FINANCIAL NEWS AND COMMENT

Resumption of Floor Trading in the Stock Market To-day.

PRICES UP ON I. C. C. RUMOR

When the Stock Exchange opens to-day for floor trading in a specified list of stocks it will be recognized as the certification of financial judgment that the crisis caused by the European war has ended and that henceforth the processes and activities of the banking and business community will be more nearly in the nature of a normal reflection of factors of value. In other words the necessary financial and business adjustments to the fact of the war itself have been completed and from now on the process of adjustment will be one of responding to developments as they occur either in the war or in any other field. The facilities for such adjustments have at any rate been restored.

Vast as is the bond business which Wall Street does on the average, the proportion of it customarily transacted on the Stock Exchange is small. The trading in stocks on the floor is of much greater consequence and significance. Accordingly the qualified removal of embargoes on floor trading in listed shares, no matter how incomplete the list nor what restrictions of prices are established, is much more a real reopening of the Stock Exchange than the opening of the bond department two weeks ago.

Wall Street has been all this week inclining to postpone operations in bonds as well as stocks to see what would happen after open trading in stocks got under way. The chances seem to be that as usual under such circumstances nothing at all will happen, at least not in the category of surprise and probably nothing unfavorable. Reasonable expectations are entertained that the market will be one of small beginnings but that it is likely to grow modestly though steadily and that the increase of dealings is not likely to be at the expense of prices.

In preparation for the stock market resumption the committee of five has arranged and published a new set of minimum prices for stocks. It was at once noted when the prices appeared that substantial reductions from the minimums hitherto held had been effected in many cases. There can be nothing but approval for this policy. The time to lower the level of restrictions was clearly in advance of the opening and while quoted values were showing the firmness which they have been exhibiting lately.

Trading in bonds was of sustained volume, with prices comparatively steady to strong. A very fair gauge of the investment market was the announcement of the bankers who took the new offering of Chicago and Northwestern Railroad 5 per cents, that the advance subscription had been very large. There is a feeling that too high a price for capital may have been indicated in this operation, but more can be told about that in time, for there is other new financing to be done.

Both bonds and stocks were obviously strengthened by the circulation of a circumstantial report that the Interstate Commerce Commission had decided to grant the Eastern railroads the increase in rates asked for. Some railroad shares rose very sharply in the trading through the Stock Exchange clearing house. The movement was particularly interesting as suggesting what would be likely to happen should the commission in fact render so favorable a decision.

That the ruling can be of any other character is difficult to believe. The logic of events and of necessity has led to only one conclusion lately, which was that the commission must take advantage of the war emergency to make the finding which should have been handed down last July when the application of the railroads was rejected.

Among the matters of marketwise and business news which attracted attention was the further display of strength in prices for copper metal. This is so far the best feature which has appeared in any line of business depressed by the outbreak of the European war. In the cotton market prices went still lower and have a good deal to contend against in the huge weight of the crop. There was no quotable change in the domestic money market, but in foreign exchange reichsmarks underwent a very pronounced reaction.

GOSSIP OF WALL STREET.

Specialists All.

The stock market will open to-day with business under entirely new conditions for every one. But nobody's business will be more unfavorably affected than that of the floor trader who expects to make a livelihood chasing eighths. The doubling of the transfer tax has made the floor trader's lot a hard one. It has practically put him out of business. The odds are too much against him with the "kitty" taking $4 a hundred every trade. Therefore every trader is willing, nay extremely anxious, to become a specialist in an active stock, which is about the only thing an unattached broker can turn to. A specialist takes orders from other brokers who are too busy to attend to them themselves. Amalgamated Copper is the one leading speculative favorite which will be admitted to trading on the floor to-day. That is why there are already ten specialists in Amalgamated to fill the vacancy caused by the unfortunate death some time ago of a man who was the specialist in that stock for many years. Brokers are offering themselves as specialists in almost every stock in the list. They are making applications by personal canvass from firm to firm, they are bombarding the commission houses with letters and are even advertising themselves in the newspapers.

Relief From Taxation.

Pessimism over the onerous burden placed upon stock dealings by the new war revenue tax was lightened slightly by the ruling made by the Internal Revenue office that the payment of a 25 cent tax will not be required for the execution of the power of attorney carried on the back of stock certificates. As the war revenue bill was first interpreted by the Stock Exchange authorities the use of this power of attorney in transferring called for a 25 cent tax in addition to the $4 a hundred shares on stock sales demanded by the State and Federal taxes. The 25 cent tax would have been an especial burden on odd lot dealings. For instance, a "split up" of 100 shares into ten share lots would have cost the odd lot dealer $2.50 besides the $4 that must now be paid. There was also danger of double and triple payment of the tax in the operation.

Foreign Liquidation.

A very short time ago the fear of foreign liquidation was in the mind of the whole financial district. Now, because there has been no evidence of a great quantity through the carefully restricted channels provided for dealings, foreign liquidation is scouted by many observers as a myth. One of the new theories on this subject is that there will be no heavy selling because American securities will be held abroad as reserves, on account of their ready marketability as compared with European securities. American securities, it is asserted, will to some extent take the place of British consols and other standard issues, both because they possess a greater marketability and because they are less liable to disturbance from untoward developments in the great war. While American securities might have a special appeal to Europeans as reserves, it is plain that cash would be preferred in their place. Even if no rush to sell from abroad may now be expected, it is obvious that European holders will be glad to sell if they can at attractive prices.
