THE PASTOR LOST SELF-CONTROL.

A Scene in a Flatbush Church for Which He Has Apologized.

In the old Dutch Reformed Church in Flatbush on Thursday evening there was a Sunday school Christmas entertainment. The Rev. Dr. C. L. Wells, the pastor of the church; Lawyer Edgar Bergen, the superintendent of the Sunday school, and a few leading members of the church had seats on the platform. The exercises went along smoothly until the Perry brothers performed a mandolin and guitar duet. This proved so acceptable that there was a loud demand for an encore all over the church. While the applause was still kept up, the Rev. Dr. Wells and Superintendent Bergen were seen to be in an animated controversy, the pastor's manner being especially demonstrative. Finally Dr. Wells, leaving Mr. Bergen's side, arose and announced:

"Encores will not be allowed."

Mr. Bergen also jumped up and said: "I am superintendent, and I'll have something to say about that."

"Well," said Dr. Wells, interrupting and exhibiting much feeling, "I am pastor of this church, and as such I rule over both church and Sunday school."

Mr. Bergen then beckoned to the Perry brothers to come forward and respond to the encore, and both brothers started for the platform amid the plaudits of the audience, which was unmistakably opposed to the action of the pastor. Just as one of the brothers was ascending the platform Dr. Wells rushed forward and, raising both hands, motioned him back. At this critical point Mr. Bergen came forward and requested the brothers to wait until their turn came in the second part of the programme. He also apologized to them for the treatment they had received. The exercises were then continued without futher interruption, but there was much suppressed excitement, and many persons left before the close of the entertainment.

The congregation is one of the most old-fashioned, as well as fashionable, in Brooklyn, and this is probably the only conspicuously unpleasant incident which has occurred in the church in the memory of the oldest member. Yesterday Mr. Bergen said:

"The Perry brothers felt insulted and determined to present themselves to the audience, notwithstanding the prohibition of the pastor. I sustained them. When they attempted to go before the audience the pastor pushed one of them away."

Dr. Wells regretted his action as soon as he reached home, for before going to bed he sent this apology to Superintendent Bergen:

"MY DEAR MR. BERGEN: I regret more than I can express that which happened last evening. You were right, and I was wrong. In a way unaccountable to myself, as I come to think it over, I lost self-control. It is true that I have been under a great nervous and mental strain for several weeks, but that is no excuse. In your after conduct you exhibited a truly noble and Christian spirit. I wish to make the apology to you as complete and full as possible. I wish it could be as public as the act. You are at liberty to show this letter to any one as the full and complete vindication of yourself. I trust that in future pleasant relations may be maintained between us, and that there will never be any such clashing again. I am sure we both have the same end in view. I am yours in fellowship, C. L. WELLS."

The trouble will probably be forgotten so far as the pastor, the superintendent, and the congregation are concerned.

"SHIPPING RECORD" FOR 1896.

It Contains as in Former Years a Full List of American and Foreign Vessels.

The Record of American and Foreign Shipping, which was established in 1867 by the American Shipmasters' Association of New York, is published for 1896, and is accompanied already by Supplement No. 1, bearing date Dec. 20, 1895. As usual the Record, in binding, typography, and arrangement, is substantial, clear, and convenient. In the main list vessels are catalogued by their names as they read, beginning with A. A. Rowe. But there is an index to compound names, arranged alphabetically as to last name, to be of service when the initial is unknown or not remembered. There is a list of vessels the names of which have been changed, giving the old and new names, and the tonnage and rig. There is a separate list of the names and addresses of owners of vessels. There is also an enumeration of shipbuilders, dry docks, and marine railways, and of constructors of marine machinery and boilers throughout the United States. The Record also contains a list of representatives of marine underwriters, names of persons in port and places throughout the world representing various important Boards or organizations of marine underwriters. There is at the end a supplement of blank pages, headed and ruled, for new vessels, and at the beginning of the book is a directory of agents and surveyors for the Record all over the world.

Rules for the classification of wooden vessels, for the construction and classification of iron and steel vessels, and for the construction, survey, and classification of machinery and boilers for steam vessels, with numerous diagrams, are among the varied information compacted within its thousand filled pages. The Record is issued only to subscribers.

Besides its value as a reference work to the great interests concerned in the shipping industry the Record might be of service to the namer of rare horses, who would find in the names Zwijger and Ungdoms Venner; to girls who want to "take" odd names, such as Omba, Orealla, Ossuna and Lusitania; or to persons in need of lingual gymnastics, who might practise on Cadwgan or Chwnshan.

PARSONS ON RAPID TRANSIT.

The Engineer Questioned Regarding Possible Weak Points in His Plans.

The special Commission appointed by the Supreme Court to take testimony in regard to the plans approved by the Rapid Transit Commissioners for the underground railway met again yesterday. Chief Engineer Parsons resumed the witness stand and was cross-examined by J. Archibald Murray, the counsel for the protesting property owners. Mr. Parsons reiterated his oft-repeated statement that the total cost of construction in accordance with the plans approved would not exceed $64,000,000. When asked what provisions had been made for the construction of the road under the Grand Central Station, Mr. Parsons said:

"It will be necessary to occupy part of the basement. The building will be underpinned and supported by stone columns and heavy iron girders."

"Have you made provisions as to the probable cost of the invasion of the Grand Central Station?"

"Yes, sir; exclusive of compensation for property, the entire work will cost, as I have reckoned it, almost $300,000."

Lawyer Zabriskie here took a hand and cross-examined the witness as to the ventilation of the tunnel. Mr. Parsons said that in his opinion no artificial ventilation would be necessary. There would be large air openings at each station, and the motion of the trains would help to keep the air pure.

Questioned about the accidents which might result if through the derailing of an express train going at the rate of 50 or 60 miles an hour, Mr. Parsons said that, owing to the smooth, hard roadbed, the train would continue running without serious injury until brought to a stop. Mr. Parsons also said that even if the columns of the tunnel were knocked away by a falling rock from a train the roof of the tunnel was to be constructed in such manner that it would not give way, but would be supported by the girders.

An adjournment was taken until this morning.

Abbott a Republican by Mandamus.

William Abbott, who was a member of the Republican organization in the Fifth Assembly district until last election, when he bolted the Assembly nomination, went to the Supreme Court yesterday and asked Judge Beekman for a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel the County Committee to reinstate him. It had put him out when he bolted. Henry W. Mayer, who appeared for the County Committee, said that they were always glad to have Republicans in the fold, and that he would not object to Mr. Abbott getting his order. It was thereupon granted by the Judge.

That Costly Sea Beach Railroad Disaster.

August Meidling, Jr., has begun suit in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn against the Sea Beach Railroad Company for $50,000 damages for injuries received in the collision on the road on Labor Day, and yesterday Justice Gaynor granted an application for the appointment of a Commission to examine the plaintiff as to the extent of his injuries. This is one of the two score or more suits growing out of the disaster.

You've worn overcoats, made from smooth cloths—melton and kersey—until fashion had to suggest rough goods

To meet fashion's suggestion, here's a twilled worsted; one of the most attractive overcoats we have; so warm that it's lined with mohair serge rather than wool—$28; Oxford and black.

Not a weak spot in our overcoat stock so far as we know.
