MAY NOT INDICT GALLAGHER

OR IF AT ALL FOR CARRYING A CONCEALED WEAPON.

Justice Swayze Advises Grand Jury to Go Slow Because Attack on Gaynor May Yet Prove a Murder and Assailant Would Get Off if Presented for Less.

James J. Gallagher, the discharged city employee who shot Mayor Gaynor and Big Bill Edwards on the deck of a German steamship in Hoboken, may not be indicted at the September term of the Hudson county courts, which began yesterday, as the result of a charge delivered by Supreme Court Justice Francis J. Swayze to the new Grand Jury in which he advised that no true bill be found at the present time unless the surgeons in attendance upon the Mayor can give assurances that "there is no possibility of the wound resulting in death within a year and a day from the time of the assault."

"Sometimes the question of jurisdiction over offences committed upon a vessel flying a foreign flag in our waters may present difficulties," the Justice said. "Fortunately, in the present case, no such difficulty arises, for the Consular convention of 1871 between the German Empire and the United States of America recognizes the jurisdiction of our courts where the acts on board ship are of a nature to disturb the peace and public order in port, or when persons other than officers and crew of the vessel are parties to the disturbance.

"The difficult question that arises in the case is not as to jurisdiction but as to the advisability of present action on your part. We all rejoice that the assault upon Mayor Gaynor does not seem likely to result in his death. The wound inflicted, however, was a dangerous one, and if it should result in death within a year and a day from the time it was inflicted an indictment for murder would be proper.

"At present the prisoner could be indicted for assault with intent to kill, an offence of very much lower degree. In some States it has been held that an indictment and conviction for assault under such circumstances did not preclude a subsequent indictment for murder. This precise question has never been presented in this State.

"A similar question, however, arose some eighty years ago where a man was indicted for arson in burning a dwelling house and also for murder because a human being in the dwelling house died as the result of the fire. The prisoner was tried and convicted for arson, and it was then sought to hold him for the alleged murder. He pleaded that he had already been convicted for the same act, the act of firing the building, and could not be again convicted for that offence. After full discussion the Supreme Court sustained this plea.

"I do not say that there may not be a distinction between that case and the present, but in view of that decision of the Supreme Court I strongly advise you not to find an indictment for the assault upon Mayor Gaynor at the present time unless the surgeons in attendance can assure you that there is no possibility of the wound resulting in death within a year and a day from the time of the assault. If you do find a bill at the present term it would be for assault with intent to kill, and to this indictment the prisoner might plead guilty, and if it subsequently become advisable to indict for murder he would be in a position to interpose a plea that he had already been convicted of the act, and such a plea, even if it should be finally held not to be good, would raise a debatable question.

"You may indict for an assault with intent to kill Mr. Edwards, and if the act of assault upon him was an entirely distinct and separate act from the act of assault upon Mayor Gaynor no legal difficulty would be presented. If, however, the assault upon Mr. Edwards was one and the same act as the assault upon Mayor Gaynor a legal question would arise which the Court of Errors and Appeals of this State has heretofore expressly reserved and has not decided.

"In my judgment prudence counsels that you do not act hastily in this case. No harm can come from delay either to the prisoner or to the cause of public justice, and it is the part of wisdom to avoid as far as possible, any difficult legal question which might arise. As I have said, however, if the surgeons in attendance upon Mayor Gaynor can assure you that there is no possibility of death resulting from his wound within a year and a day then you should find two bills of indictment against the prisoner, one for assault upon Mayor Gaynor and the other for the assault upon Commissioner Edwards."

"I thought perhaps to call your attention to the fact suggested to me by one of my associates in the Supreme Court, that one thirty or more years ago in the eighth part of the State one man was shot by another, apparently recovered from the wound and was out on the street and about his business for some time, but subsequently died as the result of the wound and his assailant was indicted and tried for murder. Such an instance as this adds point to the caution which I have given you.

"There is, however, another offence which the prisoner may properly be tried at the present time. He carried a revolver, it must have been at some time sealed in or about his clothes or person, and for this carrying of a concealed weapon he is indictable. Were it not for a doubt suggested to me some years ago in another county I should think it unnecessary to say more on the subject of this crime.

"The doubt was whether the weapon could be said to have been concealed when as no one saw it when it was fired. Of course if this were a real doubt it would be quite impossible to convict any one of carrying a concealed weapon. You will have no trouble, I am inferring that the weapon was concealed if there is evidence before you that at the time it was not visible and at the time it was actually used."

QUIET DAY FOR MAYOR.

Secretary Adamson His Only Caller. Not Talking Politics.

DAVOS, N. Y., Sept. 20.—Mayor Gaynor spent a quiet day to-day. His only caller was Secretary Robert Adamson. In the morning he took one of his walks across the fields and this afternoon he went driving. He is not talking politics for publication.

LORIMER READY FOR TRIAL.

Appears at Hotel to Meet Senate Investigators.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Senator William Lorimer voluntarily went to meet to-day those who are to determine whether his election to the Senate was accomplished through fraud and bribery.

His appearance in the lobby of the Congress Hotel to-day with Edridge Harvey, attorney, created much interest.

E. Ward, private secretary to Senator Lorimer, called upon Senator Burrows, chairman of the Senate subcommittee, in his room in the Congress Hotel to-day and was closeted with him for two hours. At the conclusion of the conference Senator Burrows refused to discuss the situation.

Senator Lorimer had been notified at the time of the last continuance of the hearing that the first session would be held at 10 o'clock this morning, and came to the minute he stepped into the hotel corridor. As a matter of fact no hearing was to be held until late this afternoon and the actual hearing of the evidence will begin until to-morrow.

Senator Lorimer met several of his friends informally, however. Senators Jones, Gamble and Heyburn chanced to be in the lobby while the accused Senator was seated in conversation with Attorney Harvey and each greeted him cordially.

The committee will meet again at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

MRS. CHANLER NO. 1 ACTS.

To Protect Herself Would Have Deed to Cavalieri Set Aside.

Despatches from Paris yesterday said that Mrs. Julia Chamberlain Chanler, who was the first wife of Robert W. Chanler and who is living in France with her two children, Julia and Dorothy, had instructed her lawyers, Alexander, Watriss & Polk of 32 Nassau street, to bring suit here to set aside the Chanler-Cavalieri ante-nuptial agreement on the ground that the $20,000 a year that Chanler agreed to pay his first wife and her children for their support is endangered.

Frederick W. Watriss of the firm said yesterday that he was not at liberty to discuss the matter or to deny or affirm a report that a lis pendens would be filed on the property here following the filing of summons and complaint in the action.

A lawyer associated with the Chanler interests said yesterday that he had good reason for believing that Cavalieri has instructed her lawyers to make overtures to the Chanler estate for a cash settlement and that if any figure that seems to her to be within reason is named she will accept it on her arrival here.

Many persons thronged the City Court yesterday under the impression that Robert W. Chanler was to appear there and possibly be questioned as to the circumstances of the ante-nuptial agreement. All that happened was that Irving M. Minsky of counsel for the Fifth avenue tailor who is suing Chanler for $587, filed the order permitting substituted service, and under it Chanler will have until next Monday to reply.

Sidney Harris, counsel for Chanler, said he didn't think it was necessary for Chanler to file a formal notice revoking the power of attorney to Cavalieri, either with the Register or County Clerk. It would be necessary only to put the revocation in the hands of the trustees of the estate.

"The power of attorney will not be revoked unless such a step is necessary," said Mr. Harris.

The Italian National Club, at 5 West Sixteenth street, which Chanler joined at the request of Cavalieri and where he dined with her frequently, put a claim for $92 due on an unpaid bill in the hands of Sidney Harris yesterday. Chanler was a member of the club just a month before he went to Paris to be married and ran up a bill of $300, part of which he paid.

GOOD TIMES ON BAD CHECKS.

Mistaken Ways of Raising Mardi Gras Money Imputed to Arthur Lazarus.

Arthur Lazarus, a young man who the police say has a habit of signing checks when he possesses no bank account to draw from and then paying for all sorts of finery with them, was in Jefferson Market court yesterday charged with forgery, grand larceny and passing worthless tokens. His unlawful activities, it is charged, have extended over two months and the fruits of them have been expended in Coney Island Mardi Gras merrymaking.

There were five or more complainants yesterday who said that Lazarus bought from them and paid with worthless checks or that he had signed their names to checks. The amounts involved range from $16 to $120. So far as the police know only a few hundred dollars was secured. Lazarus was held in $2,000 bail for examination to-morrow.

Charlton's Case Up To-day.

The postponed hearing in the case of Porter Charlton, who confessed that he killed his wife at Lake Como, Italy, last June will take place at the new court house in Jersey City this morning. Prosecutor of the Pleas Pierre P. Garven will resist all attempts on the part of the lawyers for the defence to prove that Charlton is insane. The testimony will be forwarded to the Secretary of State at Washington, who will pass on the question of extradition.

JOE COSTER'S FIGHT.

He Outpoints Phil McGovern in 10 Rounds at the Fairmont.

Joe Coster defeated Phil McGovern, Jerry's younger brother, in a ten round bout at the Fairmont A. C. last night. Coster, a finished boxer, was the master at all stages. In one round, the second, McGovern had an advantage which was the result of a heavy left hand swing on the jaw that sent Coster heading into the ropes, but in the other rounds Coster held his aggressive opponent safely.

McGovern rushed and swung messingly, but he could not reach through Coster's great defence, while the latter used a clean cut jab to telling effect. At the end of the scrap McGovern was tired and took a severe beating. He was outpointed and outclassed by a very wide margin. Coster will box meet Frankie Burns in a bout that may produce a suitable opponent for Johnny Celion.

Coster and McGovern did not scale at 116 pounds, the bantam limit, as they agreed to do when the match was made, but met at catchweights, each carrying about 120 pounds as they came into the ring in fighting togs. Billy Gibson was the referee, as William Job, the regular official, had an injured hand.

When the gong sounded McGovern came out of his corner with a crouch and rushed. Coster, standing erect, hooked the blows with neat skill and countered sharply, outboxed McGovern, then went in to sling and getting Coster on the ropes he landed several hard blows on the head.

As the second round began McGovern boxed in, but Coster stepped away, throwing in sharp jabs to the face. McGovern unhooked a right that went to the ear. Then with his left off on the jaw, he sent Coster back into the ropes. McGovern cut loose with a storm of blows and Coster was on the run when time was up.

When the third round began McGovern rushed. Coster blocked and countered until McGovern, coming closer, reached the neck with a right. More lefts drew the blood from McGovern's mouth, but he rushed his man. Coster continued to force in lefts to the face until McGovern's chest was crimson.

McGovern's rushes in the fourth round were blocked and well met. Coster blocked some dangerous punches and put in several solid smashes in the ruse. Then McGovern ran into a volley of left handers and missed a heavy set for the jaw. Coster, blocking another rush, shot a right to the jaw and McGovern tottered. Time.

McGovern slugged harder than ever in the fifth round. He missed many blows, but got one right over to the jaw that plainly jarred his antagonist. Coster, however, mixed it and with clean hooks and jabs he soon had McGovern covering up. McGovern did more rushing and swinging, but Coster's defence was superb while he continued to score with well directed punches.

Coster's foot work nullified McGovern's heavy swings in the sixth round, but the little Italian was always there with the quick jabs that went straight to Phil's nose and mouth.

McGovern's attack became slower then and Coster taking the offensive tried for a knockout, missing the point of the jaw by a hair's breadth.

Rushing and swinging wildly McGovern still showed his vitality in the seventh round. Coster, however, kept away and hooked the left to the face time and again with such precision that McGovern's blood was flowing copiously. McGovern could not land an effective wallop while Coster peppered him until the time was up.

Missing a left swing McGovern received a right uppercut in the mouth as the eighth round opened. McGovern rushed and tried to corner his man, but the latter was too quick for him. Coster sent in rapid fire jabs and hooks that made Phil clinch.

Coster then showered lefts into McGovern's face and danced away. McGovern seemed to be tired and weak after that and Coster almost turned him around with a hard left on the side. Coster also hooked a left to the jaw and McGovern clinched.

Coming out for the last round, McGovern rallied and cut loose with hard slugging, but his blows were either blocked or avoided. Coster countered with good effect. McGovern clinched and, with a left hand free, Coster smashed his damaged nose and mouth repeatedly. Coster then cut loose and hammered McGovern with left and rights until the latter was clinching. Coster kept up this assault until time was up and won with plenty to spare.

GIANTS ONLY A POINT AHEAD

DIVIDE WITH CARDINALS WHILE PIRATES WIN TWO.

Crandall Hammered, but Mathewson Strong in Pinches—Cubs Made Assurance Doubly Sure by Swatting Brooklyns Twice—Quakers Shut Out Reds.

The Giants are only one point ahead of the Pittsburgs in the second place struggle. The former only broke even with the Cardinals yesterday, while the Pittsburgs beats the Bostons twice. In increasing their pennant prospects the Cubs made assurance doubly sure by cleaning up a double header with the Brooklyns. The Phillies whitewashed the Reds and put another blight on Griffith's hopes of the first division. The results:

St. Louis, 5; New York, 1—First game.

New York, 3; St. Louis, 2—Second game.

Chicago, 5; Brooklyn, 4—First game.

Chicago, 3; Brooklyn, 0—Second game.

ST. LOUIS (N. L.), 5; NEW YORK (N. L.), 1—FIRST GAME.

The Giants culled a run in the first inning of the first fracas with the Cardinals yesterday, but didn't make another the live-long game. The Cardinals kept under cover during the first half of the contest, spread themselves in the latter part and made runs freely. Consequently they won. In the second game the Giants took a small and early lead, but large enough to win.

The Giants were outbatted in both games, though they did a lot of hard hitting in the first that didn't produce base hits. The Cardinals had more success at steering their drives to safe places. Altoona, Pa., furnished a pitcher for St. Louis in one Steele. Between him and Crandall it was Steele preferred.

But for erroneous flinging by the St. Louis battery in the first inning the Giants wouldn't have scored at all. Doyle was shot in the leg by a pitched ball, and after limping to first sprinted to third on a single to right by Murray. Murray's steal drew a bad throw from Phelps and Larry and his wounded limb fetched each other home.

A St. Louis run formula was forthcoming in the sixth inning. A big double by little Hauser, a single by Steele and a home run lift into the right field stand by Ellis tallied three men. A triple by Evans and Meyers's muff of a throw home by Merkle enlarged the St. Louis total to four in the seventh. A large triple by small Huggins and thrust to the port plaza by Ellis made a corpulent five for Bresnahan Sahib and his Rajahs.

Double plays bloomed in abundance. There were five of them. Also there were steaming stops by Hauser and Mowrey. Doyle launched a double play by a jumping stop of a smash from Evans, which had strong but fleeting resemblance to a base hit.

The sibilant battery, Zmich and Bliss, were good performers for the Giants in the second game. Zmich's curves were hard to assay, but his control was poor. The Giants stole ten bases, keeping up a constant raid on the cushions and successfully, because they got a big start on Zmich and Bliss was slow in getting his throws away.

Two of New York's walks wound up in runs, and that's one reason why five hits off Zmich were more productive than ten off Mathewson. Another was the effectiveness of Mathewson with men on bases. Seemed as if the St. Louis hits were merely indulgence on Matty's part. Hauser was the only prelate who made a hit at a juncture when Matty was anxious that a hit should be made. Hauser made a home run in the fifth inning, but it was a fluke. The ball shattered across the foul line after passing third base and went through a gate between the bleachers and the grand stand.

After being passed in the first inning Devore stole second and third and came home on a double to Snodgrass. The Cardinals made three slings in the second, the third with two out, and Murray turned it to the plate in time to nip Evans. Doyle made the most useful hit of the game in the second inning. Mathewson tripled. Devore walked and stole and Doyle cracked a single straight through the diamond. It meant two more runs for the New Yorks and gave them a safe surplus to tide them safely over the game.

Huggins hit a two bagger in the sixth, and with two out came across when a fourth ball to Konetchy got away from Schlei. Meyers had been hurt by a pitched ball while catching the inning before. The Cardinals would have tied the score in the eighth if Ellis, who opened with a hit, hadn't been thrown out when Snodgrass threw out and Mowrey sent a long single to centre when Snodgrass hooted. It would have put the defunct Ellis on third and Konetchy's wound have brought him in.

Evans struck out and left Mowrey on first. Evans was put out twice in the inning. Before he fanned he knocked a fly to Snodgrass but Klem had stepped away from the plate for a ball or something and the play was null and void.

CHICAGO (N. L.), 5; BROOKLYN, 4—FIRST GAME.

It is not thought now that the Brooklyns will win the pennant. It looks as if the Chicagos had a chance that is unless they are all arrested and put in close confinement or flown out of an airship. They were at their best in Brooklyn yesterday, were the Cubs, and there was nothing for the Brooklyns to do but stand from under. They stood twice. They put up a stubborn battle in the first game, but were shut out in the second.

The Chicago parties sprinkled two baggers around the field with a lavish hand in the first game, Schulte alone harvesting three and had a big lead when the Brooklyns got to work. By good gutting in the fifth and eighth innings the Brooklyns acquired four runs and had Miner Brown anxious, but the three fingered artist wouldn't let them go any further.

Overall, who has struck his gait again, struck out thirteen men in the second game and allowed three hits. Overall, by the way, is being groomed for the world's series. He is the pitcher on whom the Cubs are placing their chief dependence to beat the Athletics if he is in form, and he had some form yesterday.

The local rooters objected to Umpire Johnstone's decision on balls and strikes in the second game and when Manager Dahlen joined the objectory forces he was chased to the clubhouse.
