THE LEAGUE'S STATEMENT.

BARNIE, BUCKENBERGER, AND PFEFFER ARE SUSPENDED.

Unless They Can Disprove the Charges Made Against Them Before Dec. 31 They Will Be Forever Debarred from Employment by Clubs or Leagues Under the Protection of the National Agreement

The National League's manifesto regarding the cases of William Barnie, Fred Pfeffer, and A. C. Buckenberger, who are identified with the new American Association, was issued yesterday, and will create a sensation in the baseball world. The following is the statement drawn up by the committee, and referred to the National Board for adoption:

To the National Board of Professional Baseball Associations:

From the year 1876, when baseball was established in this country on a substantial and responsible basis by the disbandment of the so-called National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs and the organization of the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs, down to the present time, the duty has been imposed upon some body or organization to uphold and enforce the objects for which baseball was established, to wit:

First—To perpetuate baseball as the national game of the United States, and to surround it with such safeguards as to warrant for the future absolute public confidence in its integrity and methods.

Second—To protect and promote the mutual interests of professional baseball clubs and professional baseball players.

The National League formed in 1876 found a difficult task before it in undertaking to carry out the objects above referred to. Interest in baseball was at low ebb. Gamblers were in possession. The game was without discipline, organization, or legitimate control. The sport was conducted with dishonest methods and for dishonest purposes, and had neither the respect nor confidence of the press or public. Heroic methods were absolutely necessary. At a meeting of the National League, held in Cleveland, Dec. 5, 1887, the League directors unanimously ratified the action of the Louisville Club in expelling from the professional ranks James A. Devlin, W. H. Craver, A. H. Nichols, and G. W. Hall "for conduct in contravention of the object of the League."

These men had been charged with and convicted of wilfully selling a game of baseball. At first the action of the League in taking such an extreme course was strongly denounced. The League, however, foresaw that any condonation of fraud or crookedness meant death to the national game and remained firm in its position. Public opinion soon turned, and to-day it is universally conceded that the course then taken did more to establish the honesty and integrity of baseball than any action taken or legislation since enacted. From that day to this no charge of crookedness or dishonesty has been made against a professional ball player. Repeated attempts have been made to reinstate these men or those of them now living, but their expulsion was final and irrevocable.

That the League was earnest in its effort to purify the game was further demonstrated by its action taken at a special meeting held at the Russell House, Detroit, Mich., on June 24, 1882, when Richard Higham, a League umpire, was upon charges preferred by the Detroit Club, expelled for crooked work as an umpire. From that day to this no such charge has ever been made against an official umpire. The rapid increase in the composition of ball players soon opened up another avenue of trouble for the League, which needed and received prompt attention. This was flagrant and open dissipation in the game at home and abroad. While this was confined comparatively to a few men, the innocent suffered largely from it, and the National League was brought into disrepute. Heroic measures were again adopted, and several players were indefinitely suspended, with excellent effect. It is safe to say that to-day there is less dissipation and drunkenness in the ranks of professional ball players in proportion to their number than in any other organized or unorganized body in this country identified with outdoor sports.

The success achieved by the National League in its efforts to develop baseball as the national game became apparent in its rapid growth in popular favor, and the establishment of clubs and associations throughout the various States. It became evident soon that something must be done to cover and protect the rights and interests of these various bodies, and "that there was a recognized need of some central power in baseball to govern all associations, by an equitable code of general laws, to put the game on a prosperous and lasting basis."

To accomplish this purpose a meeting was held in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, Feb. 17, 1883, at which delegates were present, representing the National League, the American Association, and the Northwestern League. At that meeting the so-called Tripartite Agreement was drawn up and agreed to, which substantially was an offensive and defensive alliance, embodying a mutual respect of all contracts and other obligations, and all rights of the parties to the agreement to territorial rights, players under contract or held under reserve.

The adoption of this tripartite agreement opened a new era in baseball, and it was so readily recognized as being a step in the line of progress that the committee which drew up the agreement were called together in New York city in October, 1883, they decided to call the individuals they had trained the National Agreement of Professional Baseball Clubs, the purpose being to open the door to all clubs, leagues, and associations wishing to live under the conditions, rules, and regulations of the agreement, immediately several leagues and associations applied for the protection assured them, and readily pledged themselves to abide by the requirements designated in the agreement.

The action of the committee in framing the new national agreement was subsequently ratified by the signatures of the Presidents or the parties thereto, viz.:

The National League of Professional Baseball Clubs, A. G. Mills, President, Nov. 22, 1883.

The American Association of Baseball Clubs, H. D. McKnight, President, Dec. 13, 1883.

The Northwestern League of Professional Baseball Clubs, John Matter, President, Jan. 10, 1884.

The Eastern League of Professional Baseball Clubs, William C. Sexton, President, Feb. 19, 1884.

The fundamental principle of the national agreement as originally drawn, and which is now in operation, is a respect for territorial rights. This, in fact, is the corner stone of the structure.

It contemplates and provides for the organization of cities into leagues or associations, with one club, and one only, in each city, with a control between the respective cities for championship honors. The interest which baseball arouses in any city is based absolutely on local pride. The contest and value to a championship is entirely to the city to which the victorious club belongs.

Experience has demonstrated that whenever and wherever territorial rights have been invaded and rival clubs established, the element of local pride is absent and interest in both destroyed. It is this which makes a respect for territorial rights a principle which we must uphold.

It is true, nevertheless, and we so declare that we will gladly welcome and shall encourage the formation of leagues and associations who desire to operate under the national agreement, and consent to abide by the fundamental principles of that document.

Reference has been made above to the difficulties and the obstacles which at times have presented themselves and which have been by severe but just methods removed.

To-day the future of baseball is confronted by a new condition, which in every particular is as harmful and in many respects far more dangerous than open dishonesty or flagrant dissipation. That is, practices within the lines, and under the shadow of the past we have had men identified with professional baseball who for years have been the benefactors of the game, have received liberal compensation for the work they have done, earned their livelihood entirely and absolutely from the opportunities afforded them by clubs and organizations operating under the national agreement, and we find and now know that these men, during this time, have persistently been identifying themselves with schemes and combinations the object and sole purpose of which are to weaken and perhaps destroy the splendid fabric of our national game, which it has taken years of effort, anxiety, and large outlay of capital to construct.

To-day we have the confidence of the public and the press of the country in the methods and the integrity of baseball in larger measure than at any prior period in the history of our national game. It devolves upon us to continue to deserve and retain this confidence. We must endeavor to do it.

The interests of clubs and professional ball players are identical. One cannot succeed without the other. Success means mutual benefit. The moment any suspicion attaches to baseball, public confidence lost or even shaken, the occasion of the ball player is gone. We must all stand or fall together. There is no middle ground. We stand by the fundamental law, our national agreement, which guarantees protection to players as well as to clubs, or we destroy it. One road leads to the perpetuation of the national game, the other to its decline. There should be no place, no standing room in baseball for any anarchistic element which never aids in building up, but is ever ready to destroy.

The time has come when some action should be taken to place this element without the pale of our ranks.

The National Board, operating under the national agreement, was created to protect and guard the interests of all players, clubs, and associations identified with the agreement. Any attempt to encroach upon that, to nullify or affect any of its provisions, is of direct and material concern to all alike.

Obligations of contracts, the right of reserve, and the territorial rights of clubs, associations, and leagues must be upheld, and shall be, at any cost.

It is a matter of public rumor and in no sense affect which has come to our knowledge that men identified with clubs, members of the national agreement, have been cooperating in the formation of clubs or organizations whose purpose is to conflict with the national agreement. In view of this knowledge, the National League and American Association of Professional Clubs in convention assembled respectfully suggests to and requests the National Board to declare A. C. Buckenberger, William Barnie, and Fred Pfeffer, ineligible to be employed either as manager or player or in any capacity whatever, by any club or organization operating under the national agreement, and they be declared suspended. Such suspension to remain in force until such time as they or either of them can satisfy the National Board that they have in no way been engaged directly or indirectly in the organization of any club, league, or association formed or to be formed in conflict with the principles of the national agreement. And in the event of their failure to relieve themselves from this suspension within such time as your Board may direct, they shall be expelled and forever debarred from any connection with clubs or organizations identified with the National Agreement of Professional Baseball Clubs.

We further move request that your Board take like action in the case of any other manager, player, or other official who in the future identifies himself with a similar movement.

O. P. MORTON, J. HUTCHINSON, JAMES A. HEAR, H. H. VOX, I. E. HORST, N. E. YOUNG.

Appended is the decision of the National Board:

To all National Agreement Clubs, Leagues, and Associations:

At a meeting of the National Board of Professional Baseball Clubs, held in New York city Nov. 16, 1894, a communication was received from the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs, in convention assembled, requesting this Board to take action in the case of certain individuals heretofore identified with clubs operating under the national agreement who have been charged with treachery to their employers and the organizations with which they have been identified. The request, so presented, was supplemented by an appeal from the executive officers of the Eastern League of Baseball Clubs and the Western League of Baseball Clubs to take such action as was proper to protect said leagues in the rights assured them under the national agreement.

After mature consideration, and governed absolutely by a desire to comply with the letter and spirit of the requests made to this Board, and having reasonable and substantial evidence upon which to base our action.

This Board has decided to announce, and it does declare that A. C. Buckenberger, William Barnie, and Fred Pfeffer are ineligible to be employed either as manager, player, or in any other capacity, by any club or organization identified with the national agreement, and said persons are hereby declared suspended.

This Board further declares that such suspension shall remain in force up to and including Dec. 31, 1894, and in the event of the failure of the above named persons, or either of them, on or before the above named date, to show to this Board that he or they have been in no manner, directly or indirectly, engaged in any attempt to promote the organization of clubs, leagues, or associations antagonistic to the national agreement, they shall be expelled and forever debarred from any connection with clubs or organized bodies operating under the national agreement.

N. E. YOUNG, A. H. SOLER, C. H. BYRNE.

The foregoing action was partially caused by the following communication:

NEW YORK, Nov. 15, 1894.

To the National League and American Association of Professional Baseball Clubs.

GENTLEMEN: We, the representatives of the undersigned leagues, operating under the national agreement of Professional Baseball Clubs, respectfully submit the following: Your body as the recognized major baseball organization of the country, and have our right to elect the National Board and control all bodies identified with the agreement.

It has been more known to us, and we have good and substantial reason for believing that such knowledge is correct, that a new organization of baseball clubs is contemplated which, if necessary, must operate without the pale of the national agreement. It appears also that it is the purpose of the new association, if it materializes, to attempt to take from our respective organizations and clubs players now held by us under the right of reservation accorded us by the national agreement. We, therefore, request that you, as a body, take some action to protect us, so far as possible, against all outside organizations. We trust you will give this immediate attention, and we await your action. Respectfully,

B. B. JOHNSON, Sec. Western League, P. B. B. C.
F. T. POWERS, Pres. Eastern League.

Messrs. Barnie, Buckenberger, and Pfeffer have until Dec. 31 to answer the charges made above.

THE INTERSCHOLASTIC KICKERS.

The Championship Is Narrowed Down to Four Teams—De La Salle's Eleven.

The contest for the football championship of the Interscholastic Athletic Association of this city has narrowed down to four schools. Barnard School and De La Salle Institute are battling for supremacy in the first section and Cutler and Berkeley schools are the only teams in the race in the second section. Cutler has three victories and no defeats to her credit, while Berkeley has won two games and met with not a single defeat. The two school elevens met on Nov. 12, but the game resulted in a tie. It will be played off at Berkeley Oval on Wednesday. Berkeley's eleven will play the Woodbridge School team at Berkeley Oval this afternoon.

The De La Salle and Barnard boys are tied for the lead in the first section, and the winner of the tie will play the winner of the Berkeley-Cutler game on Nov. 28 at Berkeley Oval. This will be the final contest of the year, and will be the decisive game for the championship of the city schools. It was originally intended to play this game off on Thanksgiving Day, but the boys most interested wished to go to Philadelphia to witness the University of Pennsylvania-Harvard game.

The De La Salle Institute eleven are very strong this year. Phelan and McNally, the big guards, are considered by many of the boys to be the best of any team in I. A. A. team. The tacklers, McGuire and Carrigan, are sturdy and skilful players. The ends are Lounes and Magintie, and it is a plucky back who can run around them. They are swift runners and hard tacklers. At centre the De La Salle boys have lad who is new to the game, but is learning fast. His name is Falfey. The schools quarter backs are said to be without their superiors. Among the schoolboys of the city, Beers, the full back, plays a clever dodging and running game. Beers uses his head in all the plays that he makes. He is captain of the eleven, and is one of the most popular boys at the Institute. He is preparing for Harvard University. Tilford, last year's end rusher, is playing a plucky game at left half, and is gaining a reputation as a line breaker. He is great on catching punts. His running mate on the right is O'Shea, who follows his interference in first-rate style, and is also a good line breaker. Brennan, the quarter-back, interferes well, and is a sure tackler. The De La Salle boys are practising diligently, and they expect to surprise the Barnard boys when they meet.

HARVARD'S NEW FULL BACK.

The Coachers Have Decided to Use Cabot in That Position.

CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 18.—To-morrow the Harvard football team will have their last really severe practice before the great game on Saturday. Two hard halves will be played. For the rest of the week the work will be chiefly with the idea of keeping the men in trim and smoothing off a few rough points in the play. Whittemore, who has been playing full back, has been changed over to left half back, where he will be first substitute to Wrightington. The only explanation of this action is that the coachers have finally decided to use young Cabot, the freshman who was recently taken on the varsity squad, as full back.

Cabot is to-day the most talked about young man at Cambridge. He first attracted attention in the championship class game between '95 and '98. His tackling and interference were superb, and his long, low drives against the wind would have done credit to any varsity player. He played at end rush in the game with Brown last Thursday, but that was only a foxy move to throw Yale men off the track. Full back is his place.

The coachers are still worried over Frank Shaw's condition. Besides being under weight he has thought much about the game that he has worked himself into a terribly nervous condition. He is getting the least work of any man on the team.

Yale's Plans for the Week.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 18.—Capt. Hinkey this evening detailed his plans for the training of the team this week. There will be three days of hard practice. To-morrow and Tuesday two full halves will be played, and on Wednesday the practice will be lighter. Thursday's work will consist of rehearsing signals and tricks. On Friday at noon the players will go to Springfield, where they will be quartered at the Home of the Christian Workers, where Yale has been accommodated for several years.

Although Greenway expects to be able to begin training again on Tuesday, it is doubtful if the coachers will permit of his entering the Harvard game. Jerrems is beyond question the selection of Capt. Hinkey and the coachers for the position of quarter back in DeWitt's place. Dr. Josh Hartwell, Ray Tompkins, Heffelfinger, and Billy Rhodes will remain with the team until after the game. Capt. Hinkey has no intention of taking his men away from New Haven for the closing days of work.

Another Ladies' Rifle Club at Hoboken.

Rifle shooting by ladies is practised a great deal at Hoboken. Until a few days ago the Lady Millers had the field to themselves, but on Saturday evening the Ladies' Our Own Rifle Club was organized. Many of the members are the wives and daughters of wealthy citizens of the city. The ladies have already secured cosey quarters at 136 Hudson street. It is intended to furnish them nicely, a piano being among the most important fixtures. The ranges were already in position, and those present at the meeting had a friendly shoot. The following scores were made out of a possible 250 points:

Mrs. Boardman, 226; Mrs. Stein, 218; Miss Ryan, 185; Mrs. G. F. Seymour, 195; Miss Kirby, 187; Miss Kelly, 189; Miss J. Kelly, 191; Miss Fitzpatrick, 196; Miss Weiss, 198; Miss Thorn, 192; Miss Thorn, 192, and Mrs. Andrews, 201. The shooting was done on the American 25-ring target at 75 feet.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Boardman; Vice President, Mrs. Stein; Treasurer, Miss Fitzpatrick; Financial Secretary, Mrs. Thompson; Recording Secretary, Miss Ryan; in charge of shooting, Miss Kirby.

A great deal of rivalry is likely to develop between the Lady Millers and Our Own Club, and before long a series of matches will probably be contested for the championship.

Runners Following the Trail.

The Pastime A. C. held their weekly cross-country run yesterday at Fort George. The run was over the long course, about eight miles. Among those out were Peter Hegelman, the professional runner; J. Lynch, B. Eggleston, J. Shirnan, J. J. McDermott, L. Brader, and others. They finished pretty well bunched in 43 minutes. The Pastimes intend to hold a series of handicap runs for a few weeks, when they will issue a challenge to run any cross-country team in America for a trophy.

The Spartan Harriers held a joint run with the Atalanta A. C., Union A. C., and Prospect Harriers yesterday. The distance was seven miles and the time 43 minutes. The course was through the stiffest country in Bay Ridge. Twenty-three men ran. They finished well bunched.

GOSSIP OF THE HORSES.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING OF THE JOCKEY CLUB TO-DAY.

The Virginia Jockey Club Will Petition for an Extension of Its License—Why Mr. Lawrence Has Gone Abroad at This Time—The Clubs in the Jockey Club Will in All Probability Run Off Their Stakes in 1895—St. Asaph's Card To-day.

The Jockey Club will hold an important meeting at its headquarters on Fifth Avenue to-day, when many matters of the gravest import to the turf will be discussed. A committee from the Virginia Jockey Club will be on hand to petition for an extension of the license granted to them. The Jockey Club, according to its agreement with the Western Turf Congress, does not recognize racing in the months of December, January, and February north of the thirty-seventh parallel. The promoters of the St. Asaph meeting hope to secure a two weeks' extension of time, as the weather in the vicinity of Washington is far from wintry in the early part of December; in fact, for a week past it has been more like Indian summer than anything else.

It is semi-officially announced that the Jockey Club authorities will refuse the petition of the Virginia Jockey Club, as they decline to violate their agreement with the Western Turf Congress. One member of the Jockey Club said recently: "It does not follow because the Western Turf Congress has broken many of its compacts with us, that we should turn around and not do as we agreed to do in every particular."

There will scarcely be an extension of the time granted the Virginia Jockey Club. They will reap a harvest by closing on Dec. 1 and opening on March 1, because all of the best horses will be withdrawn before the former date, and all will be ready to take part in the races of the spring circuit. With the good horses racing there next March and April, and all of the best of the race followers in attendance, the looking is bound to be heavy and the meeting will necessarily be most prosperous.

It has been persistently hinted that the Virginia Jockey Club would lull from the Jockey Club fold if it did not get what it wanted from the Virginia legislature in the matter of the legislative line. This is a wild rumor which probably had no foundation in fact, for even a madman could see where the Virginia Jockey Club is bound to prosper if it remains in the Jockey Club. If there is no racing in New York State in 1895, or if the season is limited, St. Asaph will be the Mecca of horsemen who want to keep within five or six hours of the metropolis.

There is no hope of learning what plan of action the Jockey Club has marked out for the racing season of 1895. It would be extremely unwise at the present moment to give the public the outcome of the deliberations of that body. That there will be racing every member of the Jockey Club avers is as certain as that the sun shines and the earth revolves. Able lawyers are finding plenty of food for study in the amendments to the Constitution. Opinions are numerous as to the effect the passage of the amendments will have upon the future of the turf. A majority are of the opinion that it will be a very severe blow at the breeding industry; one from which it will take years to recover. There is to be a great outpouring of trotting stock this week, and the public will decide whether the market value of the trotter and pacer has decreased or not. The men who got rid of their thoroughbreds at weanlings are congratulating themselves that they sold before the blow came, but they forget that they have another crop coming and still another lot due to arrive later on and bills to pay in the mean time.

Although it is announced that J. G. K. Lawrence, the President of the Coney Island Jockey Club and a member of the Jockey Club, has gone abroad for his health, it is generally understood that the real object of that gentleman's hurried trip to the Continent is a desire to consult with W. K. Vanderbilt, who owns a majority of the stock of the Coney Island Jockey Club. It was announced when the amendments to the Constitution were proposed that the Coney Island Jockey Club would run whether there was betting or not, and that it felt itself in duty bound to race for the stakes which closed for next year. It is more than likely that both the Brooklyn and New York clubs will be unable to run off their programmes, as all have a handsome surplus at their command. The fact that work is being pushed on the new mile course at Morris Park does not bear out the rumor that John A. Morris had capitulated.

The following is the programme for St. Asaph to-day:

H. O. HAVEMEYER WANTS ALIX.

Salisbury Sets the Price for the Queen of Trotters at $30,000.

The exhibition of Alix at the Horse Show last Saturday bids fair to result in the sale of the queen of trotters to a well-known New York horse fancier. H. O. Havemeyer was so impressed with the beauty and spirit of the wonderful mare when she made her bow to society at the Garden that he sent his agent to Monroe Salisbury shortly afterward to negotiate for her purchase. Mr. Salisbury priced her at $30,000. Dr. William Shepard later on was called in to examine Alix. The veterinarian's report was to the effect that the mare is as sound as a new milled dollar, in spite of her four years of campaigning, and it is said that negotiations are still pending.

Mr. Havemeyer now owns a number of famous harness horses, including Belle Vara, 2:08¾; Harrietta, 2:09¾, and Charley C., 2:14¼. It is rumored that even if the Alix deal is not consummated Salisbury will take Harrietta to California this winter and campaign her next season for Mr. Havemeyer. The neat little daughter of Alcyone is looked upon by nearly all turfmen as a second Alix. She pulled a driver weighing over 200 pounds when she gained her record of 2:09¾ in 1893.

Champion Harness Horses to Go at Fleetwood Park.

A special exhibition of the famous harness horses now in New York will take place at Fleetwood Park to-morrow, and with good weather a fine afternoon's sport will be afforded the followers of the trotters. Alix, 2:03¾, the beautiful queen of the turf, is to start against the track record, 2:06¾, made by Directum in 1893, and Directly, whose 2:07¾ is the fastest mark ever made by a two-year-old pacer, will give a similar exhibition against time. John R. Gentry, 2:03¾, the champion pacing stallion, is another of the stars that every horseman cares to see, for he is the tip of the talent as being the coming 2:00 pacer. A special race between Azote, 2:06¾, and Phœbe Wilkes, 2:08¼, is also on the card arranged.
