RYAN WANTS HIS 'CHANGE SEAT SOLD

Starts Mandamus Action Against New York Stock Exchange.

That the action which has been started against the New York Stock Exchange by Allan A. Ryan, who gained fame several weeks ago as the head of the group which cornered the stock of the Stutz Motor Company, forcing its price from a little more than $100 to around $700 a share, is a mandamus action to compel the exchange to sell his seat in compliance with his request made at the time of the corner, was learned yesterday from authoritative quarters, notwithstanding the fact that the complaint in the action had not been filed yesterday by Stanchfield & Levy, Ryan's attorneys. It was learned also that if Ryan be successful in the action he will probably institute another suit to recover damages for any difference in the price for which his seat is finally sold and the price for which such memberships changed hands at the time that his original request was made.

The deep mystery which surrounded the Ryan action in Wall Street on Monday showed no signs of abatement yesterday among the principals. At the Ryan offices, at the offices of Stanchfield & Levy and at the New York Stock Exchange there was nothing which threw any light whatever on the matter given out. The Exchange insists that it has no knowledge of the nature of the suit and will have none until the complaint be filed. It is admitted, however, that the action is very likely to prove a mandamus proceeding to force the sale of the membership.

When Ryan became involved in a controversy with the Stock Exchange as a result of his alleged activities in the Stutz corner the stock over which the trouble arose was suspended from trading. In order to get a clear idea of what the transactions in Stutz had been during the progress of the corner the exchange demanded from all its members a statement of their transactions in that stock. According to information obtained from the exchange Ryan failed to give to the institution the information asked of him, sending to the exchange instead a request that his seat be sold. In reply to similar demands for information from the exchange in regard to other stocks which were under investigation Ryan is understood to have said that he no longer considered himself a member of that body, and therefore did not hold himself subject to its orders.

The position taken by the exchange is that if a member sells his seat its buyer must be acceptable to the organization's committee on admissions before the sale becomes effective. In other words, it is held that Ryan may go ahead and sell his seat if he desires to do so, but that the exchange will have the last word as to whether or not the buyer of the seat is acceptable to it as a member. A policy of the exchange in the past has been not to permit one of its members to resign while under fire, as was Ryan in the Stutz corner. In case a member of the exchange is expelled his seat is sold by the exchange.

PAYS FULL STOCK DIVIDEND.

Stutz Co. Directors Order 50,000 Share Disbursement.

No statement explaining the change in plan was made.

The company's regular quarterly cash dividend of $1.25 a share was declared for the current quarter, payable on July 1 to stockholders of record on June 15.
