FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

TUESDAY, May 24.

After yesterday's comparative activity and wide fluctuations in prices in the security market the tendency of Stock Exchange business to-day was to a collapse into the dulness that has in the main characterized it during recent weeks; and the general firmness shown seemed to indicate that it was the prevailing judgment that yesterday's reaction had been carried about as far, all things considered, as was warranted under present circumstances and that it had also been caused to a greater or less extent by speculative operations for the fall. Prices at the outset were easily above the range at which they closed on the day before, although they received no impetus whatever from the course of the London market, where business was listless and dragging, for which the current explanation was the proximity of the approaching financial settlement. Here the market moved in an upward direction throughout the day, but this took place on such a heavily reduced volume of trading that it was fairly open to question whether the movement was due to any especial exhibition of underlying strength or merely represented the recovery of stocks sold previously for the decline. Wall Street gossip had it that a large share of such actual liquidation as occurred yesterday was caused by realizing sales for the account of a large speculator who sailed this morning for Europe for his vacation. All that can be said of this was that was as good an explanation as any other that could have been offered. Of one thing, however, there was very little doubt, and that was that the day witnessed a very considerable elimination of whatever short interest in the market was created on the three days of relative strength that were seen around the end of last week and the beginning of the present week. No one stock or group of stocks was particularly strong to-day as compared with others, and although a variety of rumors was still heard regarding a supposed increase of holdings of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad stock by the Pennsylvania interests and an acquisition of the control of the Ontario and Western property by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, not to speak of other minor deals and mergers, it must be said that they excited very little serious discussion anywhere and were nearly wholly destitute of stock market influence.

Although it is altogether probable therefore that the day's rally in prices was mostly due to the operation of mere technical conditions, there was no denying that the general market news was again more favorable than otherwise. This was chiefly because weather reports from the West and South were once more of a highly encouraging sort, leading to a further drop in both the wheat and cotton markets, particularly the former. Rather curiously, the Weather Bureau's weekly summary, published to-day, of the recent state of the weather in the crop sections was quite at variance with data of the kind previously furnished to at least the produce exchanges. The Government's observers made out that the weather in the main was not good for the growing grain, although it was admitted that conditions were more adverse to corn than to other crops. In one sense the diverse character of these conditions has already been recognized by the grain markets because the declining tendency there has been less manifest in corn than in wheat. At the same time in both the grain and cotton trades there is a practical consensus that the weather of the last week has brought about a great improvement in the country's crops taken as a whole. Also to-day the sterling exchange situation wore a more pleasant outlook. The price of sterling here reacted rather sharply, while the Paris cheque fell even more violently, leaving the fair presumption that the English demand for gold has been considerably abated, and additional evidence on the point was presented by a fall in discount rates in the open London money market. After the close of our stock market here it became known that $2,500,000 had been engaged in Paris and $1,500,000 in Berlin for shipment to London. Another straw pointing in a more cheerful direction was the fact that exports from this port in the last week were $14,000,000, as against $12,000,000 last week and $11,000,000 in the corresponding week last year.

THE BOSTON MARKET.

BOSTON, May 24.—Prices for copper shares improved somewhat to-day. Butte and Balaklala and Nipissing were leaders in strength and activity, the former gaining 2 points and the latter closing at the top price of 11⅞. The balance of the list was irregular, with slight gains predominating. Trading in industrials was moderate, with no marked price changes.
