TERRORIZED AN AVENUE.

FOUR DRUNKEN YOUNG MEN HOLD UP A TRUCK.

They Persecute an Organ Grinder, but Are Finally Routed by the Display of a Revolver—Fined Only $3 When Arrested.

Four drunken young men made themselves conspicuous at Fifty-second street and Eleventh avenue yesterday morning. Drunken young men are not uncommon sights in that neighborhood, but the fact that these particular young men were strangers to those living thereabouts and made things lively while they were around, rendered them especially conspicuous. They signalized their entrance on the block by overturning all the garbage receptacles in sight, frightening all the children and women in the street. They found a big cart wheel in front of a wheelwright's shop, and amused themselves by rolling it around the sidewalk. There was too much exertion in doing this, so they dropped the wheel to hunt an inoffensive canvasser with a valise who happened around. They chased him for half a block, and he finally escaped by darting into a hall and locking the door after him. The quartet now ruled the block, and although they did not venture into any of the stores they created havoc on the outside. The young men had evidently read the stories about the two Westerners who terrorized a Prince street saloon by shooting revolvers, so they proceeded to have fun in real cowboy style.

A two-horse truck driven by a sturdy driver, passed through the block. It was unloaded and was going at a good rate of speed, but this did not prevent the young men from holding it up. One of them grabbed hold of the bridle of one of the horses and brought the team to a halt. The driver did not have a whip, and simply swore, while the young highwaymen grinned at him. When the driver dropped his reins and got down from the truck to protect his team, the other three young men hopped up on the truck. The young man who held up the team also jumped on the truck as soon as the driver left it. There was no policeman in sight, and when the driver tried to get back on the truck the quartet would not let him, and one of them succeeded in getting hold of the reins, which he had thrown across the horses' backs. The driver came near losing his team then, but managed to catch the bridles, and the team would not move for all the quartet.

A crowd gathered around, and the driver made frantic appeals to some of the spectators to get a policeman, but they merely looked on and enjoyed his discomfiture. Finally the driver made a motion as if to draw a revolver, and the four young men hustled off the truck. The driver then took possession and drove off down the street for a policeman. He evidently did not get one, for he did not return. The four young men disappeared for a while then, and apparently went off to get a fresh supply of liquor.

They made their appearance again in the afternoon and began to look for more victims. An Italian organ grinder who did not know the danger he braved turned into Fifty-second street from Eleventh avenue. The young men at first moment were enjoying themselves by swinging their coats around their heads and swatting each other with them. They soon stopped this when the organ grinder turned up. He planted his organ in front of one of the tenements and began to grind out his repertoire. The quartet charged down on him, and he was captured at the first charge. One of the captors ordered him to play faster. The Italian swung the handle of his organ around like a ventilator on a windy day, but the quartet soon tired of this.

"Play 'Sweet Marie,'" demanded one, scowling at the organ grinder and assuming a threatening attitude.

"I no gotta him," replied the Italian pleadingly.

"Why haven't you?"

"Because 'Sweeta Marie' is wan' chesanut now."

The Italian was not a late arrival, and he reasoned probably that, by using a little diplomacy, he might escape. But his rejoinder did not give him any relief.

"Turn th' crank the other way," commanded another of his captors.

"Oh, no, dat breaka da machine," he protested.

"Turn it, d'ye hear?"

"No!" exclaimed the Italian, firmly, and he moved off a few paces. He saw that there was going to be trouble and intended to get out if possible without as little damage as he could. Suddenly one of the gang grabbed the organ and turned it upside down, while another dumped a can of ashes over the Italian's head. The organ grinder had drawn his stick, but the grave of the gang was too sudden for him, and he was overwhelmed before he had time to think. When he extricated himself from the garbage, he picked up his organ and ran off, glad enough to get away with his life. The residents of the block enjoyed this apparently, for, as before, nobody attempted to interfere, and the policeman still did not appear.

The patient little pony owned by Patrick Hollywood, a boss truckman, of 539 West Fifty-second street, next attracted the notice of the gang. Hollywood is accustomed to leaving his pony and buggy in front of his home while he takes his dinner. The gang got a rope and each tried his hand at lassoing the pony. They succeeded in annoying the animal to such an extent that Mrs. Hollywood heard the noise and saw the men about to take possession of the buggy. She ran out and called her husband. Mr. Hollywood, grabbing his revolver, went to the rescue in a jiffy. When he reached the street one of the quartet was sitting in the buggy and the others were trying to climb in. Hollywood ordered them out, and, when they attempted to parley with him, told them plainly that if they did not get out he would make some of them ill. Then the pony was started off, but Hollywood was alert and caught the animal after it had gone a few yards. He displayed his revolver then, and the gang made off.

Hollywood followed them to Tenth avenue, where he explained the circumstances to Policeman Duffy. Another policeman joined Duffy, and, after a chase, they succeeded in capturing three of the gang. At the Yorkville Police Court they said they were Michael Curran, 21 years old, of 449 West Forty-eighth street; Isidore Lights, 23 years old, of 516 Canal street, and Cornelius J. Bulkeley, 23, of 703 Ninth avenue. Hollywood charged them at first with attempting to steal his pony and buggy, but withdrew the charge presently, saying he did not think they really intended to make off with it, but had acted in a spirit of mischief. Justice Welde did not know the extent of the young desperadoes' mischief and let them off with a fine of $3 each. They did not have the money, and will spend three days in jail as a result of their misconduct.

DUMPING COMPANY'S DEMANDS.

Board of Estimate Considers Them Exorbitant—A Special Committee Appointed.

At a meeting of the Board of Estimate yesterday Commissioner Andrews of the Street Cleaning Department said the Harney Dumping Company demanded $30 a day for the use of their scows. The city is now paying $23 a day. It was declared that the increase was demanded to force the city to buy the scows for $340,000, when, according to the affidavits made by the company to the Tax Commissioners, their value is far less. Commissioner Andrews said that in 1882, '83, and '84 the same scows were rented for $15 a day. Since then the company has been steadily raising the price. The Commissioner said he had protested against the proposed increase in the rental, and submitted the protest in writing.

President Barker of the Tax Department, Comptroller Fitch, and the Mayor protested that the city should not be forced to accede to such demands. Mayor Gilroy said that the city should own its own scows. Mr. Andrews said there were no other boats which could be employed. He read a typewritten statement, in which he recommended that deep-sea dumping be abandoned and Hiker's Island be used as soon as the existing injunction was dissolved. He recommended that the city own its own plant and carry out the suggestions made by the Mayor's Advisory Committee in relation to the separation of garbage and ashes.

Mayor Gilroy said he was heartily in favor of the suggestions of the Advisory Committee. Commissioner Andrews said that the injunction against using Hiker's Island had put the city to an expense of from $80,000 to $100,000. Mayor Gilroy moved that a committee consisting of Comptroller Fitch, President Barker, and Corporation Counsel Clark be appointed to look into the demand of the Harney Dumping Company, the report of the Advisory Committee, and Commissioner Andrews's suggestions. The committee was accordingly appointed.

The Mayor announced that the consideration of the final estimates would be begun on Dec. 19. On that day the Mayoralty, Mayor's Marshal office, Common Council, Parks, Public Works, and Fire departments would be taken up. On Dec. 20 Charities and Correction, Health, Street Cleaning, and others would be considered.

The request for $48,000 for the completion of Macomb's Dam Bridge was presented by the Park Department. President Barker took the engineers to task for not having the work completed on time. Engineer Boller said the bridge would be opened, he thought, on Jan. 1.

Mad His Manager Arrested.

Mrs. Fannie Saperston of Morris street and Fifteenth avenue, Newark, was arrested yesterday morning charged with embezzling $1,000 from E. H. Beck of 140 East Fifty-eighth street, this city. Beck owns a clothing store at 377½ Springfield avenue, Newark, and Mrs. Saperston was his manager. The woman was held in default of $1,500 bail.

FOR THE REBELS OF '76.

The Sons of the Revolution Preparing to Acquire a Permanent Home.

The annual meeting of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution, held at Fraunce's Tavern, at Broad and Pearl streets, yesterday afternoon, was an occasion of unusual interest to the sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons of the soldiers of '76. The attendance crowded the old room where Gen. Washington took leave of his officers after the British evacuation. President Frederick S. Tallmadge conducted the deliberations with skill and good humor until the lunch was announced as ready, when a motion by Mr. Valentine of Westchester county to amend the by-laws was sufficient to turn the tide against the President, and there was a rush for the buffet.

The principal business of the day was the election of officers, and the ticket following was elected by a vote of 167, with 10 scattering votes:

President, Frederick Samuel Tallmadge, who has been President for ten years; Vice-President, William Gaston Hamilton, to succeed Mr. James Mortimer Montgomery, whom ill health has forced to resign these duties; Secretary, Thomas E. Vermilye Smith; Treasurer, Arthur Melvin Hatch; Registrar, Charles Isham; Chaplain, the Rev. Brockholst Morgan; managers, John Lawrence, Benjamin Douglas Silliman, Charles Augustus Schermerhorn, Asa Bird Gardiner, Charles Augustus Peabody, Jr., Henry Wyckoff Le Roy, John Hone, Charles Hornblower Woodruff, William Gayer Dominick, Frederick Clarkson, and John Taylor Terry, Jr.

The various annual reports were read, the Treasurer showing a balance on the right side with no liabilities. It was reported that the branches of the national society were now organized in twenty-four States, and that the New York society had added about 250 new members during the year.

The Rev. Brockholst Morgan reported that arrangements had been made for services in commemoration of Washington's Birthday on Sunday, Feb. 24, at the Brick Church in Fifth avenue. The Rev. Dr. Henry J. Van Dyke will preach the sermon.

The Committee on Tablets reported that they had located the actual spot of Nathan Hale's execution at about the corner of Sixty-sixth street and Lexington avenue, on the site now covered by the Seventh Regiment armory, and a tablet will be placed there eventually.

President Tallmadge, in his address, congratulated the society upon its manifest prosperity and touched upon the long-considered subject of providing a permanent home for the society in New York city, a place where ceremonial meetings could be held and where relics of the Revolution could be safely deposited and preserved.

This suggestion led to a very general and spirited discussion, which revealed an earnest desire on the part of the members present to have a local habitation, which should perhaps develop into a club house. It was suggested that a house be bought and fitted up and leased to the society, that a place could then be had for more frequent meetings and at less expense than at present. A committee was finally appointed to formulate a plan and to report at the annual banquet of the society at Delmonico's on Washington's Birthday.

The New Brooklyn association of the Sons of the Revolution will hold its annual dinner on next Monday night at the Brooklyn Club, corner of Remsen and Clinton streets.

COLUMBIA COLLEGE LIBRARY.

The First Building to be Erected on the University's New Site.

The trustees of Columbia College, at their regular monthly meeting yesterday, decided that the library should be the first building erected on the future site of the university, and that the stone used in its construction should be buff Indiana limestone. It was also decided that all the other buildings should be built either of Indiana limestone throughout, or part of that stone and part of brick.

The trustees for the erection of buildings had assigned spaces for the following schools: School of Arts, School of Natural Science, School of Engineering and Architecture, and the School of Chemistry and Metallurgy.

The trustees also decided to build among the first of the new structures that part of the building containing the gymnasium, the academic theatre, and the dining hall.

As soon as the grading of 116th street is completed, the Committee on Buildings and Grounds will have the entire site enclosed by an iron fence, and will also proceed to grade the South court, which is directly in front of the library building.

President Seth Low announced that money had been deposited for the erection of any two faculty buildings decided on other than the library.

Reed's Parliamentary Rules.

Each member of the Brooklyn Board of Aldermen found a copy of Reed's Parliamentary Rules on his desk yesterday. This will be the authority hereafter in the decision of all questions not determined by the existing rules.

MONDAY, Dec. 3.

To-day's stock market consisted almost entirely of trading in Sugar Refining, Gas, and two or three of the Granger shares. The remainder of the list was comparatively neglected. Sugar Refining supplied nearly half of the total transactions. The market for it was strong during the first hour, on the resumption of operations by a number of the company's refineries that were shut down the day before Thanksgiving. This circumstance strengthened the conviction of the Street, that recent publications of the pessimistic views expressed by the President of the company were not entirely accidental or without motive. The fact remains, however, that the profits of the industry have been materially reduced, and the recommendation contained in the President's message, that the differential duty on refined sugars be abolished, started a fresh selling movement in the stock that carried the price down 4 points from the highest figures recorded, and left it 2⅝ ⅌ cent. lower than on Saturday.

Heavy selling of Chicago Gas was attributed to a speculative interest that has been active in the market for the stock for a long time past. The market for it was also affected to an extent by the break in Sugar Refining. The Granger stocks, particularly Northwestern, were strong, chiefly on covering of shorts. One brokerage house that enjoys the patronage of the largest operator on the short side of the market bought 10,000 shares of Northwestern in the early dealings. The stock closed at the highest price recorded for it, and at a net advance of 1⅝ ⅌ cent. The only other noteworthy net fluctuation was a decline of 1⅛ ⅌ cent. in Pacific Mail, on very light transactions. The Street endeavored to construe the President's message as an argument in favor of a better market; but the chances are that before the close of business to-morrow the recommendations of the Administration relative to currency reform and financial legislation generally will have expended their force as a factor in the stock market. They served the purpose this afternoon of scaring a few operators for short account into closing their contracts, and in consequence the closing was strong.
