FINANCIAL NEWS AND COMMENT

Another Day of All Around Advance in the Stock Market.

SOME LATE SOFTENING

One Excellent Appointment to the Federal Reserve Board.

There was a rather unexpectedly strong session in the stock market yesterday. Enough news of a somewhat unfavorable character was published to have affected prices adversely had not Wall Street been in a mood to continue the reflection of the more hopeful views which began to prevail a week ago. The fact that the share list had had a very pronounced recovery from the extreme of last month's depression rather inclined the trading fraternity to approach the new week with reactionary anticipations on technical grounds alone. It was not, however, until late in the day that signs of receding tendencies were visible, and these were not marked enough to indicate any material weakening of the position of stocks. Moreover, the drift of opinion favored purchases on reactions as long as the market had before it this week's crop report and the hope of a satisfactory decision in the railroad rate case.

Foreign influences contributed nothing to the support of quoted values. The London market was rather heavy except for Mexican securities and the cables reported financial difficulties at Paris arising from embarrassed conditions in the pearl and diamond trade. Strong continental bidding for gold at London pointed to an increase of pressure here in the direction of gold experts, a new movement already having been inaugurated by the million dollar engagement announced last Saturday. The foreign dealings in the Wall Street stock market were on the selling side, but this, like other selling, was readily absorbed.

There was not only a further forced retirement of short contracts but there seemed to be a fairly broad expansion of buying for the rise. The market was moderately active and total transactions were up to the average scale of trading recently. Standard stocks and specialties alike moved upward and a substantial array of net gains was shown at the close, although final quotations were in numerous instances materially below the best of the day.

Wall Street seemed to ignore the confused phases of the Mexican situation, perhaps because of the feeling that, however sensitive quoted values might prove to a reappearance of war clouds, stocks already had had their seasoning on account of Mexico. In other respects there was nothing predominantly good in advices from Washington.

Their best feature was the unqualifiedly excellent selection of Paul M. Warburg as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, but the banking community was at a loss what to make of the choice of the aged Richard Olney for governor of the board. Nor was financial opinion disposed to jump at the conclusion that the remaining appointments would meet the requirements of the Administration of the great banking experiment to which the country is committed.

It was some tribute to the intrinsic strength the share list has regained that it was not obviously responsive to any of the unpleasant aspects of political information, including the reports of determined insistence at the White House on the enactment of the full programme of legislation already laid down for the present session of Congress, especially the vast alteration in the lines of business legality contemplated by the "anti-trust" measures which are now taking shape.

A variety of matters engaged more or less attention during the day, some of which had particular or general significance. There was much inquiry about the outcome of the Missouri Pacific negotiation, but no definite information was obtainable. The Wall Street understanding is that provision for the Missouri Pacific's financial needs depends altogether on the extent to which the purveyors of fresh capital can be assured of freedom from past influences. Speaking bluntly, it is the Wall Street belief that there will be no financial help for Missouri Pacific without the elimination of certain interests, but it is also believed that the logic of the siuation makes such an elimination inevitable.

Not much fresh light was cast on Rock Island affairs, but it is likely that not so much cash will have to be raised to put the property in shape as is indicated by the current reports of its monetary needs. The annual report of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company showed a deficit of $1,674,000 after the payment of dividends and the exhibit provoked no little wonder about the pending deal for the absorption of the International Smelting and Refining Company which, according to official statements, is decidedly hard up.

Call money renewed at 1½ per cent., the lowest renewal rate of the year, and a direct response to the exceedingly comfortable position showed in last Saturday's bank statement. There were tokens of imminent announcements of new corporate financing, the Baltimore and Ohio note issue being perhaps next in order. Notice was taken of the large oversubscription for the city of Baltimore's offering of $7,000,000 of 4 per cent. bonds, which were sold at 96¼, the sale showing that there was in some directions an excellent investment demand, although the irregularities of the investment market were shown by the failure of a Philadelphia and New York brokerage house, which was carried down by the weight of unsalable holdings of bonds.
