TWO FROM THE BROOKLYNS

M'GRAW'S MEN SHOW THEM SPEED ACROSS THE BRIDGE.

Wind Up a Busy Week by Gaining on the Leaders—Chicagos Slip a Cog in Game With Cincinnatis—Bostons Down the Quakers—Pirates Score Over Cardinals.

The New York Nationals yesterday wound up one of the busiest weeks a ball team ever had, and in addition they made good use of the week. They played ten games and won eight of them, taking both parts of a double header in Brooklyn yesterday. They gained on the Chicagos, who were beaten by the Cincinnatis, and are only a few points ahead of the Pittsburgs, who defeated St. Louis. The Phillies fell before the Bostons. The results:

New York, 4; Brooklyn, 2—First game.

New York, 5; Brooklyn, 2—Second game.

Boston, 4; Philadelphia, 1.

Cincinnati, 4; Chicago, 1.

Pittsburg, 4; St. Louis, 1.

NEW YORK (N. L.), 4; BROOKLYN (N. L.), 3.—FIRST GAME.

John McGraw's men took their scoring machinery over to Brooklyn yesterday afternoon and took two steps up the percentage ladder without having to put much dust on their hands. Mr. Rucker who officiated for Brooklyn in the first game showed determined opposition to losing the game at all stages, his offerings being turned into hits only five times, on which four runs resulted. The rest of the Brooklyn team didn't take the most acute interest in the game with the result that while they harvested twice as many hits as the New Yorks they got one less run. Even after the fifth inning, in which New York did most of the scoring, Rucker continued to toss over a superb line of twisters.

The attendance was probably the largest that Washington Park has ever seen on a day when admission was charged. The entire field was fringed seven deep and ground rules were in force. New York rooters outnumbered the Brooklynites, although in the eighth inning when the score was tied everybody emitted glad cries for the down trod.

Seymour opened Brooklyn's fatal fifth inning with a hot jab to short right for a base. Devlin got his base when he was hit, and Seymour strolled on. Shannon poked one at Rucker, who failed to locate third base to nail Seymour. Hummel gladdened the Giant rooters by throwing the ball almost over the grand stand, and Seymour, Devlin and Shannon rolled home. Rucker then walked Bridwell and Ritter mussed up Wiltse's bunt, filling first and second again. Both men moved up on a wild pitch, and things looked favorable for another clean up of the bases. Rucker shocked the McGraw cohorts by fanning Tenney, Doyle and Bresnahan. In Brooklyn's half of the same inning Ritter walloped to centre and sprinted to third. Devlin objected to O'Day's decision and tried to bury the ball, meanwhile commenting on O'Day's eyesight. Devlin was invited to retire to the clubhouse and long before he got there Ritter died at the plate on a throw by Wiltse.

In Brooklyn's half of the seventh Sheehan flied to Shannon and Lewis popped to Doyle. Wiltse passed both Ritter and Rucker. Burch sent Ritter to third with a single and Pattee scored him with another. In the eighth inning a few disappointed rooters hissed when Lumley went to bat. He responded with a sizzler to the fence that carried him to third, and then walked home on Doyle's wild throw. Sheehan sacrificed and Lewis was out, Bridwell to Tenney, Jordan going to third. Jordan tied the score on Ritter's single, and Ritter was out stealing.

New York's half of the ninth was enlivened by requests from the rooters for the winning run. Shannon got to second on Pattee's wild throw and Bridwell sacrificed. Needham, batting for Wiltse, sent a long fly to Burch, who returned the ball so skillfully that Shannon had to extend himself to score on the play. Tenney walked and was caught napping off first. Mathewson, who relieved Wiltse, fanned Maloney, Burch and Pattee.

Donovan's men went into the second game, in which Matthewson was announced to pitch, as though it was already lost. Tenney was out, Wilhelm to Jordan, and Doyle was thrown out at first by Lewis. Bresnahan singled to centre and Donlin's mighty swat was good for three bases under the ground rules, Bresnahan scoring. Seymour's hit scored Lewis. The same amount of scoring was done in the third inning, when Tenney walked and went to second on Doyle's sacrifice. Bresnahan was safe on an infield hit, Tenney going to third. Tenney scored on Donlin's extended swat to Burch, and Bresnahan also arrived when Seymour singled safely to the infield and Seymour retired the side when he tried to nail third.

New York's fifth and last run came in the fourth, when Shannon singled past second. Bridwell was out to Sheehan. Mathewson fouled to Ritter and Shannon stole second. Tenney singled and on Hummel's error Shannon scored and Tenney pulled up at third. Doyle flied to Lewis. Brooklyn went to bat in the fifth with the score 5 too and the Harlem rooters started for home and dinner. Jordan flied to Shannon and Sheehan knocked the angles off Mathewson's twister with a swat that sent the ball along the left foul line. Lewis heaved one into the crowd that put Jordan to third and sent Sheehan in with the first score. Ritter flied to Shannon and Lewis was it at the plate.

Brooklyn's second and last score was made in the next inning. Wilhelm flied to Shannon, but both Burch and Pattee singled. Hummel was safe on his hit to right field and Burch scored. Lumley fanned, but Pattee went to third on Jordan's single. Donlin grabbed Sheehan's fly. In the remaining innings Matty served them up a little hotter and there wasn't even the ghost of another run for Brooklyn.

FINE BRACE BY AMERICANS

ELBERFELD'S MEN PULL A GAME OUT OF THE FIRE.

Batting Rallies in Eighth and Ninth Innings Beat the Bostons—Leaders Blanked by Detroits—Athletics Shut Out Washingtons and the White Sox Lose Again.

The first thing the New Yorks did yesterday on their return home from their disastrous Western trip was to overcome obstacles, beat the Bostons and move back into sixth place. The St. Louis leaders met with a reverse in Detroit, where they were shut out, the Clevelands gaining on them by taking another from the backsliding White Sox. The Athletics, who have braced up since they got back home, whitewashed the Washingtons. The results:

New York, 7; Boston, 6.

Philadelphia, 6; Washington, 0.

Detroit, 1; St. Louis, 0.

Cleveland, 6; Chicago, 3.

NEW YORK (A. L.), 7; BOSTON (A. L.), 6.

Manager Norman Elberfeld, late the Kid, made his first home appearance as field marshal of the New York Americans yesterday, and his presence and spirit, combined with a few desirable sundries in the way of base hits, urged the New Yorks on to a fighting finish which culminated in the overthrow of the Bostons. The Bostons are feeling their oats these days, for they have been playing ball as is ball lately, and they counted on smearing the crippled Highlanders. For seven of the nine innings it looked as if they would accomplish their fell purpose; but the New Yorks made a desperate brace in the eighth and ninth rounds and pounded out the needful counts.

A towering figure in the rally was Joe Lake, whose hits helped in the scoring in both innings. Lake pitched the game out after Newton had been removed in the first inning. Newton made a bad start and left things in poor shape for Lake in the first inning. Before Lake could untangle himself from the wreckage four runs came in, but from that time on the big pitcher did much better. Another hitter who was right in the thick of the home team's scoring sprees was Willie Keeler, who flirted with Cicotte's pitching for four singles.

Elberfeld was greeted with a cheer when he first appeared on the field, but the crowd wasn't what it was when the New Yorks were winning in May. However, in view of the fact that Gothamites warm up more to winning baseball than to baseball itself the attendance was fairly good. Ex-Manager Griffith was among those present and rooted as hard for the team as he ever did.

The Bostons made a profitable beginning. Thoney and Sullivan both singled in the first inning, and McConnell filled the bases up to the brim by waiting for four balls. To the bench for Newton. While Lake was adapting himself to the situation he was hit for singles by Gessler and Unglaub and a sacrifice fly by Wagner, and four runs stared New York in the face. All the New Yorks got out of their half of the first was a floral horseshoe for Elberfeld. The late Kid snuffed fragrance and encouragement from the symbolic horticultural edifice and bade his men keep at 'em.

The Bostons extended their lead in the fourth. Criger flied to Keeler, but both Cicotte and Thoney singled. Ball muffed Niles's throw of a force, and McConnell uncovered a hit which scored two men. The New Yorks began their uphill journey as soon as their game to bat. Two were out, however, before they reached first. Lake doubled, Niles promenaded, Keeler made an infield hit. His filled the bases. Moriarty hit safely and scored Lake and Niles. Then the home team subsided for a while, coming to life again in the eighth inning.

Conroy walked, Blair didn't do anything, but Lake hit for two bases again and sent Conroy in. Lake was caught at third on Niles's grounder to Wagner, and the outlook was dark. Everybody but McGuire and family brightened up when Keeler and Moriarty contributed hits. Gardner made the stop of Moriarty's hard one, but threw wild and Niles tallied. Hemphill pushed a hit over Cicotte, and on that bingle Keeler reached the plate.

Being only one run behind when they came to bat in the ninth inning, the New Yorks waded right into their opponents. Stahl unlashed a safety through the box and stole second on a sacrifice by Conroy. Orth batted for Blair and worked Cicotte for four balls. Lake singled to centre and sent Stahl home with the tying run, Orth taking third. Niles went at the first good ball pitched to him, sent it crashing between third and short, and Orth ambled over. The score:
