R. G. DUN GOING TO BROOKLYN.

Company Moving From Broadway because of Subway Work.

The R. G. Dun Company has bought the northwest corner of Butler and Nevins streets, Brooklyn, as a site for a new building. The company has been at 290 Broadway for many years.

The building of the new Broadway subway interfered so much with their printing plant that the firm decided to relocate. The Brooklyn corner is 100X103. It was used formerly by the Halstead company as a lumber yard. Building operations will be begun soon. The structure will be built in such manner than additional floors may be added to the initial building at any time.
