

ST. JOHNS REVIEW

Bordeaux Spray for Apples

The experiment station at Hood river recommends the application of the Bordeaux spray on all apple trees, especially those infected with anthracnose. It is said that the most convenient plan for spraying large orchards is to have two elevated tanks at such height that their contents can be run into the spray tanks through pipes which should be large enough to fill quickly. This arrangement necessitates a platform level with the top of the tanks where the lime may be slacked and the vitriol dissolved in other tanks or barrels and then easily run into the tanks for the diluted solutions. For small orchards a large mortar box should be provided, built to suit the amount of lime needed, and should be large enough so that the mortar will not be more than eight to ten inches deep. Plenty of mortar should be used and care taken that the lime is not burned. The number of pounds of lime used should be known and but a small amount stirred at once. It will take the lime at least a week to slack and then the water should be drained off and the lime checked in squares so that each square will represent the number of pounds of lime required to make a spray. The best grade of lime should be used and if slacked several days ahead of time, all particles will slack down to a paste and may easily be put through the strainer into the tank. In mixing vitriol and lime water, the lime should be put first into the tank unless both can be run in together.

Plans and specifications have been completed by Muhm & Brewer, contractors and designers, for a modern bungalow for K. C. Couch. The building will be located on the southwest corner of Willamette boulevard and New York street. Contracts for excavating have been let and actual construction will begin the first of the week. The contractors expect to have this fine residence completed about October 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Haines, former residents of St. Johns, have returned to their home, 85 East 72 North street, Portland, from a vacation through Yellowstone National Park, Glacier National Park and Northern and Central Montana. Mr. Haines also visited his mother and sisters in Kalispel, Montana. They were in the midst of some thrilling scenes, forest fires and sand storms. The trip was made in a Mobil car. The first sight of the Columbia and other Oregon scenery was an inspiration. "Through pleasures and palaces though we may roam, be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

Mrs. J. Pond was given a very pleasing surprise by a few of her intimate friends on her birthday, Thursday, August 19th, at the home of Mrs. H. P. Toliver, the home being beautifully decorated and a dainty lunch served made the surprise complete for Mrs. Pond. Those present were Mrs. J. Pond, Mrs. A. S. Stone, Mrs. J. Marchand, Mrs. R. Scammon, Mrs. Ed Smith and son, Mr. H. P. Toliver and daughter.

The signing of the joint resolution by President Harding that was recently passed by Congress giving the state of Oregon national recognition to hold a world's exposition in 1925 should be the signal for a state-wide demonstration in recognition of the opportunity afforded to present the resources, scenic advantages and the civilization west of the Rockies to all the world.

Do not allow Canadian thistles and other obnoxious weeds to ripen and scatter their seeds o'er hill and dale. If not destroyed now next season weeds will become as the sands of the sea—innumerable!

An appeal to all residents of St. Johns to assist in securing the 1925 Fair should touch a responsive chord.

Language of Flowers

Since history began to be written, flowers have been employed as the language of love and esteem, of adulation and exaltation, of congratulation and commendation; of gratitude and kindly reciprocation. All these attributes of the human heart are most pathetically and eloquently expressed by these silent, beautiful, fragrant God's jewel-gifts to His children, and they bloom for all. The sweetbriar and honey suckle growing against the wall of the peasant's garden, and the lilacs and heliotrope in the doorway of the village cottager, laud the atmosphere with as much prodigality as do the exotic plants in the conservatories of the opulent; and their companions, the daisy, the pansy and the pink, reflect God's love as effectually upon the homes of the poor as does the rarest rose in the spacious lawns of the rich. Flowers have adorned the lowly cottage as gracefully and as appropriately as the drawing room of the mansion or the stately palace of the king or queen. They crown the head and carpet the pathway of the millionaire's daughter in her triumphal march to the hymeneal altar, and their garlands grace the corsage of the peasant bride with no less beauty of sentiment, of purity and love. They cheer the sick room and hospital ward and comfort and stimulate the hope of the patient as not ing else can do. They convey the messages of love and sympathy to those in sorrow and bereavement, and eloquently pronounce honor and esteem for the departed. One tiny perfumed blossom enclosed with a letter from a distant friend emphasizes love and devotion incomparably more fulsome than avowals of the written page. A pressed flower which has lost all its pristine beauty impelled the author of that song known and sung throughout the world, "A Flower from My Angel Mother's Grave," to indite its pathetic lines. The flower language is complete with poetic beauty; far reaching in its scope to charm, and inexhaustible in its possibilities.—J. B. Huntington.

REAL HEAT IN PHILIPPINES

Traveler's Description of Weather During Some Months is Not by Any Means Alluring.

The rainy season is behind time, and the dear garden burns yellow brown. It is so hot that even the crickets are still. The long, black-raftered rooms are unendurably warm, Caroline S. Shunk writes in Asia Magazine. Smoke from the servants' fire in the yard drifts in over us. The yellow earth at our back door stretches, a glaring plain, to meet the jungle, which rolls up a rich green carpet to the "Secret Place Mountain," where, so runs the legend, a Negro chieftain hid his favorite wife. There she died, and, at her request, the delicately curved comb that held her long hair was buried with her. From this grave, the natives say, grew a tree with leaves like the fine, soft hair of a woman—the useful and beautiful bamboo tree.

Our in the yard the women have ceased their chanting to the best of their washing paddles, to sit around a chow pot of rice and smoke long black cigars. Their sphinxlike faces have no illuminating expression, save when a baby toddles too near the open fire. Then the look of fear and love with which the child is hastily snatched away into the arms of the little brown mother includes us for an instant and is gone. We are about out in an alien world again. I hear the plaint of the Chinese cook: "China not same. Allee samee China boys go. Too muchee Melican man." Then a harsh, clattering word like a tin pan falling from a table—perhaps a Chinese swearword!

Constant Search for Tannin.

The oak is one of the best known natural sources of tannin, although it is found in many other trees. The spread of industry has increased the call for tannin to such a degree that search has been made all over the world for some new tree capable of supplementing the oak, hemlock and other trees in furnishing this indispensable substance.

A certain degree of success has attended the search in Argentina, where there is found a tree called the quebracho, from which excellent tannin can be obtained. The wood of this tree is very hard and durable, and it grows in large forests. It has been known as a tannin producer for about 30 years, but only in late years has the extraction of the tannin been conducted in Argentina. Formerly the wood was exported.

That Little Bit---
Why do people object to saving—it is comparable to cultivating disease instead of combatting it. Often we are told that the little bit left over is not worth the trouble to save. There is the mistake for the few pennies left beyond your expenses represents your profit--To waist them is to be profitless.
We encourage the saver of the little bit left over equally with the saver of the dollar.
