A MASTODON AMONG LIBELS

MORE COLD-BLOODED CRIME THAT MUST STOP, SAYS THE MAJOR.

An Indictment Calculated to Bring Tears to Any Man's Eyes—The Holts and Dean Butler Give Bail for Libelling Jos. J. Little of the Tammany Board of Education.

That desperate trio, Prof. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, editor of the Educational Review, and Henry and Charles Holt, who publish the Review, marched to the Criminal Courts building yesterday and gave bonds to appear in court to-morrow to answer the indictment for libel found against them on complaint of Joseph J. Little, President of the Board of Education. They were accompanied by lawyers and bondsmen, and after fifteen minutes in the District Attorney's office, under the stony glare of the public prosecutor's eyes, they went away again.

As related in THE SUN yesterday, the basis of the charges of libel is an article in the February number of the Educational Review, entitled "Tammany in the Saddle." This article has been carefully dissected by the District Attorney, presumably with the assistance of Mr. Little, for attached to the complaint is a letter from Major Gardiner to the latter in which he asks Mr. Little for his views on what is meant in the editorial by "mastodon," "antediluvian," "reactionary policy," "Jasper's manipulation by indirection" and other phrases independent of "cohesive power of public plunder," "which speaks for itself."

Major Gardiner, in the indictment, deals first with the reference in the alleged libellous article to President Little as "that fine old educational mastodon." He interprets it as "meaning that the said Joseph J. Little in, upon and so far as respected educational matters and questions was, and his actions and opinions thereon were, crude, primitive, obsolete and improper, inadapted to the conditions in, and the educational necessities of, the said city, hurtful and dangerous to its educational interests and opposed to recognized and established principles and laws governing public instruction."

Right here it might be interesting to note for comparison the "Century Dictionary's" definition of mastodon, eliminating the qualifying adjective:

"An extinct proboscidean quadruped of the family elephantidæ and sub-family, mastodontidæ."

Major Gardiner next deals with the phrase "Tammany's President of Tammany's new School Board," which he dissects as follows:

"Meaning that the said Joseph J. Little, in entering upon and discharging the duties of his office, did not do so in the public interest, but did so to subserve and promote the interests of a certain political party and organization known commonly as Tammany Hall, and existing in the county of New York."

Continuing, the learned District Attorney takes up next the statement "He is supported by two other representative Tammanyites, Commissioners Livingston and Moriarty, which he interprets as follows:

"Meaning that all three are * * * ill-adapted to conditions in and educational necessities of the said city, dangerous to its educational interests," and so on, in the same language used in the opening paragraph of the indictment. Next, the line, "but some of the other men named by Mayor Van Wyck belong to a better and higher order of citizenship," is interpreted as:

"Meaning that the said Joseph J. Little and Commissioners Livingston and Moriarty were of an inferior and low order of citizenship."

Major Gardiner next deals with this paragraph of the article: "In consequence we predict an early rift in Tammany's pet lute, for Commissioners O'Brien, Van Hoesen, Kittel and Davis are not men who can be held to a reactionary policy indefinitely, and they are not so easily impressed as are some others by the cohesive power of public plunder." Of this the Major says in the indictment:

"Meaning that the said Joseph J. Little was a reactionary, to wit, a person who did and would check, undo and reverse the principles and laws governing primary education and public instruction and whose policy it was to do so, and meaning of Commissioners Livingston and Moriarty that they are influenced, controlled and swayed, as are some others, meaning the said Joseph J. Little."

Of the "cohesive power of public plunder," the indictment says: "Meaning that the said Joseph J. Little and others * * * were not then and there honestly and faithfully acting and performing the duties of their * * * public offices and that the opinion and action of the said Joseph J. Little, that high schools should not be established * * * with money * * * set apart for the purposes of primary education was but a mere cover, blind and device of his * * * to secure and procure to themselves the money * * * for the purposes of plunder and to misapply said money * * * defrauding the said city of New York, to the purpose of securing * * * personal and pecuniary gain to the said Joseph J. Little and others, and that they were combined and had conspired unlawfully to so misapply the said money."

The line devoted to Superintendent Jasper, which runs: "Who revels in manipulation by indirection," is thus defined:

"Meaning by indirection and unfaithful action * * * and not in a straightforward, fair or open manner, but by equivocal means."

Of the line, Superintendent Jasper "will speak to the world through Commissioner Little," the indictment says:

"Meaning that the said Jasper, being a person who manipulates by indirection, the said Joseph J. Little, then and there knowing the same, was and would be a party to such manipulation and indirection and that he would make it possible for the said Jasper to manipulate by indirection."

Finally, the Major interprets this passage:

"Meanwhile the order of the day will be attacks on high schools and higher education generally, meaning that for the purpose of the conspiracy * * * and for the personal and pecuniary gain of the said Joseph J. Little and others, he and they would attack high schools and higher education and would withhold and not permit to be applied for such purposes the money * * * set apart * * * for purposes of primary education, on 'fads,' on 'imported teachers' and other devices for letting children on in the world, meaning that the said Joseph J. Little and others in furtherance of a conspiracy * * * and for personal and pecuniary gain * * * did and would prevent and interfere with children to acquire a higher education and get on in the world."

All of which, according to Major Gardiner, is against the peace of the people of the State of New York and their dignity.

Major Gardiner didn't get in all he wanted to say in the indictment, so he made a speech to the reporters yesterday afternoon.

"I have never handled a case which appeals to me as this one does," he said. "The article is unquestionably libellous and I have made up my mind that such libels must stop. So must cold-blooded poisoning! Mr. Little is a gentleman. He has represented a district in Congress and is a veteran of the Seventh Regiment. This article refers to him as a member of Tammany Hall, but I do not know whether this is true or not. At any rate, he is a gentleman, and this article which has been circulated all over the country has grieved him very much.

"Mr. Little is just the kind of a man who should be protected from such attacks. He gives his time and labor to the city without compensation and he is entitled to protection. He'll get it, too, from this office. You can write all the abusive things you want to about me, but I want men like Mr. Little let alone. It is scandalous to make such attacks on him."

Major Gardiner's only explanation of why he had again broken his rule and the recommendation of the courts by taking the case to the Grand Jury before a City Magistrate had had a chance to dismiss it was that "a public official was concerned" and "I thought it best."

The Holts and Prof. Butler, with their lawyers, John D. Lindsay and John B. Pine, read the indictment with eyes dimmed by laughter. For the Holts, Mr. Lindsay gave out the following, which he said, covered all that his clients wanted to say just now:

"The paragraph which follows, and which will appear in the April number of the Educational Review, the first in which any mention was made of the matter, was put in type several weeks ago and was sent to Mr. Little last week before it appeared before the Grand Jury:

"We are assured that school Commissioner Little took offence at the reference to him made in the Review February in commenting upon the recent Tammany Hall to the control of the New York Board of Education. We regret this, as the article was not in Mr. Little's mind obviously particular one, and we think a very true one, as well as the direct outcome of his educational views were those of a long ago. Mr. Little's probity has never, to our knowledge, been questioned. It certainly has never been questioned to us."

Policemen Can't Ride Free on Staten Island Electric Road.

The New York and Staten Island Electric Company, which operates the Staten Island Electric Railroad, issued an order yesterday withdrawing from policemen the privilege of riding free on the railroad. Since the opening of the road, three years ago, this is the first order of this nature which has been issued. It is alleged that the city's failure to pay street lighting bills demanded by the company has something to do with the company's action.

JAMES C. KINGSLEY'S WILL.

Clara Fehmel of Freiberg and Her Daughter Named as Legatees.

Petitions have been filed in the office of the Surrogate of Brooklyn consenting to the probate of the will of James Cook Kingsley, who committed suicide at San Salvador on Dec. 23 last, while on his way to this country. The testator was the son of the late William C. Kingsley, the first President of the Board of Trustees of the New York and Brooklyn Bridge. He was about 40 years old and inherited a large portion of his father's estate, and was reputed to be worth about $500,000. He was interested in a silver mine at Honduras, Central America, and at the time of his death, it is said, the mine was beginning to pay large dividends. His body was brought to this city and was interred privately in the family vault in Greenwood Cemetery last week.

The will, which is attached to the petitions, does not specify the value of the estate. The document was executed Aug. 1, 1892, and was signed in the presence of Jeremiah Evarts Tracy of Plainfield, N. J., Thomas T. Sherman of Rye, N. Y., and William R. Montgomery of Manhattan. The executors named are James Albert Kingsley, William V. Rowe, and Samuel R. Probasco.

In the will the testator says he had purchased a mine in Honduras, Central America, and that the payments for it would be completed in three years. He instructs his executors to pay all his just debts and the expenses attending his funeral, and if the estate at the time does not exceed $10,000 the residue is to be paid to Clara Fehmel of Freiberg, Germany, and her daughter, Gertrude Fehmel. If the estate exceeds $10,000 and is not over $30,000 the residue is to be paid to the testator's cousins, James Albert Kingsley and James Augustus Kingsley, and if it exceeds $30,000 then his two cousins are to receive equal shares of $20,000, and the residue is to be given to his sister, Mrs. Sarah Anna Louise Kingsley Thayer.

William V. Rowe, one of the executors, in an affidavit attached to the papers, avers that the value of the testator's personal property does not exceed $1,500 and that he left no real property in the State.

It could not be learned yesterday why the testator was interested in Clara Fehmel and her daughter, Gertrude Fehmel, in Freiberg, Germany.

HAMMOND-SLOANE WEDDING.

The Affair Will Recall the Splendor of the Marlborough-Vanderbilt Marriage.

Miss Emily Vanderbilt Sloane, whose marriage to John Henry Hammond will take place next Wednesday, will give her bridesmaids' luncheon next Monday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Douglas Sloane, Fifth avenue and Fifty-second street. The wedding will be white and pink, and the floral decorations of the bridesmaids' luncheon will be in pink. The luncheon party will include a few girl friends besides the bridesmaids, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, Miss Ruth Twombly, Miss Edith Hall, Miss Charlotte Barnes, Miss Edith Knowlton and Miss Margaret Hammond, and Miss Lila Vanderbilt Sloane, who is to be her sister's maid of honor.

On Monday night Mr. Hammond will give his farewell bachelor dinner. His guests will include William Sloane, cousin of the bride-elect, J. G. Phelps Stokes, Alonzo Potter, William Van Schoonhoven Thorne, Allan Appleton Robbins, Herbert Parsons, G. Arthur Gordon, Charles Keller Beekman, who are to act as ushers and Ogden H. Hammond, who will be best man.

The floral decorations for the Hammond-Sloane wedding will exceed in beauty any seen here since the Marlborough-Vanderbilt and Paget-Whitney weddings. The chancel of St. Bartholomew's Church will be a gorgeous sight, with great pyramids of Bermuda lilies standing in the midst of high tropical foliage, and the railings converted into a hedge of pink orchids. There will be a fine showing of orchids at the Sloane residence afterward for the reception and breakfast. The wedding bell under which the young couple will receive congratulations will be a delicate affair, showing only the sprays of innumerable lilies of the valley.

There will be fully 600 guests at the breakfast.

Miss Sloane, irrespective of future inheritances, has a large fortune in her own right, as have the other grandchildren of the late William H. Vanderbilt. This, it is said, now amounts to $5,000,000. Mr. Hammond has no more means than usually fall to the lot of a clever young lawyer.

OUR GOVERNMENTAL GERRY

BILLS TO SET HIM ABOVE HIS FELLOW MEN COME UP TO-DAY.

His Desire to Avert Inspection of His Children's Society Not Shared by Other Children's Societies Which Expend Public Moneys with a More Frugal Hand.

It is expected that the Gerry bills, whereby Elbridge T. Gerry hopes to have his Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children declared to be a subordinate Governmental agency exempted from the inspection of the State Board of Charities, and from other inspection except upon such terms as nullify the possible effects of such inquiry, will come up for action to-day, unless their originator has them put further down on the list, as has been done several times already. Every delay is a source of gratification to the opponents of the bills, who believe that if Commodore Gerry were confident of his ability to pass the bills he would rush them through at once, and that his case is becoming weaker day by day. Other societies for the prevention of cruelty to children, which have no reason to fear examinations into their methods, are assuring the State Board of Charities that they are not interested in Mr. Gerry's bills, and, in fact, take no stock in them. The latest letter on the subject received by the State Board is from the President of the Rochester S. P. C. C. It is in part as follows:

"In reference to inspection of the Rochester Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children by your board, we have no objection. Personally I am in favor of an annual inspection by your officers for the following reasons:

"1. The R. S. P. C. C. receives an annual grant of a considerable sum of money from the Board of Supervisors of Monroe county for the care of children in custody.

"2. We are, to a certain extent, a custodial institution, holding several hundred children for short spaces of time in confinement, either awaiting trial or on their way to reformatory.

"3. We appeal to the general public for funds."

The three reasons stated are, in effect, equally cogent as applied to Mr. Gerry's society. The Rochester society is not, however, a one-man power, but is conducted by its duly constituted officers, openly and above board. That there is ground for inquiry in the financial conduct of the Gerry society is readily suggested by a comparison of its expenditures with those of the Richmond County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, which has recently published its eighth annual report. On an average the Richmond county society takes care of forty children every day in the year. This is about the average of the Gerry society. It handles scores of children where the Richmond county society handles one, but the Gerry society's subjects are not kept in its fold, but rapidly distributed among various institutions, so that a general average of about forty a day is maintained. This makes a comparison of expenditures simple.

Inclusive of every expense the average yearly cost of maintenance of a child by the Staten Island society is $125; it costs the Gerry society—according to its own reports—$2,250 per child for all expenses. There are a great many men in this city who contrive to support themselves and their families comfortably on incomes considerably smaller than this amount. It should be stated, however, on behalf of the Gerry society, that this $2,250 includes its beneficences to its own employees, such as its generous allowance of 25 cents per meal for every child, made to Superintendent Jenkins, which, in conjunction with his salary and living apartments free, is alleged to enable him to keep the wolf from the door with a success little short of brilliant. This sort of thing helps to make up the society's total expenditure for the year of $92,652.12. The Richmond county society contrived to support as many children on $5,011.30. This organization, by the way, is one of those whose business methods are cheerfully thrown open to the inspection of the State Board of Charities.

The salary list of the Gerry Society is $35,178.00, as against $403.60 for the Richmond county S. P. C. C. In board, medical attendance and clothing Mr. Gerry's organization spends $11,298.40. It cost the Richmond county society $3,711.19 to furnish its children with board and clothing and $29.18 more for medicine and attendance. Superintendent Jenkins's boarding house is rather expensive, the cost being more than $250 a year for each child, whereas the Richmond society gets along on less than $100 apiece a year for children kept in the detention house and on $64 a year for those sent out to private families. Printing costs the Richmond society $27.25 a year. It is not a self-advertising institution. On the other hand Mr. Gerry likes to have his beneficences known and gets out an annual report with pictures, rather elaborately got up. Last year the Gerry society's expenditures for printing were more than $1,400. Mr. Gerry advanced as a reason against inspection of his society the possible publication of details regarding the children in the society's care. This, he said, might work great detriment to the children and might afford yellow journals opportunities for sensational and undesirable articles and illustrations. Yet Mr. Gerry's society's annual reports, circulated at large and sent by his officials to all the newspapers, contain pictures of the children committed to his care that no decent newspaper would care to print and details of their history that no newspaper, decent or indecent, would dare to print.

One might suppose that Mr. Gerry might find much in the Richmond county S. P. C. C. to admire at least, if not to emulate. It is not so. Mr. Gerry doesn't like the Richmond county S. P. C. C. That organization some time ago obtained the introduction into the Legislature at Albany of a bill to which Mr. Gerry objected on the ground that it might interfere with his bills. He wrote to the Richmond county society informing it of his desire that the offending bill be withdrawn. Having received no answer, he wrote again and with significant emphasis regarding the bill. Shortly after it was withdrawn, and Mr. Gerry put a new chalk mark in his "Things I Have Done" column. When he next meets the bill he may rub the chalk mark out, for it was withdrawn merely for change of form and will shortly be reintroduced.

TO RESTRAIN HAYMAN AND DAVIS.

Julia Arthur Wants to Play "A Lady of Quality" in Chicago.

Application was made to Supreme Court Justice Stover in Brooklyn yesterday for an injunction to restrain Theatrical Managers Al Hayman and William J. Davis from putting on the stage at the Columbia Theatre, Chicago, next week the play known as "On and Off." The application was made on behalf of Benjamin P. Cheney, the husband of Julia Arthur, who desires that his wife should appear next Monday in the Columbia Theatre in "A Lady of Quality." Counsel said that the defendants controlled many theatres in the United States and also owned the Montauk Theatre in Brooklyn and the Columbia Theatre in Chicago. Miss Arthur was at Wallack's Theatre in this city last December and after appearing at a matinée refused to go on in the evening, as she was ill, and the $1,400 in the box office had to be returned to the ticket holders. Miss Arthur was also billed for the Montauk Theatre the first week in January and after that at the Harlem Opera House. She failed to keep the engagements and then, it is alleged, the defendants decided not to pay any attention to their contract with her. Counsel said that Miss Arthur was ready and willing to carry out her contract and that all the scenery and costumes for "A Lady of Quality" had been sent to Chicago, and that if another attraction was permitted to occupy the stage Miss Arthur's reputation would be greatly damaged. The contract for this production was made in 1898 and Miss Arthur was to receive one-half the receipts if they ran up to $4,000 and 40 per cent. if they exceeded $4,000.

Abe Hummel, who appeared for the defendants, said that Cheney never had anything to do with the contract and after Miss Arthur refused to play at Wallack's Theatre in December last, Mr. Morse, the manager of the theatre, obtained an attachment against her and she had to forfeit $1,500 in order to get the scenery and costumes. In fact, he said, that was the real reason she did not appear at the Montauk Theatre the following week.

Counsel for Mr. Cheney asked for time to put in answering affidavits. The case will again come up before Justice Stover next Monday.
