Two New Lines Completing Service Inaugurated to Polish Port.

Eight less vessels are shown on this week's chart than on last Sunday's diagram; but the majority of the fairly shown are bound west, which fills the ship owners' hearts with joy, as it is only the western trips nowadays in which any considerable profit is made.

Two of the vessels bound for America, the Susquehanna (E28) of the United States Mail Steamship Company and the New Rochelle (H34) of the Baltic Steamship Corporation, mark the conclusion of the first round trip voyages of the service inaugurated by those companies between New York and the Polish port of Danzig.

The American liner Manchuria (D7), which steamed yesterday for Hamburg, took 1,000 persons in the steerage, most of them Germans returning to their country; but the tide of immigration is still strongly westward. Bound for Italy, where the call for third class passenger bottoms is strongest, are the Giuseppe Verdi (D17) and the Dante Alighieri (U19) of the Transatlantica-Italian line; the Ferdinando Palasciana (P21) of the Italian line, the Pesaro (M23) of the Lloyd Sabaudo and the Madonna (E25) of the Fabre line. The army transports converted into this Italian immigrant service by the Paelps line are still in port, discharging the thousands they brought early last week.

The seventeen westbound vessels bringing home thousands of American tourists could be selected as truly representative of the finest in the world's shipping. The Aquitania (Q14) of the Cunard line, the White Star liner Olympic (J10) and the French liner Lafayette (Q26) are typical of the fleet of vessels maintained by those three large companies; in fact, the Aquitania and the Olympic are the leaders of their respective fleets. The Bergensfjord (P32) of the Norwegian-American line is another vessel representative of the fine ships that ply north of the British Isles to Scandinavian ports.

A sailing scheduled for next Saturday is the maiden voyage of the Panhandle State, the first passenger vessel to be built by the United States Shipping Board, for Queenstown, Boulogne and London. Her operators, the United States Mail Steamship Company, of 45 Broadway, have issued invitations to the public to inspect her at her berth, foot of West Thirty-fourth street, on Thursday and Friday, passes being obtained gratis at the downtown office. This reception is said to be the first public inspection of a new American passenger ship since 1894, when the American flag steamships St. Louis and St. Paul entered the transatlantic service.

Considerable discussion arose during last week over the condition of the giant Leviathan, largest vessel in the world, which is now the property of the Shipping Board and is lying berthed at Pier 4, Hoboken, since last autumn. Allegations have been made that she is wholly disintegrating into junk, but this is denied vigorously by officials of the International Mercantile Marine, which has acquired an interest in the vessel.

Public Invited to Inspect Shipping Board's First Passenger Vessel.

A sailing scheduled for next Saturday is the maiden voyage of the Panhandle State, the first passenger vessel to be built by the United States Shipping Board, for Queenstown, Boulogne and London.
