DOUBLE DEFEAT ON THE HILL

ATHLETICS TAKE TWO GAMES FROM NEW YORKS

And the Highlanders Fall Back to Third Place, Detroits Winning From St. Louis—Bostons Beat Washingtons—White Sox and Clevelands Divide.

The Highlanders lost not only first place in the American League race yesterday but fell back to third place. The Athletics took the lead by beating the New Yorks twice, and the Detroits went to second place by downing the St. Louis Browns. The Highlanders were off, very much off. The sudden advent of heat caused Ford to be knocked out of the box for the first time this season. The Clevelands and Chicagos broke even on a double header, and the Bostons nosed out the Washingtons. The results:

Philadelphia, 7; New York, 4—First game.
Philadelphia, 7; New York, 1—Second game.
Boston, 3; Washington, 2.
Detroit, 10; St. Louis, 4.
Cleveland, 3; Chicago, 2—First game.
Chicago, 3; Cleveland, 0—Second game.

FIRST GAME.

The Highlanders fell down hard yesterday on the test that was put up to them in facing the Athletics twice. They inaugurated their double-header season by playing the poorest ball by all odds they have played at home this season. There was little of a first division team in their double exhibition and they were failures at holding on to first place in direct contact with the team that was pushing them closest for that berth. The Athletics in lambasting the hill dwellers twice outplayed them in every way, were faster, more wide-awake and unlike the New Yorks uncovered ball playing of the choicest brand.

The heat had something to do with the home team's poor playing. It was a broiling day, the first of its kind the Highlanders have had this season. Still the Athletics had to stew and sizzle in the same heat. Sun and humidity weren't playing any favorites. Although they weren't any more accustomed to the heat than the New Yorks the Athletics were the better salamanders.

Ford and Morgan were both knocked out of the box in the first game and both also were knocked out by the heat. Each left the game limp from the torridity and Ford had to partake of brandy to brace up when he retired. He had trouble getting the ball up to the plate and more trouble getting it over. A run around the bases took the last bit of starch out of the two pitchers. Barry stuck through the first game but wasn't fit to go on with the second. The grounds were jammed with coatless spectators—20,000 or more—and while those in the field were out of the shade they got the benefit of what breeze there was stirring.

The sixth inning was the undoing of the Highlanders in the first clinch. Baker began it with a two bagger, Davis was hit on a protruding thread of his shirt, Murphy singled and then Barry was hit. Lapp, Hartsel and Oldring also made hits and with the sites all filled Ford gave way to Frill. Frill made Collins foul out, but walked Baker, forcing in the fourth run. The New Yorks retorted with two runs, due to two passes and a clout by Frill, but they couldn't analyze the pitching of Atkins and closed their scoring account in the sixth.

Left handers had it out in the second game, and though Plank was more effective than Vaughn it was the general lassitude of his pals that caused Vaughn to lose. Palmer than flaws in his pitching. Fielding defects and pallid hitting contaminated New York's display. In this game as well as in the first the dolorous voiced Egan made a couple of decisions which were right enough, but he had his hand raised to signal out before the play was completed. He called Knight out on such a play when Knight was fifteen feet from the bag and before the thrown ball had reached Davis's hands. Egan is one of several American League umps who are too previous in this regard.

A muff by Chase and a hit by Hartsel figured in the enemy's first run, and Eddie Collins made one entirely unaided in the third inning. He connected for three bases and with Davis up tried the squeeze. Vaughn put the ball on the inside where Davis couldn't hit it, and Collins tried to get back to third. Mitchell based him, but the cagey Collins flung himself down hat, either that or tumbled accidentally, and Mitchell rolled over him. Collins got up and dashed for the plate and Vaughn muffed Mitchell's throw. It looked as if Mitchell touched Collins when they fell together, but Sheridan thought otherwise.

Sheridan called Hemphill out in the third inning, charging that Wolter interfered with Donohue's throw. Wolter did interfere apparently. Wolter, the only Highlander unterrified by Plank, scored in the fourth on a two bagger and two outs. The wily McInnes stole third in the fourth instead of playing the game according to Hoyle and going home to second on a throw from Mitchell to catch him napping. Of course he couldn't win when the Athletics perpetrated such unconventional tricks. McInnes scored on booting by Austin.

Tired of scoring one at a time the Athletics harvested three tallies in the ninth and without a hit. A hit batter, a base on balls, Laporte's flagrant muff of Oldring's peppery prod and an infield job by Collins rolled the Mackmen a total up to seven.

GIANTS IN RUN CARNIVAL

WITH BROOKLYNS GETTING SHORT END OF SAME.

New Yorks Score Early and Often at Washington Park—Two for the Phillies—Cubs Blank the Reds—The Cardinals and Pirates Beat Each Other.

The Giants braced up yesterday and smothered the Brooklyns completely in the second bout of the series. They made no gain on the Cubs, however, the latter shutting out Cincinnati. As the Phillies took two games from the Bostons the Brooklyns exchanged places with the Quaker club, Dahlen's team retreating to seventh place. Only yesterday said team was talking about going into the first division. The Pittsburgs and Cardinals won a game from each other. The results:

New York, 12; Brooklyn, 1.
Philadelphia, 12; Boston, 0—First game.
Philadelphia, 2; Boston, 1—Second game.
Chicago, 1; Cincinnati, 0.
St. Louis, 6; Pittsburg, 5—First game.

NEW YORK, 12; BROOKLYN, 1.

In their self-appointed task of belaboring the Giants the Brooklyns came to grief yesterday, grief in large quantities. The Giants did the belaboring this time. Washington Park resounded with New York base hits, and the streaming of New York feet over the home plate was as the rush of many waters. The Brooklyns were obliterated. The New Yorks drubbed them full sore. McGraw's men broke away from the shackles of mediocrity that have held them lately and played a game which swept the Brooklyns off their feet.

With Mathewson at the helm for the Giants the latter took heart of grace and put the game on the safe side early in the action. It wasn't long before they had a secure lead, but they kept on amassing runs. Rucker, who made so bold as to hold Mathewson level, was knocked off the eminence in the second inning. Knetzer was unsteady and after five innings of travail gave way to Dessau, who was thumped merrily.

Of the bright galaxy of Brooklyn stars none shone as a first magnitude performer save young Jack Dalton, the Des Moines demon. Five times upon the Lupercal did Dalton appear and five times did he respond with a base hit. Even Des Moines doesn't turn out ball players every day who make five hits per game. Dalton evidently didn't know who he was facing. Ignorance such as his is appalling.

Daubert was out of the game with an injured hand and Burch adorned first base. Mathewson batted in two runs in the second inning after Devlin and Merkle had singled and Meyers had sacrificed. Two passes, a wild heave by Erwin and a second single by Devlin sent two runs over in the third. Dessau survived one inning fairly well, but his medicine was coming to him in the ninth, in which the New Yorks landed on him for a storm of hits and five runs.

Mathewson pitched effectively all the way and with men on bases was at his best. Crandall was sent in when the game was safely sailed away. Fletcher relieved Devlin and Becker took Seymour's place, and both helped themselves to the tidbits the feat afforded.
