

Smells that Go Far.
The fumes and exhalations from the sulphur springs of Colorado are distinguished at a distance of fully twenty miles. The peculiar pungent smells resulting from bush and prairie fires may be perceived at a distance of thirty miles or more. The delicious perfume of the forests of Ceylon is carried by the wind twenty-five miles out to sea, while in foggy weather travelers 100 miles from the land have recognized their proximity to the coast of Columbia by the sweet smell brought to them on a breeze from the shore.

The Most Pleasant Way

A HORRIBLE PUNISHMENT.

A Chilian Criminal Shot and Tied in a Bag with Rats and Snakes.

The terrible punishments inflicted on criminals in Chili are now fortunately going away with. How terrible these penalties were the following story, told by a correspondent from Concepcion, will show: Less than forty years ago a beautiful girl, whose parents were among the wealthiest citizens of Concepcion, married the son of another equally prominent family, and the pair settled down to housekeeping with flattering prospects of future happiness. For several months their course of true love ran smoothly enough, and then the young jealousy took possession of the young wife—whether on reasonable grounds or not I do not know. Among these passionate, high-strung, irascible people the "green-eyed monster" plays a more desperate part than cold-blooded Northerners can well understand, and the prisons are filled with its victims. The senora in question, mad with jealous rage, crept out of bed one night, heated a kettle of lard to the boiling point and deliberately poured it over the head of her sleeping husband. Of course he died, after a few hours of torture; and so did she, in a no less shocking manner. Though her father offered the whole of his wealth to save her life and the mother begged the Governor on her knees to inflict some less horrible punishment, the poor demented girl was dragged to "the hill of death," or place of public executions, and shot; and then her yet warm body was tied up in a sack, together with living rats and snakes, and sunk in the middle of the river.

Cities Are Healthy.
The doctors occasionally make some pretty wild statements. An authority on the health of cities, for instance, says that if all the human race lived in cities like London, Paris or New York, mankind would become extinct in less than two centuries. Such statements are the worst nonsense in the world, for as everybody knows the strongest, most athletic specimens of humanity are to be found in the cities, and during the civil war it was commonly remarked that the men of regiments recruited in large cities could stand more fatigue than those recruited in the country districts. City life may be more exhausting than country life, and the average length of life in the cities may be somewhat shorter, but everybody who has tried both knows perfectly well that city food is better prepared and more wholesome than that used in the country, while a regard for sanitation is daily making the condition of life in a large city more conducive to longevity.

One Fool Less.
A few days ago at Hennessy, O. T. a recent convert to Christian Science, who had been told that under sufficient faith he could pick up a rattlesnake harmlessly, made the test. The snake fastened its fangs in the man's arm and the wound proved fatal in a couple of hours, despite the prayers of his fellow believers. There is one fool less on earth.

An Enemy Baffled.
There is an enemy with whom thousands are familiar all their lives, because they are born with a tendency to biliousness. With this enemy they are constantly battling with ineffectual weapons. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will baffle it. Mere purgatives will not reform a disordered condition of the liver indicated, not by constipation alone, but also by sick headaches, yellowness of the skin and eyeballs, nausea, furred tongue and uneasiness, more particularly upon pressure on the right side, upon the bowels, and the like. Avoid drastic purgatives which grip and weaken the intestines, and substitute this world-famous and reliable medicine, which also removes malarial, stomachic and kidney complaints, rheumatism and nervousness. As a laxative of the bowels, it is both efficient and safe, it improves appetite, sleep and the ability to digest, and possesses the additional advantage of a standard tonic.

Had to Eat the Shells.
One night this week two well-known New York printers sat down to a remarkable feast. One ate the meats of a quart of peanuts while the other ate the shells. It is needless to say that the feast was the result of a wager, and the fellow who fed on husks bet on Harrison.

A Mother's Story
"When my boy was 2½ years of age, a fall brought on hip disease, which gradually grew worse until, when he was 6, he could not walk, and we had him treated nine months at the Children's Hospital in Boston. But when he came home he was worse, and the doctors said nothing could be done. I began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved and was able to walk at once. The fourteen abscesses on his hip healed up, his appetite improved and he could walk, at first with crutches, then without. He is now perfectly well, lively as any boy." Mrs. EMMA V. DUFF, Walpole, Mass.

33 per cent. difference. Royal Baking Powder

Strongest, Purest, Most Economical.

As to whether any of the baking powders are equal to the "Royal," the official tests clearly determine. When samples of various baking powders were purchased from the grocers, and analyzed by the United States Government Chemists and the Chemists of State and City Boards of Health, the reports revealed the fact that the "Royal" contained from 28 per cent. to 60 per cent. more leavening strength than the others, and also that it was more perfectly combined, absolutely pure, and altogether wholesome. As most of these powders are sold to consumers at the same price as the "Royal," by the use of the Royal Baking Powder there is an average saving of over one third, besides the advantage of assured purity and wholesomeness of food, and of bread, biscuit and cake made perfectly light, sweet, and palatable.

The official reports also reveal the presence, in other powders, of alum, lime or sulphuric acid, by which their use is made a matter of grave danger to the consumer.

Whenever a baking powder is sold at a lower price than the "Royal," or with a gift, it is a certain indication that it is made from alum, and is to be avoided under all circumstances.

Farmers, Save Your Cedar Trees.
Every land-owner with cedar among his timber would do well to see that none of it is cut down to waste, for it is a wood that is in great demand and the price of which is likely to go up very steadily. Florida has made millions of dollars out of its cedar, and other States can and will follow suit, for the number of pencils manufactured is getting greater every year, and this is the only kind of wood that can be used with prospect of success in the process. More than half the wood cut for pencils is shipped to Germany, where more than half the world's supply is actually turned out, and both France and England also take large quantities. The pencil manufacturing interest is the easiest possible to control, there being less than thirty manufacturing in the entire world, and, until recently, the trust that had been formed worked like a charm. One of the members has since broken away, and competition has resulted in easier prices, but the output has increased in consequence of the removal of some of the restrictions on production, and more cedar wood is being exported than ever.

To Help London Workingmen.
Distress among the unemployed laboring people in London is very great. Mr. Henry H. Fowler, president of the local Government Board, has prepared a circular advising the local authorities to modify it by making roads, constructing sewers and cleaning the streets, paying the men employed to do the work regular day's wages. The authorities, he adds, should aim to be useful to labor and avoid making paupers of those out of work.
