THE WEATHER FORECAST

WASHINGTON PREDICTIONS FOR TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.

For eastern New York, snow to-day and colder to-night; fair and colder to-morrow; moderate variable winds, shifting to brisk and probably high northwesterly to-night.

For New England, snow to-day; fair and colder to-morrow; moderate variable winds, shifting to brisk northwesterly to-night.

For New Jersey, snow, followed by clearing to-day; colder at night; fair and colder to-morrow; moderate, variable winds, shifting to brisk northwesterly this afternoon.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—The cold wave lost its force yesterday over nearly all the country east of the Rocky Mountains. In the morning it was still below zero over the greater part of New York, some parts of New Jersey, the eastern lake regions and New England. It was below the freezing point over nearly all the country except the peninsula of Florida and in the extreme Northwest, where it was somewhat warmer. There was a second area of cold weather over northwestern Canada spreading into the northern part of Minnesota and the lake regions. South of this the pressure was lower and there was a gradual rise of temperature.

Light rain and snow fell in the extreme Northwest, from the north Pacific coast into northern Montana, and there was some rain on the south Atlantic coast, scattered flurries of snow in the lake regions and increasing cloudiness in the middle Atlantic and New England States. Elsewhere the weather was fair.

In this city the day was cloudy, with a general rise of temperature; snow began at 11 o'clock at night; wind, light to fresh north; average humidity, 76 per cent; barometer, corrected to read to sea level, at 8 A. M., 30.37; 3 P. M., 30.23.

The temperature yesterday, as recorded by the official thermometer, is shown in the annexed table:

| | 1912 | 1911 | | 1912 | 1911 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 9 A. M. | 6° | 41° | 6 P. M. | 23° | 19° |

| 3 P. M. | 16° | 46° | 12 Mid. | 19° | 14° |

Lowest temperature, 17°, at 4:45 A. M.
Highest temperature, 26°, at 1:45 P. M.

● Weather Forecast for the Week.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The Weather Bureau to-day issued the following bulletin:

"No severe cold wave will cross the country during the coming week. The general pressure distribution, as shown by the weather map of the northern hemisphere during the last several days, is such as to indicate a general reaction to normal temperature conditions over the eastern half of the country by the middle of the week and to temperature above the seasonal average in western districts throughout the week.

"The week will be one of generally fair weather east of the Rocky Mountains, except that a short period of rains in Southern and snows in Northern States will attend a disturbance which will appear in the Northwest Tuesday, cross the middle West Wednesday or Thursday and the Eastern States about Friday.

"Precipitation will be above the normal in the north Pacific States."
