SHORTAGE FEARED IN PRINTING INKS

Freight Congestion Threatens Dry Fonts, Say Manufacturers, Who Seek Relief.

CAN'T GET CARBON BLACK

A serious shortage of printing ink which may affect New York newspapers has been caused by freight congestion. The manufacture of newspaper ink is dependent upon the supply of carbon black, most of which comes into New York from West Virginia over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, on which there has been a general freight embargo since February 11.

Ink makers so fear the possibility of having to shut down some of their plants that they have written to the Interstate Commerce Commission suggesting that carbon black for local use be put in the class of perishable freight, privileged class, so that there will be no chance of the newspapers being affected. Railroad men scout this suggestion, saying that there could be no such discrimination.

A letter setting forth the above conditions has been sent to THE SUN and has as signers, Godfrey L. Cabot, C. J. Osborn Company, Frederick H. Levey Company, W. D. Wilson Printing Ink Company, Ltd., American Ink Co., Philip Ruxton, Inc., Sigmund Ullman Company, Sinclair & Valentine Company, Charles Hellmuth, J. M. Huber, the Ault & Wiborg Company and H. D. Roosen Company.

Situation Called Serious.

"The situation is extremely serious," said Frederick H. Levey yesterday. "The users of expensive inks will probably not be affected, but it will hit the newspaper and cheaper magazines if some way is not found to get carbon black through the embargo. The freight congestion has extended such a long period that the ink makers have been unable to build up any great reserves.

"One of our customers phoned to-day that he had only enough carbon black to keep his factory running this afternoon, and that if he could not get more before night he would have to shut down.

"The trouble is because of congestion altogether. We have found that there are 60,000 cars tied up around New York, at least half of which are loaded with war supplies. The Baltimore and Ohio has 6,000 loaded cars at St. George's, Cranford and Allington, N. J., and as far south as Maryland.

"We recently brought in a carload of carbon black by express so great is our need for it. The load was worth about $1,000 and we had to pay $400 in express charges. Our contract rate is 5 cents a pound, but if I went into the market for it I couldn't get it for less than 12 cents a pound."

F. B. Walker, secretary for Phillip Ruxton, Inc., said that his concern had had three cars tied up somewhere on the road since January. "There is serious danger of a failure of the supply of carbon black and then the manufacturers will be unable to turn out newspaper ink."

Different View Advanced.

An entirely different view of the situation is taken by H. D. Roosen, who says that neither the war, freight congestion, or the growing use of carbon black in rubber automobile tires is the cause of the present shortage.

"It's a holdup, that's all," he said with a laugh. "These producers of carbon black, the men who control the output, have at last stopped fighting each other and got together to boost the prices and hold on to their product. The price has jumped from a few cents to twenty-five cents a pound for no sound economic reason that I can see. There is a shortage, of course, but only because these men won't sell. They are storing it and holding on for prices, making the war and congestion their excuse.

"Why, the annual importations of carbon black before the war, according to a letter I have from Secretary Redfield, were only $28,000. That is an infinitesimal amount compared with what is used in this country, and the war can't have anything to do with raising the price.

"I don't blame 'em if they can get away with it. I wish I were in on the pool. But I wish they would tell the truth about it and not blame it on the railroads and the war and the rubber tire companies. It's a holdup, that's all."

JEWISH RIGHTS REPORT.

Committee Tells of Work in United States in 1915.

The ninth annual report of the American Jewish Committee, which has just been published, calls attention to the work the committee has done during 1915 to preserve the civil and religious rights of Jews.

In February, 1915, the committee called President Wilson's attention to the fact that certain member banks of the Federal reserve system were arranging for an extension of $25,000,000 credit to the Russian Government. It was pointed out that this action was a virtual nullification of the principle for which the treaty of 1832 was abrogated.

The committee has opposed the restriction of immigration to this country by a literacy test, which would have barred thousands of Jews who are coming here from Russia and Rumania. The committee took over the conduct of the work in America in behalf of the Falashas, the black Jews of Abyssinia. The committee also stirred the State Department to action in behalf of Jews who had gone to Europe before the war, and were unable to return.

The report urges that after the war, through the good offices of the United States or by international cooperation, there be treaties drawn guaranteeing full rights for the Jews in all lands and that discriminatory legislation against them be abrogated. It is suggested that in the event of the violation of such guarantees any nation signatory to such treaties shall have the right to protest against any such violation and to appeal to the Hague tribunal if the violations do not cease.

GERMAN BAZAAR TO OPEN.

Mrs. Wilson Sends Handkerchief to Be Sold There.

President Wilson has declined, with regrets, an invitation to attend the German and Austro-Hungarian bazaar for the benefit of war sufferers, which opens at Madison Square Garden to-night; but Mrs. Wilson, according to Secretary Von Skal of the bazaar committee, has sent an embroidered handkerchief to be sold there.

She sent it, Mr. Von Skal said, to Miss Augusta Knief of New York, who brought it to him yesterday, asking that Mayor Mitchel be requested to raffle it off. The Mayor will be prevented by a previous engagement from coming to the opening to-night, but the handkerchief will be on exhibition and will be sold later.

The Garden was a scene of activity yesterday, and all night long hammers were wielded and workmen scurried around, getting the booths and various attractions ready, one of the things being constructed was a forty-two centimeter gun. Paint and wood were the materials, but it looked very murderous.

At 8 P. M. the German Ambassador and other officials will formally open the bazaar. The doors will open at 5 P. M.

STAG ARTISTS ELEVATED BY BLUSHING STAGE IDYL

All Star Audience Goes Into Temperamental Ecstasies Over Uplifting Lyric, "At the Grand Guignol," Produced at Smoker of the Society of Illustrators.

The first time that delicate, fragrant, blushing idyl called "At the Grand Guignol" was ever produced in West Forty-fourth street, east of Sixth avenue, was last night when at the stag—a thoroughly stag—annual smoker of the Society of Illustrators in the Theatre Francais, once the Berkeley Theatre, the hunk of art was the concluding number presented before an all star audience.

Even so humble a job as house fireman was filled by none other than Old Pop Gibson, art editor of the Cosmopolitan and the oldest living volunteer fireman in the entire world. Pop's great-grandnephew, Charles Dana Gibson, was head usher.

Even among the humble gallery gods resting their elbows far out upon the solid banks of tobacco smoke—first come first served and late folks had to take gallery seats—were none other than John McCutcheon's brother, George Barr; all the illustrators in Flushing named Walker, Walter Hale, who is a painter, writer and illustrator by profession, but earns his rent by acting; Finley Peter Dooley Dunne, the eminent T. A. Tad Dorgan, Reuben Goldberg, the mural painter; Montague Potash Glass, Ray Brown, Bud Fisher's brother, Harrison; John Alonzo Williams, Eddie Ellis, who, according to the programme, doped out the "Grand Guignol" dramatic lyric, the playlet being based upon a real happening in Eddie Ellis's home town.

And, to list a few more of the all star audience before taking up the dramaturgic aesthetics of the evening, there were T. Terpsichorean Skidmore, who at one part of the evening climbed upon the stage and, as every one admitted, danced as if he hadn't a bone in his body; Orson Lowell, the furniture portraitist; Digby Bell, who was merely an innocent bystander; Penrhyn Stanlaws, Kory Kilvert, C. Allen Gilbert, whose silhouette movies number was one of the particularly raucous screams of a midnight and morning that were one day; Art Plus Crawford, Francis P. Garvan, the popular parent; Howard Chandler Christy, Jimmie Montgomery Flagg, Arthur Vance, Vice-President Ellis Parker Butler of the National Bank of the Continents of North and South America, which is opposite the Pie Wagon on Main street, Flushing; Charley Hanson Towne, the great magazine editor, and so many others that if the movie bomb which was exploded in the Gilbert silhouettes had been the real thing and had gone off in the theatre, Art in America would never recover from the blow.

Playwright (and other things) Robert J. Wildhack, who accepted sole responsibility for the best sketch presented, "A Stone Age Cabaret," had a great idea which Broadway playwrights dissatisfied with the casts wished upon them by Lee and Jake and Marc and Abe and Edgar and Arch would do well to copy. "On page 332, gentlemen, of Paleontologist Henry Fairfield Osborn's book, 'Men of the Stone Age,'" said, or read, Author Wildhack to the deeply interested all star smokers that packed the theatre, "published last year by the Scribners [applause from the Scribner section of the audience], price $5 [groans]—my copy was given to me by Booth Tarkington [applause], he says in part:

"'That Aurignacian and Magdalenian art is the work of one race [applause], there can be' [applause]—wait a minute, fellers—'there can be no question whatever [a voice, "You said something, kid"]; that this was the Cro-Magnon'—I'm still quoting Prof. Osborn, fellers—'the Cro-Magnon is now absolutely demonstrated.' [Prolonged applause.]

"This is final," interposed Mr. Wildhack with conviction, as he looked up from his manuscript. "The Society of Illustrators rests freely upon that statement [applause] in utter defiance of any attempt at successful contradiction. [Cheering and screams of 'Hear! Hear!']

"Furthermore, we are supported in the stand we take by Charles Somerville's International Carriage and Zebra Stripers Union as well as by the Amalgamated Pretzel Vanishers Local No. 7. [Applause.] And turning to page 114 of the same work there's a footnote that doubtless will be a revelation to some of us. Listen: 'The weakness of Penck's argument for placing the Chellean in the Second Interglacial was exposed by precise operations of Boule and Obermaier in the Alps, the Jura and the Pyrenees.' [Tremendous applause.] Little more need be said on that point. [Cries of 'Hear! Hear!'] Also see page 189 regarding the fourth glaciation." [Determined cries of "We will!" and applause.]

The Enterprise Quartet opened the smoker with classics that will never die such as "The Baggage Coach Ahead," et ceterah-rah-rah. The Enterprise Quartet was made up of a clever little bunch of solo and barber shop chord songsters named Alonzo Kimball, E. M. Ashe, George O. Baker and L. R. Stark, who as singers are among the best known illustrators in the country.

The Silhouette Movies showed what happened to Deacon Waterboy, the temperance reformer, and Dizzy Joe, a souse noted for his sousiness even in the Washington Square neighborhood.

"Some Magazine Covers," which was "Blamed by Jack Sheridan on Prominent Illustrators," gave one a notion that new spring styles promise to be positively skimpier than they are even now. The gardens of loveliness included the Misses Kitty Davin, Anna Minnerly, Reggie Morrissey, Edith Carlisle, Violate Colgate, Jewell Drake, Gene Crosby and the Misses Connelly.

And the "Grand Guignol" detonated finally with real professionals—John Willard, C. A. De Lima, Walter Hale, Joseph Herbert, John Daly Murphy, Stephen Maley, James Montgomery Flagg and Frank McCormack. The plot? Ah, that's a secret.

And finally there were sandwiches and things and stuff.

SCHIFF BIDS JEWS TO BE AMERICANS

Opposes a Jewish Congress in the United States as Treasonable.

Jacob H. Schiff, chairman of the American Jewish Committee, in a statement issued yesterday to the Warheit, strongly opposes a Jewish congress as treasonable and un-American.

"There is no room in the United States for any other congress except the United States Congress," he says. "The question of a Jewish congress, which has been raised by the Zionists (this cannot be denied), who would like to segregate the Jews of America into a separate class, will eventually arouse the suspicion of the American people against the Jewish population."

Mr. Schiff says it is necessary that the Jews of the United States should unite to help their brethren in Europe, but he insists that a congress is not necessary for that purpose and that a congress if it is called will probably bring nothing except the possible loss of the respect and good will of the American people. He suggests instead of a congress with national tendencies that an American Jewish convention be called.

The statement of Mr. Schiff is by way of a reply to an opposition to the American committee led by Justice Leon Saunders, Aaron J. Levy and others, who succeeded in passing the congress plan over the objections of the committee on the ground that it is not sufficiently representative to care for all the interests of the American Jews. The immediate cause for the statement at this time by Mr. Schiff is not mentioned.

The statement in part follows:

"The United States as a nation is now in its infancy; one can hardly speak of an American nation as yet. The number of people in the United States whose parents have been in this country three, four, five or six generations is quite small, and an American nation will not exist until the future generations of those who arrived here during the last century shall have been amalgamated.

"It is, therefore, the first duty of all those who come to the shores of America to make every effort to absorb as far as possible American ideals and customs and thereby help to make a perfect American stock. Only in this way can we hope to have in due time a real American nation and a true American civilization.

"Within the last fifty years Jews have been coming to the United States in large numbers. The Jew has sought and found in this country what he could not get in Europe, namely, freedom and all civil rights. Is it not, therefore, the first duty of the Jew to help build up American national life, together with all who really love our country?"

With regard to his stand against Russia and the prospect of obtaining national rights for Jews in Russia, Mr. Schiff says:

"I want to impress upon people that it is my sincere conviction that the Jews have nothing to expect from the Russian Government. Russia will never grant anything to Jews until it is forced to with an iron club. Unfortunately I cannot speak on this subject freely. I do want to say, however, that the Rothchilds and others, as well as myself, were promised by Russia on several occasions that she would change her policy toward the Jews, but she has never fulfilled that promise."

Two L. I. Priests Transferred.

The Rev. Francis J. Uleau of St. Athanasius's Roman Catholic Church, Little Neck, L. I., has been named by Bishop McDonnell to succeed the late Rev. William L. O'Hara at St. Bartholomew's Church, Elmhurst. The Rev. John J. Clark, senior curate of St. Patrick's Church, Long Island City, will take charge of the Little Neck parish.

WRITS PUT PARADE OF A. O. H. IN DOUBT

"Regulars" Get Injunction to Prevent Celebration by Healy's Followers.

Once more the big parade of St. Patrick's Day is in doubt. The rumors of peace between the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America and the irregular organization, which is contending for the right to hold the annual celebration, were discounted yesterday when J. Power Donnellan, attorney for the national society, obtained an injunction against the parade for which the insurrectionists have a permit, and also a writ of mandamus to compel Police Commissioner Woods to cancel this permit and issue another for the regular organization.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, which is the original society, holds firmly for its right to conduct its customary parade at its customary hour and place. Opposed to it is the Ancient Order of Hibernians of New York county, with Coroner Timothy Healy at its head, composed of members who, according to the opposing faction, were suspended because of non-payment of dues to the national body. It was to this "irregular" body that the parade permit was issued.

Eugene J. Flood, president of the outlawed county organization, was served yesterday with the injunction against holding the parade. Coroner Healy also was served late in the afternoon.

The writ addressed to Police Commissioner Woods could not be served because the Commissioner took an early afternoon train for Washington, but First Deputy Godley, acting commissioner, was served at the Brooklyn headquarters. The writs are returnable before Justice Gavegan in Part 1, Supreme Court, Monday morning.

"There is no harmony," said Mr. Donnellan. "There can be none. The body that holds the permit is not recognized by the national order of Hibernians, for its members were suspended a year ago. No Irish organization will march with them. If their permit is not revoked the parade will be a joke."

"The whole matter is clear," said President Roderick J. Kennedy of the A. O. H. in America, the regular body. "It has been thrashed out in court before. Last September these suspended men got out an injunction to prevent us holding this parade, and also from holding our annual summer night's festival. Both injunctions were denied.

"If Coroner Healy's body retains the permit to parade there will be only about 300 men in line, comprising the membership of the outlaw body."

All the contentions as to the probable failure of the parade under present arrangements were denied by Coroner Healy. About forty Irish organizations, including a large number of the county divisions of the A. O. H., have applied for a place in line, and he said that by next Friday there will be fully fifty, making a bigger parade than has ever been seen.

"Injunction or no injunction Kennedy's standing alone," said the Coroner. "The other men in the A. O. H. realize that the difference between us and the national body is only a temporary one and that we have been treated badly through a misunderstanding. They're going to march with us."

YOUNG BLOOD FAILS IN FENCING TILTS

Veterans of New York A. C. Over 55 Years Easily Beat Young Ones.

DR. HAMMOND LEADER

The old saying "Youth will be served" took on a new meaning at the New York Athletic Club last night when a team of half a dozen fencers each rated for publication at over the age of 55 served a similar number of juvenile wielders of foil and sword so severely that the youngsters were beaten by a total of 6 bouts to 4.

Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, president of the club, was the originator of the idea, which he felt confident would prove that there were other sports besides golf in which the older generation could hold its own against the fiery impetuosity of youth. The venerable doctor led his team in the fray and enjoyed himself immensely, especially when the dignified seniors were making their most brilliant showing in the competition with foils, in which they won five of the six contests.

Only members of the New York Athletic Club were eligible for the novel encounter, but the chance of seeing the old champions in active competition again was such an attraction that the best crowd that has graced a fencing tournament in the club gymnasium this winter was on hand to cheer the old guard in the battle that was to prove that age could not wither the prowess of the ancient swordsmen. It was a crowd of old timers to witness something new in the competitive line and among those present were many who were intimately connected with the earliest days of athletics in this country.

Dan Stern, the winner of the first walking championship of America in 1875, was there looking hale and hearty, but a trifle more robust than when he established the record of seven minutes for a mile. He is No. 5 on the membership list of the New York A. C. and was backed up by a cyclist who outranks him in that respect, W. E. McCready, who is No. 2 on the list. Both of these had the opportunity to see Dr. Hammond win the mile running championship of America in 1876, and neither expressed surprise when the doctor defeated his men with foils and sabres, even though for forty years he had been in competition at some athletic exercise.

Every man on the senior team was adorned with silver locks and some had white beards to signify that they were entitled to places on the team, of which the minimum age was set at 55 years.

It was one "ringer," however, in Charley Bothner, who admitted that he lacked four months of the required age. As a just penalty for invading the ranks prematurely Bothner was beaten in both foils and sabres, though his record as a fencer was perhaps better than any other man in the contests. Bothner won the national championships with all three weapons in 1897 and is the only man that ever accomplished that feat. He was beaten in the foils, 5 to 4, by L. Nunez, and in the duelling swords succumbed to Steddiford Pitt. The latter, by the way, did not really qualify for the young team, as he is a year over the stipulated age of 25.

Dr. Hammond was the most majestic of the old timers, and he fenced with all his old cleverness. Straight as an arrow, lithe and active as a youth of twenty, the club president proved to the satisfaction of all present his own theory that age holds no terrors for the active athlete. He defeated H. Van Buskirk, the former Pennsylvania fencer, in the foils by 5 touches to 4, and with the sabres outgeneraled the mighty Steddiford Pitt by 5 to 3.

Charles E. Goodhue, a former treasurer of the club, was the dean of the aged brigade. He won his bout from J. Byrne by superior steadiness, and his actions failed to show that his career covered sixty-one years. Dr. Hammond is three years his junior and next in rank on the team were Samuel T. Shaw, 57; A. J. Eddy, 56, and Dr. J. E. Clemens, 55.

A. J. Eddy, who met Steddiford Pitt with the foils, showed remarkable cleverness. He was as apt in parrying the thrusts of his opponent as he is in carrying out his professional duties as senior counsel to the Standard Oil Company. Eddy never was a champion, yet he outpointed Pitt by 5 to 2. In addition to Bothner the team of veterans embraced two champions in Dr. Hammond, who won two championships in 1887, and was second in the third, and Samuel T. Shaw, who won the duelling swords in 1888.

Delima Star of Fencing Meet.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 10.—Cornell's fencers defeated the foilsmen of Pennsylvania this evening in the Weightman Hall fencing room by 5 bouts to 4. It was one of the closest contests ever staged at the Quaker Institute, and it took an extra period between Delima, the crack of Cornell's team, and Smiley, the Quaker captain, to decide the contest in favor of the Ithacans. Delima was the star of the evening, winning all three of his bouts and making touches against Bartol in 59 seconds, which is an unusual feat in collegiate fencing.

Baby Racers at Butler Farm.

James Butler's mares at East View Farm are working overtime these days in turning out thoroughbreds that are destined to take rank among the racers of the future. On last Tuesday night two foals arrived within ten minutes of each other. Both were by the Butler stallion Out of Reach and out of mares that have made names for themselves. The first arrival was a daughter of Jest, a winner as a two and three-year-old, which had the distinguished parentage of Ben Brush—Cap and Bells, the dam being a winner of the English Oaks. The second arrival is a bay filly by Ben Brush, out of Skip, a daughter of Delhi.

Capt. Berrigan Back at Fordham.

The baseball outlook at Fordham has brightened considerably during the past week. Capt. Jack Berrigan reported for the first time at practice yesterday and will practise daily with the squad from now on.

A freshman and second nine are being organized which will play most games away from home. Until the season opens they will play the varsity daily.

MISS EDWARDS REACHES FINAL

She Defeats Mrs. Thorndyke, 5 and 4, on Bellcair Links.

BELLEAIR, Fla., March 10.—In the semi-finals of the women's golf championship here to-day Miss Marjorie Edwards of Milothian played a cool, steady game and advanced to the finals with a fair chance of winning the Orange Blossom trophy in to-morrow's round. Mrs. A. Thorndyke of Sioux City, whom Miss Edwards defeated to-day, was a cup winner in the women's annual February tournament and was a worthy antagonist for Miss Edwards.

Mrs. J. A. Moore's defeat of Mrs. Thomas F. Cole was somewhat of a surprise, as Mrs. Cole has played so much good golf on the Bellcair course that she was the favorite. The Florida favorite, Mrs. J. T. Mollard, wrote her name in the annuals of successful golf by defeating Mrs. C. V. Rich of New York. The scores:

Miss Marjorie Edwards, Milothian, defeated Mrs. A. Thorndyke, Sioux City, 5 and 4; Mrs. J. A. Moore, Sleepy Hollow, defeated Mrs. Thomas F. Cole, Duluth, 7 and 6.

Second Sixteen—Mrs. J. T. Mollard, Florida, defeated Mrs. C. V. Rich, Sleepy Hollow, 4 and 2; Mrs. R. L. Whitman, Myopia, defeated Miss Lulu B. Jones, Memphis, 8 and 5.

RED BANK, N. J., March 10.—The Fox Hunters, who meet the Triangles at Durland's Academy, New York city, in a polo match next Wednesday night, will be awarded the J. Lester Eisner cup at the close of the season of the Monmouth Polo League. They have not lost a game and clinched the cup by defeating the Troop B trio at the armory by 8 goals to 1. William G. Stonebridge badly wrenched an already injured knee when he was unhorsed in the final period by the breaking of the girths. His all around playing and the clever backing and mallet work of Randall Kiefer featured. Thomas S. Field also played well for the winners.

Final Game for N. Y. University.

AIKEN, S. C., March 10.—In the fourth round of the annual handicap match for men at the Palmetto Golf Club for the C. They halved the sixteenth in four, leaving Haughton dormie two.

Perin got a beautiful four on the seventeenth, Haughton had a stroke on this hole and was a little short on his fourth shot. Perin made a beauty mashie shot within eight feet of the hole.

GOULD AND HUHN VICTORS.

Show Great Form in First Round of Court Tennis Tourney.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 10.—Jay Gould and W. H. T. Huhn, the national court tennis doubles champions, defeated Wilson Potter and George Harding in the first round for the championship of the Racquet Club. The scores were 6—4, 6—2, 6—4.

The national champions were in great form. Gould played his usual heady game, and Huhn was remarkably steady. Potter bore the brunt of the work on his side. Harding was erratic, due to lack of practice, although as the match progressed he settled down and toward its close he played fine tennis.

Gould, who in addition to holding the doubles title with Huhn, is the world's open and national singles titleholder, was very accurate in finding the winning gallery and the grills, a score or more points accruing to his side from these sources.

Penn Vetoes June 17 as Date for Regatta

PHILADELPHIA, March 10.—It was announced formally to-day by the faculty committee that it will not sanction the date of June 17 for the intercollegiate rowing regatta. The reason advanced for the failure to ratify this date is that it comes right in the middle of the final examination period.

Where Billie Burke is Lovely in Pajamas!

In "Peggy," the first film play of Billie Burke, the Triangle Film Corporation is keeping up the furious quality pace it set last autumn.

And quality, as TRIANGLE understands the word, means nothing technical; it means charm—the indefinable something that makes you glad you went.

Sometimes it is the wonder of photography. Sometimes the tense interest of an unusual story.

Again—great pictures of great scenes, where thousands of men and horses play on a stage that covers miles of mountain and plain.

In "Peggy," "quality" is the charm of Billie Burke herself—

Whether bounding gaily about her bedroom in pajamas—or shocking Sunday Scotland in a rakish white speedster—or acting princess in a fairy story for the kiddies.

Go and see "Peggy," and take the youngsters, and your sweetheart—whether she's your wife yet or not.

"Peggy" is only one TRIANGLE play.

There are two new ones, and two new TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE comedies every week.

And until all tastes are the same, you will like some better than others.

So far, most people seem to like most of them—

Which is, after all, the great test.

All TRIANGLE plays are produced under the supervision of one of the very great directors—Griffith, Ince, or Sennett.

In each you will find at least one very lovely woman star.

Some of these are listed below:

Bessie Barriscale
Dorothy Gish
Mae Marsh
Mabel Normand
Lillian Gish
Seena Owen
Jane Grey
Enid Markey
Norma Talmadge
Fay Tincher
Mae Busch
Constance Talmadge
Louise Glaum
Truly Shattuck

ALL SILK AND A YARD WIDE

We build speedily, we build economically, but above all, we build well, for neither speed in construction nor economy of cost can extenuate work indifferently done.

A Thompson-Starrett operation is all silk and a yard wide, and will make good under the most competent and critical analysis.
