FINANCIAL NEWS AND COMMENT

Political Developments Construed as Being Decidedly Encouraging.

GENERAL RISE IN PRICES

Indications Pronounced of a Sold Out Condition of the Stock Market.

The hardening tendency of the stock market, which has been visible enough despite the current dulness through the present week, resulted yesterday in a broad and general advance in quotations and a large increase in the volume of Stock Exchange business. It is highly probable that this advance in quotations would have occurred without any specific news, finding sufficient basis in the unmistakable improvement in business, the bright prospect for the crops and other considerations of a fundamental character which have become especially prominent since the beginning of the present month and have left their due impression upon the minds of financial interests quite irrespective of questions of politics. As regards politics level headed people in Wall Street have naturally had their attention drawn in the last few days to the fact that despite the excitement at Chicago and the extremely confused state of the political situation generally the stock market was unperturbed and even strong, and it may be questioned whether at any similar stage in a political campaign before a smaller amount of interest in it was exhibited in the financial district. This may be due in part no doubt to the peculiar characteristics of the present contest with its small number of rival candidates for the nomination, at least, of the party whose convention is now in progress.

With a primary condition existing, however, in which holders of securities see no reason whatever to sell stocks from the point of view of the state of business itself, and with an inclination plainly manifest on their part on the other hand to add to present holdings of securities, the stock market was in a shape to respond to political developments of a cheerful nature. News of this sort yesterday assumed the form of indications of an elimination of the leading demagogue and agitator at Chicago and the nomination of a candidate who could be heartily supported by all Republicans except those who are more personal followers of Mr. Roosevelt than they are Republicans. These indications may not, of course, prove trustworthy, but the nomination of a compromise Republican Presidential candidate has been more and more foreshadowed as the necessary outcome of the situation for many days past. Therefore yesterday the stock market took heart and advanced. It was an advance too that was not confined to any particular quarter of the market or to the so-called leading stocks. It was of most diversified character and embraced every active issue.

A particularly strong stock was of course American Can common, in which no doubt a large public interest has become excited. The rapid advance in this stock this year has caused many criticisms of the movement in it as partaking of manipulation, as being the work of a few large speculators, and so forth; but there is room for the inquiry whether those making these criticisms have paid sufficient attention to the extraordinary and unquestioned business development of the American Can Company and of the fact that the entire value of the common stock capitalization represents at yesterday's closing price less than $16,000,000. One aspect of the movement in the stock yesterday was obvious, and that is that the floating supply of it in Wall Street had become very scarce.

Another strong stock was United States Steel common, and here again trade reasons and an oversold state of the stock seemed to be behind the rise. The feature of the iron and steel market of the moment seems to be the low stocks of commodities in warehouses and in consumers' hands, and a not unnatural subject of fear is whether the experience of the iron and steel trade in the year to come is to duplicate that of copper. The situation is already one in which manufacturers find orders for prompt shipment more and more difficult to execute. The most important financial announcement proper of the day was the formal publication by the syndicate of bankers headed by Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of the terms of purchase by the syndicate of $10,000,000 six year 5 per cent. notes of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. The notes are secured by an equal amount of the first mortgage sinking fund 5 per cent. bonds of the new subway company and also by the pledge of $10,000,000 of Brooklyn Rapid Transit convertible 4 per cent. refunding bonds, and the notes are convertible into first mortgage bonds of the company at the option of the holder until January 1, 1916. It was announced before the noon hour of business that the books of the syndicate were already closed, a large subscription having been made.
