FRANKFORT TO GO ABROAD

LORD CLONMEL BUYS THE BROTHER TO HAMBURG AT THE DALY SALE.

Three-Year-Old Colt, Which Has Yet Raced, Brings Second Highest Price—James McNeill Gives the Imp. Pastorella, a Winner in England and Bred in Hamburg, for $10,000—Starting Fifty Hundred Horses Sold for $1,126,000—Total for 148 Head in Two Days, $2,221,005, an Average of $15,128.66.

Hamburg, Nov. 5, sold to W. C. Whitney on Wednesday, was still a cause to conjure with at Madison Square Garden yesterday. Through the affected grace of the great city of Hanover Frankfort, his full brother, realized $10,000. This price has only been outpaced at the sale of the late Marcus Daly's Bonnybriggate by that paid for Hamburg himself. The distinction that the latter and his family have gained on the turf in the sale ring for the dollar of such a big sum as Frankfort, though a three-year-old, has never attached to a race, and has only the reputation earned in it as at the Silver Spur Farm to sustain the impression that he will prove a worthy successor to such grand racers as Hanover, Hindoo and Hamburg.

Whatever the ability of Frankfort, it is not probable that Longchamps in this country will receive the pleasure of chasing him up to victory over the tracks on which his predecessors have earned laurels. The partiality of judgment which led W. C. Whitney to invest $60,000 in Hamburg did not stimulate the former Secretary of the Navy or any other American to go into fancy figures for his full brother, and after a smart trade Frankfort was secured by Lord Clonmel.

What brought the Earl to this country was at first a subject of wonder, as on the opening day he invested only $150. He soon got the matter at rest enough for to add to Frankfort he bought the brood mare imp. Astrum for $1,000, the two-year-old Choate, by imp. Meddler, for $1,000, and the two-year-old imp. Harfleur, a Sir Hugh filly by imp. Darlaston, that has the blood of Bend Or and dialogue, both fashionable strains in his veins, and their high priced two-year-old.

The disposal of Hamburg for so much took the interest out of the big sale although there was a marked decrease in the crowd of curious spectators that went on Wednesday to see the much talked of horse sold. In addition to the number of racing men that attended on the first day there were the two prominent sportsmen, W. C. Whitney and Perry Belmont, who occupied seats on the verge of the ring. Mr. Whitney had achieved a new fame as the purchaser of Hamburg, and he was as much a feature of the show as the equine favorites that were put under the hammer.

There was plenty of variety in the programme, the offerings of attention shifting from stately brood mares that appeared to feel their dignity and position, to prancing youngsters that danced about the ring with a fire and vim that stimulated the bidding and gave earnest of what should be done out loose in their yearlings races. Prices kept up in marvellous fashion. There were one or two bargains and no actually a lack of bidding when the horse put up was too much of a gambling proposition, for a really good animal seldom failed to find bidders.

James R. Keene was added to the list of millionaires who took a hand in the buying yesterday. His operations were on a large scale, but the public had no idea that he was a factor. W. L. Powers did all the buying for him, and it was through his efforts that Mr. Keene secured Pastorella, the highest priced mare that was sold. Powers announced late in the evening that all the mares purchased by him in the afternoon were for Mr. Keene.

The total amount received for the Daly collection was $401,000 for 187 head, while the sale of the late August Belmont's stud and horses in training in 1890 and 1891 realized $641,100.

Every seat around the ring was occupied when George Ram of Lexington mounted the rostrum at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. All the prominent bidders of the opening day were in the front row. J. R. Haggin, accompanied by his trainer, sat at the immediate right of the stand, while a few seats away, on the left, were Sydney Paget and J. E. Madden.

The sale of the brood mares was continued and Homeopathic, the first one put up, induced a spirited rivalry between J. R. Haggin and Sydney Paget. It took only a few minutes for the price to rush up to $4,000, and she was knocked down to Mr. Paget, for Mr. Whitney, who thus got the first offering on each day of the sale. The same two bidders came into conflict again when imp. Isis was led into the ring. The mare has the rare distinction of being by a Derby winner and out of a Derby winner, her sire being Bend Or and dam Shotover. To carry the recommendation of Derby family honors still further, Doncaster, the sire of Bend Or, and Hermit, the sire of Shotover, also won the great English classic event. Isis has been bred to the great Hamburg and this, with her royal pedigree, led to the general belief that there would be a lively competition. J. R. Haggin started the ball rolling with $2,000. Madden lifted it to $2,500 and the bidding seesawed between the two by raises of $500 until Sydney Paget stepped in with an offer of $6,500. Two more bids brought the amount offered to $7,500. Then Haggin showed that he was approaching his limit by tacking on an extra $1,500. Paget made it $8,000, and after another $500 raise Haggin dropped out and Mr. Whitney's representative got the prize for $8,500.

Imp. Isis, a daughter of Isis, followed, and Mr. Haggin again was prominent in the bidding. His only competitor at first was Madden. The latter dropped out at $7,000, but just when the fight seemed over J. E. McDonald, who was standing with Lord Clonmel, quietly made an offer of $7,500. This brought $7,600 from the millionaire, and after one more raise by McDonald, Mr. Haggin got the mare for $8,000.

After this the interest flagged for a while and there was no real competition until imp. Pastorella was introduced. Every one that knew a good animal seemed to want this one, and it soon became evident that she was considered the cream of the brood mares. Her victories included the Zetland Stakes at York, and the Ascot Biennial. She had also been bred to Hamburg. Lord Clonmel dropped out of the race at $8,000. Then McDonald and Mr. Haggin took up the running. The latter bid $9,000, but was topped by McDonald with $9,100. W. L. Powers then put an end to further dallying with a bid of $10,000 at which price Pastorella was sold.

From this time on Mr. Haggin and Powers got most of the good mares, but McDonald made several efforts to obtain one of the sure foal getters and forced the millionaire into many big investments. Lord Clonmel also was a frequent bidder and though the Irish nobleman was generally forced to quit by Mr. Haggin he finally secured imp. Sistrum, by Common, imp. Isis for $4,000. John Boden, who is said to be buying for August Belmont, bought imp. St. Eudora, by St. Simon for $5,000.

During the afternoon a story went the rounds which indicates that Lord Clonmel got one of the bargains of the sale when he bought imp. Angelure on Wednesday for $150. It is also a joke on Father Bill Daly, who wanted to buy the mare from Lord Clonmel yesterday. The price suggested was $1,500. The Amer can horseman said that he was willing to allow a fair profit, but that was too much. Twenty minutes after Daly had refused the offer Lord Clonmel received a cable gram from England offering $200 for the mare. Father Bill" is now beginning to think that perhaps he missed a good thing.

The mares mostly acted kindly in the ring but Salvia, that was sold to Edward Kelly for $600, started kicking as she was led out and landed heavily on her attendant, Barney Collins, who came from Montana with the horses. Collins was kicked on the arm, and the mare's hoof also reached his ribs. An ambulance was called from New York Hospital, but the boy was not injured badly enough to necessitate his going to the institution.

J. R. Haggin bought twenty-one of the brood mares for $51,100, an average of $2,433.33. The best highest buyer was W. L. Powers, who secured six for $26,700, an average of $4,450. W. C. Whitney bought two at a total price of $12,500.

The only yearling in the sale, an imported bay filly by Persimmon—Field Azure, was the first lot put up at the evening session. In England the foals of the horse that won the Derby in the colors of the Prince of Wales fetched enormous prices last year, one filly bringing about $60,000. If any such amount was expected for the half sister to Admiral Dewey there might have been disappointment, for J. E. Madden got the yearling for $1,100. The impression prevails that the Persimmon filly will be added to the Whitney string.

The real sensation of the evening came when Frankfort was led into the ring. J. R. Haggin, Clarence Mackay and John Madden were among the early bidders. The bidding mounted with prompt speed until Sydney Paget got the lot, and it looked as if Frankfort was destined to go home with the Hamburg colt. Mr. Whitney's representative had kept quiet, however, and when Paget had reached $9,000 he quietly put in a bid of $9,500 and Frankfort was knocked down to the Hamburg buyer. Mr. Whitney's representative then bought the full brother to Hamburg for $10,000.

This was the last real excitement of the evening, and the crowd began to thin out. Mr. Haggin, Clarence Mackay and John Madden were among the early bidders for the yearling Choate, but the bidding mounted with prompt speed until Sydney Paget got the lot, and it looked as if Choate was destined to go home with the Frankfort colt. Mr. Whitney's representative had kept quiet, however, and when Paget had reached $9,000 he quietly put in a bid of $9,500 and Choate was knocked down to the Hamburg buyer. Mr. Whitney's representative then bought the full brother to Hamburg for $10,000.

Mr. Whitney Tells Why He Bought Hamburg.

Those who had attended the sales of racing Hamburg on Wednesday at Madison Square Garden were disappointed to learn yesterday that he had been removed from the stable of his new owner, W. C. Whitney, immediately after the sale. Mr. Whitney had that he bought Hamburg on his own judgment because he was a very high bred individual type of the American thoroughbred.

"Through Hamburg," he said, "I get the sire of champions of their year, Hamburg himself, Hanover and Hindoo. Thus we have the strain of Virgil, Glenelg and a host of other grand race horses. On the female side there is a long list of famous mares, including the great Dance family. Hamburg's dam being Lady Reel, a half sister to the great Duplicate. These are strong reasons why I should have purchased Hamburg. I have not formed any definite idea of his future. That will entail considerable study of blood lines, for I believe that a great deal of such as Hamburg should receive the cream of strains on the female side. Mr. Whitney's Hamburg will be sent to my Kentucky establishment."

WEIGHTS FOR BIG HANDICAPS.

Kinler Mack at the Top in the Brooklyn, Suburban and Brighton.

Handicapper Vosburgh has announced the weight for the Brooklyn and Suburban Handicaps to be run at the spring meetings of the Brooklyn and Coney Island Jockey Clubs respectively. The top weight in each, 126 pounds, is allotted to Kinler Mack. Five out follows with 126 pounds. Prince of Melbourne, who has not been entered in the Brooklyn, will shoulder 126 pounds in the Suburban, then comes Banastar with 124 pounds in both of the big fixtures. Richard Croker's Bean Gallant will carry 124 pounds in the Brooklyn and 125 pounds in the Suburban, while his chestnut colt Bellario is in Brooklyn at 98 pounds and in the Suburban at 99. Star Bright, the only entry of W. Whitney in both handicaps, is weighted at 110 pounds.

For the Brighton Handicap, Kinler Mack, a winner of fifteen races, even has 127 pounds to Elkton's 126 and Prince of Melbourne's 125. Banister comes next with 122 and Lord Badge follows with 117. The full list of weights follows:

Broad and McGovern May Be Matched Next Week.

A match between Kid Broad and Terry McGovern may be arranged. Representatives of the two men are to meet in this city on Feb. 4 to draw up articles of agreement. Yesterday Joe Macias, Broad's manager, received a telegram from McGovern to the effect that the featherweight champion would be here in a few days and would fix a date with Broad. A club at San Francisco has offered a good-sized purse to the pair for a 20-round battle at 126 pounds. The organization is willing to pull off the mill in March. Broad says that the time suits him. If the mill is arranged the lads will come together for a guaranteed purse of $5,000 and a percentage of the gate receipts.

OPEN TOURNEY PLANS.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE METROPOLITAN GOLF ASSOCIATION.

The Championship Will Be in the East Next Year at a Place to Be Chosen by the Executive Committee—General Handicap List Twice a Year—President Chase Installed.

There was plenty of golf talk at the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Golf Association last night at the Metropolitan Club and it is a safe thing that there will be no falling off in the number of open championships this season. The Metropolitan, Long Island, East Jersey and New Jersey State Championship meetings, which leaves that the Association not conflict with the Metropolitan Open, which represented the Metropolitan Association, the first president was in the chair. There were twenty-nine of the forty-five clubs in membership represented at the meeting. The following were elected officers:

President, Oswald Nelles, Ardsley; first vice president, Hamilton Fish, Nassau; second vice president, Frederick Gallatin, Westchester; third vice president, Frederick Gallatin, Westchester; fourth vice president, Frederick Gallatin, Westchester; secretary, Frederick Gallatin, Westchester; treasurer, Frederick Gallatin, Westchester; executive committee, Frederick Gallatin, Westchester; Oswald Nelles, Ardsley; Hamilton Fish, Nassau;
