GIANTS SCOLD THE UMPIRE

WHO CALLS POLICEMAN TO EJECT ONE M'GRAW.

Official Erroneously Calls Balk on the Great Mathewson and Then the Vocal Etna Big Leaguers Have an Easy Time With the Norfolk Team.

NORFOLK, Va., April 5.—In a scrappy game this afternoon the Giants outclassed the Tars, who had an attack of stage fright and committed seven errors, which with thirteen hits and good pitching by Mathewson and Marquard gave the Giants the decision by the score of 8 to 2.

Trouble developed in the first inning when Umpire Pender called a balk on Mathewson. Bonner, the first batter, had singled and was caught napping on a trick which Mathewson often works on unsuspecting base runners. Mathewson threw the ball to Merkle, who returned it quickly. As soon as Mathewson had the sphere in his hands again he whirled and shot it to Merkle, catching Bonner as the latter was walking away from the base.

The play as practised by Mathewson is perfectly legitimate inasmuch as he always stands back of the rubber when receiving the first baseman's throw. To-day, however, the base runner claimed a balk, and Pender, who was deceived himself, allowed the claim. Immediately the diamond was in an uproar. Pender refused to explain why he had called the balk and finally called for a policeman and instructed him to escort McGraw from the grounds. Manager Clarke of the Norfolk team joined Pender out of this and McGraw stayed. Throughout the game, however, bitter remarks were constantly passing between the umpire and the New York players, much to the delight of the spectators, who objected to some of Pender's decisions against Norfolk.

Marquard pitched the last four innings. He was unsteady in the sixth, when Bonner's infield hit, a hit batsman and Chandler's single and Devlin's failure to stop a throw from Schei gave the Tars their only runs. Marquard allowed only one hit after that.

The Giants finally cut loose after hitting poorly for a week. The first four men in the batting order gathered in hits. Devore made his first home run for the New York club by good sprinting in the eighth inning. It is declared that a home run never before has been made on these grounds on a ball that rebounded inside the fence.

Walker, the University of Virginia athlete, pitched his first professional game to-day, hurling the first three innings. He was met for five hits and three runs.

ALSO AN 8 TO 2 SCORE.

Highlanders Win by Good Base Running and Opponents' Mistakes.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 5.—The Highlanders to-day defeated the South Atlantic League club of this city by a score of 8 to 2. The New Yorkers did not hit the minor league pitchers very hard, but the batting was timely and mixed with local errors. Daring base running by the visitors was mainly responsible for the defeat of the locals.

Columbia scored both runs off Jack Quinn in the sixth inning. Until this time the big spitball expert was incorrigible. He got in the hole by hitting the first man to face him, and when further trouble arrived Wohlleben's fly in left confused Quinn and second with none out. Hayes fumbled Hartley's short grounder and Marshall scored. A long fly to Walker gave the second tally. In the sixth inning Columbia scored two more runs after two were out. Quinn struck out the side in the second and fourth innings.

Southpaw Jack Ellison, who was recently got his first taste of hoe in the last three innings of the game, held only one man on the bases while the left hander pitched.

Brooklyns Rally in the Eighth

RICHMOND, Va., April 5.—With a batting rally and two errors in the eighth, Brooklyn to-day defeated Richmond by the score of 6 to 4. Walsh was on the mound for Brooklyn and held the locals to one run in the first five innings. All of them singles, during which time his teammates got Bell relieved Rucker in the fourth and allowed one safe drive. The score:

MORAN IN HIS BEST FORM.

Too Good for Matty Baldwin in Ten Round Bout.

Owen Moran of England showed his best form in a ten round bout with Matty Baldwin of Boston in the Fairmont A. C. last night and was the winner on points, with plenty to spare. Baldwin had the better of the first round, but after that it was Moran's fight. In the fourth round Moran scored a clean knockdown with a hard right hook on the jaw and Baldwin took the count for nine seconds. But the Boston lightweight was too strong and clever to be put away.

In the eighth round Baldwin landed his best blow, a left to the jaw, which jarred Moran to his heels, but the latter recovered quickly and never was in danger thereafter. Moran leaves for California to-day to fight Tommy McCarthy in Frisco on April 25.

Whether it was due to a surfeit of boxing or because of the fact that Baldwin and Moran were put on at short notice was a problem the club officials were unable to solve when they saw many empty seats in the arena. The card was a good one, yet for some reason the members did not turn out as was the case when Moran met Abe Attell at this club last Friday. But the club went ahead with the original programme just the same. Two-thirds of the seats were filled when the preliminaries began.

Kid Bernstein outpointed Kid Harris in the first bout, of four rounds, while in the second, of the same distance, Leo Baker beat Joe Black, though neither showed much knowledge of boxing. Joe Phillips and Jack Martin put up a fast fight in the third go, of six rounds.

It was a hard go all the way and the men broke about even.

Neil Regan, the Irish lightweight, had another tryout with Jimmy Moran, in the semi-final bout of six rounds. Moran forced the issue a greater part of the time, but Regan landed the cleaner punches and got a draw.

Moran and Baldwin weighed very close to the lightweight limit, although the Boston pugilist was perhaps a couple of pounds heavier.

First Round—Baldwin began roughing it in a clinch after Moran tapped him on the mouth with a left. Baldwin on the break did some wild rushing, but Moran blocked him cleverly. Moran put a left to the face and Baldwin swung a right to the neck. Moran rushed into a clinch but was driven to the ropes. Baldwin reaching the head with a swift left. The men were mixing it when time was up. Baldwin had a shade.

Second Round—Moran got away from a fast rush and then scored with the left on the mouth. Moran blocked another attack and got in a right to the body. They exchanged swings for the neck, and as Baldwin rushed the Briton stepped back out of the way. Moran put in a cuffing of Baldwin about the ears and got away from another rush, in a furious exchange both landed fiercely and wound up the round in a clinch. Moran had this round on points.

Third Round—Baldwin stepped in with sharp lefts in the face, Moran hammering the ribs. Baldwin kept coming with lefts, Moran throwing and countering with great skill. Moran sent a quick left to the eye and stepped inside of a hard swing. Then in a rally Baldwin received the neck with a swing, but the Britisher got away and then turned with a hot uppercut on the head. Moran continued to score the points with the left hand to the range of the round.

Fourth Round—Moran blocked a left lead and then scored a fresh knockdown with a right hook on the jaw, as Baldwin rushed to him. Baldwin was down for nine seconds, and when he got up the blood was flowing from his nose and mouth. But he wasn't groggy, and Moran took his own time, sparring with the left and trying several swings for the jaw. Then Baldwin rallied and succeeded Moran with a heavy right on the jaw, but he was in the ring. On the break Moran stood off and scored the points with cool, heady cleverness. Moran's round.

Fifth Round—Baldwin ran into a clinch, and on the break Moran cut his mouth with more quick lefts. A hard body blow made Baldwin come off the floor, but he went to his quarters and sent in a wood left to the mouth, followed by the same on the ribs, a smash he got to the stomach with a hard right. Baldwin meanwhile fighting back plucky enough. At the bell the men were in a grim and fierce mixup, the round being Moran's favor.

Sixth Round—Moran stopped a rush and put in several fine uppercuts. Baldwin in his turn sent a left to the nose and then upper cut his opponent as the latter bored in. Moran turned the fight, pointing and finishing with fine uppercuts, he had Baldwin in a bad. Moran finally put over a crashing right to the eye and had his opponent on the defensive when the bell rang.

Seventh Round—Moran ducked under a swing and put in two with sharp jabs. Baldwin rushed with a right and left punch, but Moran drove them off with a volley of jabs and uppercuts. Moran blocked a stiff left punch and stepped to close quarters for a rally which ended in a clinch. Baldwin forced Moran to the ropes and put in a hard left to the body.
