FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

TUESDAY, Feb. 24.

The weekly bank statement published last Saturday showed a loss in cash of $3,760,700, or nearly three times greater than had been expected, and this loss, joined to the large increase in loans, brought the total surplus reserve of the institutions, represented in the Clearing House down to $9,041,675, an amount much lower than is usual at this time of year. Had the Exchange been open on Saturday and Monday, prices would probably have yielded because of this unfavorable bank statement much more than they did to-day. But the lapse of time invariably moderates the effect of such developments, and, though the opening prices of most active stocks in to-day's security market were considerably lower than the closing prices on Friday afternoon and the market of the day was as a whole very irregular, the undertone of trading remained firm, and there was no pressure to sell stocks. The best opinion seems to be that somewhat higher rates for the use of money will rule between now and the first of April. These rates in many adjoining cities, notably in Boston, are now well above the rates current here. A strong demand for money has arisen in Chicago, to which city $500,000 was transferred through the Sub-Treasury, and $1,000,000 by express, by the local banks to-day. Our banks have also lost $760,000 to the Sub-Treasury since Friday. Time money is perceptibly harder and while call money loaned to-day below 3 per cent. it was not pressed upon borrowers as has recently been the case. This tendency of the money market is caused, of course, by the normal demands for money incident to the time of year for use in the agricultural sections of the country, and is doubtless accentuated by the need for making payments at an early date on account of the great land speculation in Iowa and various parts of the Northwest. All these considerations increase the interest which the entire financial community takes at this time in the Aldrich Government Deposits bill, now pending in Congress, by which, if it becomes a law, all Government revenues may hereafter be deposited in national banks qualified to act as Government depositories. Owing to the peculiar complications now besetting legislation at the National Capital and the fact that barely more than a week of the present session of Congress remains, hopes of the passage of the Aldrich bill are not as bright as they were. It hardly seems credible that a measure of such immense importance to the whole country, and one against which not a single valid objection can be brought, can fail merely because of legislative "holdups" of one kind or another. It behooves every person in the financial community having influence at Washington to exert himself as best he may in favor of Senator Aldrich's wise and salutary proposition.

Talk of gold exports disappeared to-day in the view of the strength of sterling exchange in both Berlin and Paris, especially at the latter point, where the cheque on London rose one full centime. Sterling was easier here, bankers' bills, as well as commercial bills, beings plentiful. London sold about 30,000 shares of stock in this market, and if this selling had been for genuine London account it might have stiffened the local sterling rate. It was definitely established, however, that the London selling was by order of New York firms, and many cables were addressed by London houses to their correspondents here asking the source of this selling and the probable reason for it. There was nothing to-day except timidity over the money situation to cause liquidation. Reports of railroad earnings showed increases in almost every instance, the only notable exception, indeed, being the Chicago and Northwestern's report of a small decrease in gross for January. In the afternoon the whole market strengthened under the lead of Wabash preferred. A rumor circulated and found many believers that either the control or a very large minority holding had been acquired, directly or indirectly, in the Wabash property by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. This transaction, if it took place, would mean the end of all hostility between the Gould and Pennsylvania interests and the cessation of all attempts of the Gould system of railroads to obtain an entrance to the Atlantic seaboard. No confirmation of this rumor could be obtained, and the best opinion in the Street discredited it. Indeed, there are substantial reasons for believing that the story was wholly without foundation.

The Steel stocks and Amalgamated Copper were also particularly strong to-day, the former, probably, because of a sharp advance in the selling price of wire products—including nails—and the latter because of the continual improvement in the market for raw copper. In the early part of the day the St. Louis and San Francisco shares also advanced several points. As the floating supply of all the St. Louis and San Francisco issues in the Street has been reduced to a minimum, violent fluctuations in their price often attend comparatively small transactions in the stock. It is believed by many observers that the stock is being made the subject of competitive bidding by two great railway systems, if indeed, its control has not already passed from the hands of its ostensible owners. Obviously, the matter is one concerning which authoritative information is lacking. Ultra speculative sentiment has naturally been a little dashed recently by the apparent absorption of money caused by the large borrowings for corporate purposes. That the supply of liquid capital available for investment purposes has not greatly diminished, however, is proved by the fact that Bonds that may justly be called cheap are rapidly bid for whenever they are offered. Cases in point are the large purchases made every day of the Erie convertible bonds and of the new 5 per cent. convertible bond issue of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel Company.

THE OUTSIDE MARKET.

The dealings in outside securities to-day were devoid of any special feature outside of the continued activity and strength displayed in Greene Consolidated Copper. Price movements were generally firm and in most cases fractionally higher than the previous closing. American Can preferred gained about a point. Havana Tobacco common gained about 1 per cent, Union Typewriter common advanced 1 per cent in the bid price to 129, without sales. The Wireless Telegraph shares were stronger, Marconi gained ⅜, while De Forest rose ½. Northern Securities opened steady, but on light selling pressure lost nearly ½ per cent, but in the late dealings recovered all the loss. International Mercantile Marine shares were dull and fractionally lower.

The copper shares in general, with one exception, were dull; the strength in this commodity was reflected little in those shares. Pool operations displayed little activity outside of Greene Consolidated, which attracted more or less the trading attention during the entire session. The upward movement in these shares at the close of last week was further shown in to-day's market. Shortly after the opening, a buying movement set in which forced the price up 1¼ per cent, to 26, the highest price reached in some little time, and the closing was near the best price.

The shares of the Mohawk Valley Steel and Wire Company, which was incorporated some little time ago, were dealt in for the first time to-day; the stock sold at 52@52½, while the 5 per cent bonds, series B, sold at 95.

The transactions in the market to-day were as follows:
