DEATH OF ADMIRAL WALKE

HIS SERVICES IN THE MEXICAN AND THE CIVIL WAR.

Commended for the Way He Covered the Retirement of Grant's Troops to the Transports After the Battle of Belmont—Fondness for Sketching and Painting.

Rear Admiral Henry Walke died a few minutes after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, of heart failure, at his home, 492 Third street, Brooklyn. He was prostrated with an attack of grip on Tuesday last, and owing to the heart weakness which accompanied the malady he failed rapidly. It was the only serious illness from which he had ever suffered.

He belonged to an old English family which settled in Virginia in 1687. He was born on his father's plantation on the Lynhavan River eighty-seven years ago. His father, Anthony Walke, was a fellow student of John C. Calhoun at Yale College, and he served in the Assembly and Senate in Virginia. Henry was taken to Ohio when quite young, and was schoolmate with William Allen and Allen G. Thurman at Chillicothe Academy. He received his appointment as midshipman in 1827, and his first service was on the frigate Alert, under Lieutenant-Commander Farragut. Later he was attached to the Natchez and the Ontario. During the Mexican war he was the executive officer on the bomb brig Vesuvius, and was present at the surrender of Vera Cruz.

In the civil war he had charge of the gunboats Taylor and Lexington in the battle of Belmont, and received honorable mention from Gen. Grant for his services in protecting the reembarking of the army on the transports. He commanded the gunboat Carondolet, which held the foremost position in the line at the battle of Fort Henry. In the operations against Island No. 10 he ran the gauntlet of the batteries with the Carondolet amid a rain of shot and shell, but without losing a man.

He was promoted to a Captaincy in 1862, became Commodore in 1866, and Rear Admiral in 1870. He retired in 1871, being the first officer of his rank to retire voluntarily from the active list for the benefit of the junior officers.

Ever since his retirement he had taken a warm interest in the service, and has watched with pride the growth of the navy. He was an unswerving supporter of the Monroe doctrine. He loved to paint, and after his retirement much of his time was spent in reproducing on canvas the sketches he had made in his extended travels by land and sea. He leaves a valuable collection of relics and mementos.

He was a member of Rankin Post 10, G. A. R., and until recent years he marched with his comrades in the Memorial Day parades. He leaves a widow, two sons, and two daughters.

TAXES ON LIQUORS.

More Than $200,000,000 Believed to Be Collected in the United States Yearly.

There are few Governments, notwithstanding the objections urged in some countries to the justice, desirability, or even the abstract morality of such a tax, which do not derive a large share of their revenue from taxes imposed upon liquor making, liquor selling, or liquor drinking. The highest statistical authority puts the present annual revenue of all Governments from liquor taxes of all sorts at $1,000,000,000. These are imposed in various ways—tax on production, tax on exportation, a tax on sale or excise tax, a tax on importation, and a tax on storage or bonded fax.

By these various methods Great Britain raises in a year $150,000,000 from taxes on liquor, Russia nearly as much, the United States a little more, France $100,000,000 a year, Germany $75,000,000, and Holland, a small country, but one having extensive liquor interests, $15,000,000. The total revenue in the United States from liquor is usually given at $200,000,000 a year, but this sum is probably below rather than above the correct figures. The United States Government received in 1895, through the Internal Revenue Bureau, from taxes on spirits and from distillers and retail liquor dealers, $79,862,627, exclusive of $30,000,000 collected from the manufacture of ales, beer, and porter, and brewers and retail dealers. These two items make collectively $110,000,000, but constitute only a fraction of the Government's revenue from liquor and spirits, for there were in addition the customs duties imposed upon foreign spirits imported into the United States amounting to between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. Then there were the excise taxes imposed in the several localities, and these local taxes exceed in a year $30,000,000, though there is no definite and positive way of giving the figures in detail, as the rate as well as the number of such licenses varies from time to time. One fact may be stated without apprehension of error, and that is that the public revenue from this source increases each year—it never goes backward.

New York city pays at the present time, for excise licenses of all sorts, $1,700,000, exclusive of the amount collected in districts for the benefit of the United States Government. Even before the present era of extreme high license in Massachusetts cities, the gross excise revenue of that State was $2,500,000, and under the Dow law in Ohio the total collections from liquor licenses in a year amount to nearly $3,000,000, or about 10 per cent. of the total excise tax of the country, which is $30,000,000.

The three items—internal revenue tax, customs tax on imported liquors, and local excise tax—do not exhaust the sources of public revenue from the liquor traffic, for, in addition, there is imposed in every locality a real estate tax on the property of brewers and distillers, and this additional item added to the others makes undoubtedly the total in excess of $200,000,000. It is a somewhat peculiar fact, which some temperance agitators do not seem to be desirous of taking seriously into account, that in Italy, where wine is produced with the least effort and seems to be most extensively drunk, the Governmental revenue from the liquor trade is not high, amounting to only $60,000,000 for the entire kingdom, and in Spain, also a wine-producing and wine-consuming country, with a population of about half that of Italy, the revenue from excise taxes is about $35,000,000 a year. In Sweden the excise tax is very heavy. In the State of Iowa recently a tax on drinkers has been contrived.

Billiards.

The "short stop" billiard tourney of the aspiring young billiard cracks of Brooklyn will open at Maurice Daly's Brooklyn Assembly rooms to-night, when Frank Gardner, brother to Ed Gardner of the Possale A. C., at scratch, 200 points, will play F. Houston, handicapped at 160, and J. Scelly, with 170 points handicap, will cross cues with F. Hart, with 180 points handicap. Four games will be played every day. The "short stops" are rooters for fair, and a great deal of fun and enjoyment are looked for in the battle for the three prizes.

Thomas F. Gallagher, the winner of the recent "short stop" professional tourney at Chicago, has gone to Kansas City, where he expects to get a match with George Sutton, the Canadian expert.

The interscholastic contests that are being held from time to time in the gymnasium of the New M. A. C. are causing widespread interest among the schoolboys. The games seem to develop a good many young athletes, who would not otherwise have a chance to show what is in them. The usual amount of interest is also being manifested in the coming big meet to be held under the auspices of that club. The New York Interscholastic A. A. has adopted a new constitution, with most of the objectionable features contained in the old one eliminated. The principal changes follow:

MILLIONS INVESTED IN ATHLETICS.

Interesting Facts and Figures Unearthed by the A. A. U. Census.

The long-promised census of the Amateur Athletic Union has at length been made public, and while it only partially covers the area contemplated, the facts set forth bear gratifying testimony to America's athletic strength. Without counting the two big organizations of Boston and New York and several others which failed to report, sixty-five clubs are shown to have an aggregate membership of 22,180, of whom 8,317 are actively engaged in athletics. The value of property involved amounts to $2,619,595, and the athletic appliances in use are estimated at $72,930. The Southern, Central, and Atlantic associations submitted very complete returns, while the Metropolitan, New England, Pacific, and Pacific Northwest associations submitted only partial reports or none at all. Secretary Sullivan summarizes the data as follows:

The Metropolitan Association at the date of the annual meeting in 1895 had a membership of thirty-eight clubs. Only thirteen of these made any report, and only nine of these thirteen made a return as to value of property owned.

These thirteen clubs claim an aggregate membership of 9,850, of which number 1,544 are actively engaged in athletics.

The value of property owned by nine of these clubs is stated at $259,400, with athletic apparatus valued at $8,805.

The Atlantic Association made complete returns from its thirty one club members, which show an aggregate membership of 7,802, of whom 2,275 are actively engaged in athletics, 105 in fencing, 645 in rowing, and 21 in gymnastics; eighteen instructors and seventeen trainers are employed; eighty-nine class sessions for athletic instruction are held every week, with an average attendance of 612; five clubs maintain a school of physical education for children; twenty six clubs have a gymnasium, twenty-five athlete grounds, twenty-five have a club house. The total valuation of property is stated at $613,595. The athletic apparatus is returned at $20,024.

The newly formed Southern Association returned a full account of its seven clubs, with a total membership of 5,101, of whom 1,880 follow athletics actively. There is a good proportion of cyclists, rowers, and oarsmen. Five clubs employ twelve instructors and four trainers. All seven clubs have a gymnasium and club house; one has no track. The total property owned by seven clubs is returned at $1,425,000 and athletic apparatus is valued at $22,000. Forty six class sessions for athletic instruction are held weekly, with an average attendance of 275.

Go-sip of the Courts.

Tom Holmes, the irrepressible "Red Hook Artist," is among the most industrious of "club days" devotees at present. Like Tommy Lynam he never seems to find any difficulty in keeping up condition.

Billy Courtney, the past master of scientific handball, was greatly impressed with the form shown at the Brooklyn Club's court by Keegan of Chicago. He classes the big Western fireman very highly in the present generation of experts.

James Dunne, Jr., the popular amateur champion, has quite conquered the slight illness which prompted him to come home for a rest. He is as "fit as a fiddle" once more and will give some of the experts a warning up at the Brooklyn Club's court during the mid-week reunions.

Champion Phil Casey strained the back tendons of one of his legs recently and his lively "club day" match did not improve matters. His bruised hand also continues to handicap him. Ex-Alderman Dunne's good right is also under suspicion, but the big Chicago match is still on and the Brooklyn pair have no fear of the result.

Billy Schmidt and Jerry McMahon had another lively tussle for points at the Brooklyn Court on "club day." The "German student" won the rubber decisively, but was hopelessly outpointed later on by Eddie Lawlor, the Williamsburgh boy being only one ace shy of scoring the full complement of aces for the three games. A match between Lawlor and McMahon should be in order.

James Fitzgerald, the Irish champion, is completing preparations to sail for this country about the end of the month. He paid a farewell visit to the Kingsbury court on Feb. 23, and figured in a doubles match of best five in nine games with Pat Corbey as partner. The opposing pair were Denis Horan and Stephen Scannell. A great gathering of handball lovers, including many Catholic clergymen, enjoyed the play. The champion and partner won as follows: 21—9, 21—14, 18—21, 20—21, 19—21, 21—20, 21—17, 21—18. The service was from the ace line, according to THE SUN'S rules. In speaking of the contest local critics said: "It resulted in more dodging than could otherwise have been witnessed, and gave better value to the spectators." Fitzgerald will probably receive a national testimonial prior to his departure from Ireland.

WHEELING.

The Drives and Paths Filled with Riders—Cyclists' Federation Meeting.

The outdoor cycling season opened auspiciously yesterday, the weather being admirably suited to bicycle riding. Members of the Manhattan, Riverside, Greenwich, New York A. C., Tourist, and Yorkville wheelmen were noticed in Central Park. A party of members of the Harlem Wheelmen visited Riverdale, it being the occasion of their initial club run of the year. The Coney Island path was crowded with riders. Runs were taken to Lake Hopatcong, Bath Beach, Coney Island, and to Capt. Stillwell's, at Gravesend Bay, by members of the Brooklyn, Long Island, Kings County, Crescent A. C., and South Brooklyn wheelmen.

The meeting of the Cyclists' Federation of New York did not adjourn until a late hour on Saturday night. The sentiment of the meeting seemed to be overw
