described above. Ohl missed the goal, the ball striking one of the posts, and the score was 4 to 0. Time, 5 minutes.

Zimmerman's kick-off was so weak that Dyer caught the ball on a line and ran back to the centre of the field before being downed. Dyer, assisted by Beacham's grand interference, got around Curry's end for twenty-five yards. Kelley made ten more around Wingate, and Ohl, bursting through the centre, carried the oval across the Crescents' goal line. But he was called back, and the ball went to the Crescents for holding in the line. Whitney, Goodwin, and Zimmerman could not gain much by banging Cornell's centre, and Cornell finally secured the pigskin on a fumble. Dyer promptly carried Curry's end for twenty yards. Ohl made four between McKenzie and Baldwin, Kelly backed the centre for five, and Dyer ran around Curry for five more. Ohl's plunge into the centre brought the ball to the Crescent's 18-yard line, and Beacham quickly scored after four minutes of play. Ohl goaled, and the figures were 10 to 0.

Zimmerman's kick-off was poor again, Wyckoff taking the ball on the pick-up. Dyer made ten yards around the left end, and was neatly spilled in a stand on his head by two Crescent players. He was hurt, but after a good rubbing he resumed play, amid cheers. Cornell received ten yards for interference, and Warner made ten more between McKenzie and Baldwin. Ohl and Dyer, by short runs, worked the ball along further, but it was soon lost on a fumble when only two yards from the Crescents' goal line. Then Pratt fumbled, and big Fennell fell upon the leather for Cornell's first down. Dyer received it next and plunged over the line. It was an easy goal, and the score stood 16 to 0. Time, 8 minutes.

Again Zimmerman kicked off poorly, the ball rising scarcely a foot from the ground. Dyer picked it up and ran back ten yards before he was tackled by Hotchkiss and Wingate, who drove him out of bounds and so injured him that he had to retire. Starbuck, who took his place, immediately made a pretty run of forty yards, although he was apparently tackled and thrown once by at least five Crescent players. Kelley got through the centre for ten, but, as the signals were mixed, Ohl lost ground on the next play. Kelley, Beacham, Starbuck, and Ohl tried bucking the centre then, and soon had the oval down on Crescents' 25-yard line. Ohl, Beacham, and Kelley then hustled it up to within a foot of the line and Beacham carried it over on a push play. Time, 10 minutes. Ohl kicked a goal, and the score was 22 to 0. Zimmerman kicked off and Wyckoff caught the ball, run back for twenty yards. Then time for the first half expired and the players took a ten minutes' rest.

When they came out of their dressing rooms it was noticed that there were many changes in the make-up of both teams. For Cornell, Conrad substituted Ohl, McLaughlin succeeded Hall, Thorne took Taussig's place, Beaty was substituted for Colman and Steinacher went to right half in Starbuck's place. The Crescents allowed quarter back to Crowell, left guard to Baldwin, centre to Milliken, right end to Martin, right half to J. O'Connor and full back to Pratt. Cornell's team was visibly weakened in both defensive and offensive play, but still the Crescents couldn't make a touch down, although they made quite a bluff at it. The chief gains by the Crescents were due to the inability of the Cornell backs to catch Pratt's long punts and the good rushing by the Crescents' ends. After about twenty minutes of hard work the Brooklyn boys landed the ball on Cornell's 15-yard line, but it went no further, as Kelley and Steinacher, by some great rushing, carried it back to the middle of the field, where the line-up was when time was called. The summary:

NAVAL RESERVES, 4; WHITE SQUADRON OFFICERS, 0.

Society had a great time at West Chester yesterday and incidentally witnessed a remarkably close game of football between an eleven representing the fourth division of the Naval Reserves of this city and a team of officers from the North Atlantic squadron. After a remarkably close and exciting contest the amateur sailors convinced their nautical instructors of last summer that if they did not know very much about seamanship they could play football a little, and finally won a very creditable victory from the officers of the white squadron by a score of 4 points to nothing.

The game was played on the polo field of the West Chester County club, within a stone's throw of Pelham Bay, and while to the casual spectator it may have looked all right, it was in reality a sea of mud and water after Monday's heavy rain. A goodly portion of it was a regular quagmire, and the unfortunate players, after a fall, looked as though they had been pulled out of Trinidad's Asphalt Lake.

A piercing north wind swept across the field and the majority of the fair spectators, who were decorated with gilt buttons, cap cords, buzzards, and several hots galore, were glad to take shelter in the club house long before the first half was over. The Naval Reserves, armed with suspicious-looking black bottles, were also out in force to cheer their comrades on to victory, and their enthusiasm knew no bounds when their team was finally declared the victor. The navy men had lots of friends, however, and more than one blue jacket from the Cincinnati, New York, San Francisco, and Castine trudged away out to West Chester to see their officers play. While the majority of the spectators came from the city on a special train there was a goodly throng of notables from West Chester's more exclusive set, perched on four-in-hands, brakes, and stylish-looking traps. They lent the applause, but were strictly impartial and seemed equally delighted whenever either side made a gain. Among the notables present were:

Mr. and Mrs. W. Butler Duncan, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Uthrop, Mr. Forest Manice, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allen, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mr. and Mrs. Pelham Clinton, Mr. and Mrs. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. W. Barclay Parsons, John Davis, Richard Church, Arthur Herbert, Henry Redmond, Alexander Taylor, Jr., Miss Wilmerding, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Thebaud, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Potter, Major and Mrs. Goodloe, the Misses Cooley, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Iselin, J. W. J. Hurst, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Elliott, J. Seaver Page, Jonathan L. Mott, C. J. Bergesteresford, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Waterbury, W. S. Vanderbilt Allen, Mr. and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. John Ayres, Frederic Allen, Newberry S. Thorne, Ernest Adee, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. La Montagne, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mallory, the Misses Thorne, Trevor L. Park, Mr. and Mrs. T. Lee Tailor, N. C. Bryant, J. Pierpont Stevenson, Edmund Randolph, T. W. Adee, Lieutenant R. W. Meade, Col. James Forney, U. S. M. C., Lieut. Leon Williams, J. E. Uric, P. A. Serat, Lieut. Henry Merrill, Lieutenant Commander F. E. Beckett, Lieuts. A. C. Hodgson, S. S. Wood, A. P. Niblock, V. L. Cottman, J. A. Rod, A. L. Key, and R. A. Adams, Assistant Surgeon J. E. Riggs, Commander A. S. Mitchell, Lieut. Commander George E. Kent, Lieut. W. Butler Duncan, 2d, Dr. H. H. Butts, Lieut. Washington Irving, Ensign T. C. Zerega, and Ensign W. D. W. Dinmock.

Play was called promptly at 2:30 P. M., the Naval Reserves kicking off. The Officers chose the northern goal, where they had the wind and light in their favor. Aufermann opened proceedings by kicking the ball to the Officers' twenty-yard line. Bookwalter fumbled the ball, but fell on it in time to save it. Spear then made four yards through the Reserves' centre. Emrich repeated this a second later, while Spear added three more yards through left guard and the line-bucker.

Bookwalter then passed the ball to Emrich for a punt, but was wild. The result was Emrich was downed with a loss of ten yards. The ball was now on the Officers' 25-yard line, where they lost on downs. The Officers failed to gain for the Reserves on the first down, but made two yards through the centre on the next play. Lee followed this by gaining five yards in the next two plays through the centre.

Aufermann then tried to get around left end, but failed. Gill, however, made two yards through centre, while Lee was downed in his tracks without a gain. The ball was now on the Officers' ten-yard line, and they were fighting desperately to save themselves from a touch down. Gill essayed to go between left guard and tackle, and as he could make no gain the ball went to the Officers on downs just as every one thought the Reserves would score. Sterling was sent behind the guards and left tackle, and Emrich followed with three yards around left end. Bookwalter fumbled a poor pass and was downed without gain. Sterling made up for it by a gain of four yards around left end. On Bookwalter again fumbling the slippery sphere, the Reserves got the ball on the Officers' seventeen-yard line. Gill made a yard around right end, and Aufermann followed with a good twelve-yard run. Gill was then sent through the centre for four yards, and a second later was forced over the line for a touch down, from which Aufermann failed to kick a goal. Score, 4—0 in favor of Reserves.

On the ball being taken to the centre of the field again Emrich made a long kick to the Reserves' ten-yard line. Lee made a good catch and a pretty fifteen-yard run, mostly through a miniature lake. He was finally downed in another bog and came up looking like a drowned rat. At the end of the first half the Reserves had the ball on their thirty-yard line. The Officers did some great playing in the second half and kept the Reserves on the defensive all the time. They nearly scored twice, and at no time was their own goal in danger. Emrich, who was captain of the Annapolis Reserves, did particularly good work. When time was called the ball was on the Reserves' 20-yard line. The teams, after cheering each other, were entertained at the club house.

During the morning a number of pigeon-shooting sweepstakes were decided on the club grounds, and Mr. Williams distinguished himself by capturing every event but one. Jordan L. Mott, Jr., however, who only shot in one event, was in great form and captured the biggest prize of the day, Mr. Williams being second and W. Gould Brokaw third. The line-up for the football game was:

The young ladies, who seemed to predominate, were highly excited over the athletics, the clack and roar of the High School being especially prominent. The teams were very evenly matched, and the club force won only because of fumbles on the part of the schoolboys at critical stages of the game. In the first half the score was 10 to 0 in the Dying's favor. The High school scored in the second half by excellent team work and steady play. The teams were:
