The statement was made in answer to a question whether any part of the Duchess's money will go to help the Duke, who has $1,000,000 worth of debts. Zimmermann's will specifically provides that nothing is to go toward paying the Dukes' debts. Attorney Bruce holds the estate, and the Duchess only receives the income.

POET RILEY'S EX-BOSS, WICKERSHAM, DIES

Walsh Estate's Manager Once Had Hoosier Singer in His Sign Painting Gang.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Turner A. Wickersham, manager of the estate of the late Thomas F. Walsh, the Colorado mining capitalist, died suddenly of heart disease here to-day.

Mr. Wickersham was born at Anderson, Ind., and travelled through the country in his youth with the Hoosier poet James Whitcomb Riley, being the foreman of a gang of sign painters of whom Riley was one. The first large contract for sign work executed by the Wickersham's travelling painters was the Bull Durham tobacco signs, which, glaring from dead walls, mountainsides and fences throughout the country made a profound impression on advertisers and artists. Mr. Wickersham suggested the Bull Durham advertisements to the tobacco people in North Carolina, who were at first sceptical about them.

He was very resourceful in matters of money making and turned his hands to many things in the course of a successful career. He was fond of telling stories of the early days of the poet Riley in the sign painting business.

Mr. Walsh was attracted to Wickersham while the latter was operating in the West as a real estate agent and when the wealthy miner came to Washington to live he brought Wickersham with him in a confidential capacity and in his will made him permanent agent of his large estate.

BOSTON ORCHESTRA HEARD ONCE MORE

Brilliant Performance of Masterpieces by Brahms and Strauss.

DR. MUCK WELCOMED

The local orchestras having opened their seasons, it remained for the Boston Symphony Orchestra to come to town and give its first concert at Carnegie Hall last night. The auditorium was filled and there were the familiar expressions of pleasure at the reappearance of Dr. Karl Muck and his admirable body of musicians and of satisfaction at the beauty of the performance. The programme consisted of the E minor symphony of Brahms, the "Manfred" overture of Schumann, Richard Strauss's tone poem "Death and Transfiguration" and Dvorak's overture "Husitska." The list was too long by just this last number, for sufficient time had already been occupied, and, what was more important, a symmetrical and complete artistic scheme had been made.

But when interpretation rises to such a high plane as that of last evening minor sins should be condoned. Possibly those to whom the most chaste art is the most precious regretted that the playing of the orchestra rose to its supreme level in the tone poem of Strauss. The Brahms symphony was beautifully performed, but the orchestral virtuosity of Strauss opened the flood gates of the Bostonians' technic. Such a flow of gorgeously deep and exquisitely smooth orchestral tone must have refreshed and uplifted every soul.

Dr. Muck's skill in searching out the melodic idea in each page and bringing it to the hearer's attention without ever a touch of exaggeration or a distortion of the harmonic scheme is one of the most admirable of his qualities. In doing this he preserves to perfection the balance of tone, so that the instrumental song never acquires a rude exterior or an inner opacity. All is clear, transparent and nobly sonorous. His treatment of the great crescendo near the close of the Strauss work was a model of artistic discretion. It published all the splendors of the music and kept far away every suspicion of blatancy.

In this composition, as also in the symphony, the beautiful playing of the wind instruments, both wood and brass, was a continued joy. In phrasing, in shading, in balance and quality of tone the musicians left practically nothing to be desired. The Strauss work has never been presented here with more lucidity. The symphony was read as Dr. Muck always reads Brahms with the profoundest understanding and affection.

The Boston orchestra has lately sung its way from coast to coast and some of the Boston newspapers have rejoiced in that it has been accepted as a national institution. New York, gathering unto itself national significance in that calm assumption which sometimes irritates and often amuses the mighty West, long ago proclaimed the national importance of its accustomed visitor from Massachusetts.

Now at any rate New Yorkers may be pleased with the knowledge that the West and the gold coast have heard the lyric eloquence of the orchestra from the Back Bay. Let us hope that some day, when the swords of Europe have been sheathed again, this national orchestra may be heard in the concert halls on the other side of the Atlantic. With it may be carried the message that this body of musicians of all nations has throughout the dark days kept alive here the best traditions of the musical art of lands where art is silenced by the shrieking of the songs of battle.

MISS VAN DRESSER SINGS.

Interprets Well, but Has Defects of Voice.

Marcia van Dresser, soprano, gave a song recital yesterday afternoon at Aeolian Hall. Miss Dresser was heard in a recital here last season after an absence of some years in Germany, where she sang in opera houses. Formerly she appeared here in comic opera and later in secondary roles at the Metropolitan Opera House as a member of Maurice Grau's company. Her recital after her return attracted some attention and when she was heard she won favor first of all for a sincerity of purpose and musical intelligence.

That Miss Dresser wishes to be taken seriously in her art was confirmed by her work yesterday. It was governed by no little taste. Her programme contained five songs by Brahms, five by Hugo Wolf, a French group and several English songs. Some of the selections in her printed list were Brahms's "Auf dem See" and "Tacusch mich Nicht," Chanson's "Les Papillons" and "Serenade Italienne," Wolf's "Begegnung" and Harsman's "The Bird of the Wilderness."

Of Miss Dresser's singing it must be said that it did not afford all the pleasure desired. Her voice, of good natural quality, sadly lacked color in the upper and middle tones, and in the lower ones it was veiled and dull in timber. A good interpretative power showed to effect in some of the German songs, but in those of lighter vein there was but little of grace and delicate sentiment. Resources in stronger emotional feeling and clear diction were features that largely supported the singer in her general work, but through all there ran ever a persistent vein of monotony in mood.

Miss Dresser was assisted by Kurt Schindler, who played the accompaniments.

NORDICA'S FURS TO BE SOLD.

Costly Gowns Also Will Go to Pay for Administration.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Nov. 4.—An order will be made by Judge Rulif V. Lawrence next Thursday directing Senator Henry E. Ackerson, Jr., temporary administrator of the estate of Mme. Lillian Nordica Young, to sell her costly furs and gowns for money to pay administration expenses.

Senator Ackerson asked for the order, saying there is now some $3,700 owing for storage, fees, &c. E. S. Twining requested that counsel fees be fixed at the same time and it was agreed that this should be done.

Walter W. Westall of New York, counsel for Mme. Nordica's sisters, said that in addition to the furs, valued at $30,000, there was a large number of gowns, some of which cost from $5,000 to $12,000 each.

Plays and Players.

Rehearsals for "A Plain Woman," Eugene Walter's latest play, were begun yesterday. Josephine Victor has been selected for the leading role and the piece will be produced by the Shuberts.

A feature of the performance at the Metropolitan Opera House Monday evening for the benefit of destitute artists abroad will be the singing of the national hymns of France, England, Russia and Italy.

"Putting a Play Over" is the topic for discussion at the meeting of the Drama League of America at the Lyceum Theatre next Monday afternoon. William Gillette, Rita Jolivet, James K. Hackett, Cosmo Hamilton and Howard Kyle will be among the speakers.

Bert Levy will entertain "The Friars Round Table" at a box party at the Palace Theatre to-night. Mr. Levy is himself a Friar and is on this week's bill at the theatre. The "round table" is composed of fifteen of his colleagues in the club.

Orville Harrold, who appears Sunday at the Sousa concert at the Hippodrome, will sing a new tenor solo called "When the Boys Come Home" by Oley Speaks. The band programme is headed by Duka's symphonic poem "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

MANY NOTABLES AT RIDDER FUNERAL

Cardinal Presides at Requiem Mass in Church of the Blessed Sacrament.

200 FORCED TO STAND

The funeral of Herman Ridder, editor and publisher of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung, was held yesterday morning in the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Broadway and Seventy-first street, before a congregation of city and State officials, men prominent in commercial and professional life and representatives of the German and Austrian Governments. The church was crowded so that 200 persons were forced to stand and outside hundreds were kept back by the police.

The solemn mass of requiem was presided over by Cardinal Farley and was celebrated by the Rev. George Winkler of Kersey, Pa., a boyhood friend of Mr. Ridder. The funeral procession started from Mr. Ridder's home at 11 West Eighty-first street, and when it arrived at the church the coffin, covered by clusters of violets and wreaths, was met at the door by the Rev. Thomas F. Myhan, the pastor, and conducted to the resting place in the centre aisle.

Cardinal Farley sat on a scarlet throne under a portable canopy on the gospel side of the altar, and before the altar were the priests and monsignori who assisted in the mass. The Ridder family sat in pews to the left of the middle aisle, and officials and friends of the late editor sat on the right. In front pews were Mayor Mitchel, Senator James A. O'Gorman, Prince Hatzfeldt Trachenberg and Capt. Franz von Papen, who represented the German Embassy at Washington, and Frederick de Nuber von Pereked, the Austro-Hungarian Consul-General at New York.

The pontifical absolution was pronounced by Cardinal Farley, after he had discarded his scarlet robe and put on a black vestment, the congregation kneeling before his outstretched arms. Only prayers for the repose of the soul were said, there being no eulogy.

A great number of Catholic clergy took part in the celebration of the mass or were mingled in the congregation. Father Thomas Barret was master of ceremonies, Mgr. Francis Wall and Mgr. Bruden acted as deacons to the Cardinal, and Dr. Thomas Carroll was the Cardinal's master of ceremonies. Father Joseph Dineen was master of ceremonies to Bishop Patrick J. Hayes, auxiliary Bishop of New York. Other clergymen present were:

Mgr. Joseph F. Mooney, V. G., Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral; the Very Rev. John J. Hughes, director of the Paulist Fathers; Mgr. James H. McGean, Mgr. John Burke; Mgr. Francis J. O'Hara, Chaplain Bader, U. S. A.; Richard H. Tierney, S. J., editor of America; Father Malachai Fitzpatrick, Father William Livingstone, Father John J. Wynne, S. J., and Father Michael J. Henry. The honorary pallbearers were Morgan J. O'Brien, Melville E. Stone, Oscar S. Straus, Henry Heide, Gustav Lindenthal, Thomas H. Mulry, Justice Leonard A. Giegerich, Herbert F. Gunnison, Joseph Frey, Edward M. Burghard and Dr. C. J. Hexamer of Philadelphia, president of the National German Alliance of the United States.

Henry Allen Butterfield.

Henry Allen Butterfield, vice-president of the Butterfield-Barry Company, dealers in paper and cardboard boxes, Manhattan, died on Wednesday at his home, 91 Marlborough road, Flatbush. He was born in Winchester, N. H., eighty-three years ago. At the age of 20 he set out for California by way of the Isthmus of Panama in search of gold. He reached his destination, although he had to walk across Panama, but found no gold.

During the civil war he served under Col. Bowie in a regiment of California Volunteers. Most of his fighting was against the Indians. In 1868 he returned East and founded the firm of which he was a member until his death. Two sons and a daughter survive him.

William M. Winans.

William M. Winans, an expert title searcher and examiner in the office of the Register of Kings county, died on Wednesday night at his home, 466 Second street, Brooklyn, after an operation for tumor. He was born in Paterson, N. J., fifty-six years ago. For twenty-five years he had made his home in Brooklyn.

About twenty years ago he introduced the block index system for recording property as an improvement on the old alphabetical index. Use of the system was authorized by the Legislature.

A stanch Republican, he was for many years treasurer of the Logan Club. He is survived by his wife, five sons and a daughter.

William H. Friday.

William H. Friday, a former Assemblyman of Brooklyn and chairman of the State Hospital Commission, died yesterday at his home, 456 McDonough street, of acute indigestion. In early life he was with the Brooklyn Standard-Union. In 1884 Seth Low, then Mayor of Brooklyn, appointed him to a city position. In 1893 he was elected to the Legislature from the old Sixteenth district, which took in Coney Island. He introduced the annexation bill which made Coney Island a part of Brooklyn. He was a past grand master of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a past district deputy of Masons of the Second Masonic district and a past exalted ruler of Brooklyn Lodge of Elks.
