Giants Jump Into Second Place by Defeating Pirates—Dodgers Whip Reds and Yankees Lose to Sox

BURNS ON A TEAR WITH THE WILLOW

His Home Run, Triple, Two Doubles and Single Help Beat Pirates.

By WILLIAM B. HANNA.

Base hits in abundance by the Giants yesterday eventually took them to a victory over the Pirates. They won, 4 to 3, in ten innings, and thirteen hits were required for the four runs, which is all out of proportion in respect to correlative output. Some of the hits were wasted, of course, but the mellow art and craft of Babe Adams made scoring difficult for the Giants, though they did an abundance of hitting. The victory put them in second place.

Included in the New York batting were five hits by George Burns—veteran vs. veteran—and extremely useful Burns's berserk afternoon was. Without it the Giants wouldn't have won. It ran the scale of safe prodding with a home run, a three bagger, two doubles and a single. Five hits in five times up made it a full day for Ponce de Leon George, who scored three of the four runs and who contributed his willow's mite to each of the four runs. A field day and then some for this rare old Giant antique.

Young Valuable Ally of Burns.

Young was a valuable ally of George's, for he batted in three runs and was just the man to make the batting diligence of his senior bear fruit.

The top part of the Pittsburg's batting order did a good deal of damage to Toney, the lower part nothing. Bigbee and Summa kept the Pirates in the game with their batting. Summa, an outfielder from the Old Dominion, made three hits and an impressive entry. Three hits off Toney on his debut day—unheard of precocity. Incidentally carrying coals to Newcastle has nothing on bringing outfielders to Pittsburg.

Good pitching with men on bases took a good deal of sting out of bunched hitting and was done by both pitchers. It befell the Giants twice to make but one run from three hits, and the Pirates had that happen to them once. Less seasoned and unperturbed flingers would have cracked under the pressure. The first part of the game was perfunctory, the last part spirited and all quickly played. A ten inning game in 1 hour and 34 minutes is pretty good.

Burns Begins With Triple.

Burns's depredations began with a three bagger over Southworth's moor in the first inning, and Georgie came home on Young's fly to Southworth. Adams went peacefully then until the third inning when Burns hit him for a two bagger, which was no fault of the Babe's. Southworth misjudged the ball and tried to make a shoestring catch. It took two hits to bring Burns the rest of the way. A single by Bancroft was a scratch infield affair, and the finishing blow was a clean single by Young.

The first Freebooter run came in the fourth. Cutshaw and Summa singled before anybody was out, and Southworth sacrificed. All the Pirates could do with that nice layout was to work in one run. It materialized while Bancroft was tossing out Whitted. Traynor grounded to Doyle, who was quite agreeable and flung him out.

The versatility of the high flying Burns burst forth in the fifth inning with a home run which lit in the left field bleachers and bounced this way and that. The Pirates tallied again when Bigbee lined a home run into the lower grand stand in the sixth. The Buccaneer chappies were on their way to other scores in this inning and let slip a fine chance. Cutshaw singled, was forced by Summa. Southworth singled and Whitted and Traynor spouted soft flies to nearby guardians of the New York Security League.

Just as inviting an opportunity was missed by the Pirates in the eighth inning, in which they tied the score. Bigbee opened with a hit and Cutshaw sacrificed. Summa bashed a two bagger to the left field corner sending Bigbee home. Summa tried to make it a triple and would have done so, but for failure to hook the bag as he slid. Frisch touched him out.

Adams Pitches Carelessly.

Adams was guilty of careless pitching to Toney in the tenth. He had the pitcher in the hole at two and nothing and then instead of making a quick job of it wasted three trying for the corners. He laid the next one over and Toney drove it back to centre field. Burns made a lucky two bagger, a fly which cleared the infield and fell in a clear space out of reach of Cutshaw, Grimm and Southworth. Bancroft was passed intentionally and solely to permit of a force double play by way of the plate. It was, of course, good baseball to pass him for the reason named and no matter how good a hitter was coming up.

Adams had to take a chance on Young. It was a gamble pure and simple and he lost. Spencer was sent to third to run for Toney—it was no time for leaden wings on the bases—but reached the plate on the hard hit single Young rammed to left. The score:

Dodgers Dash for Flag and Force Reds to Drop

Rally in Seventh Wins for Brooklyn, 3 to 2—Eller Driven Out.

By DANIEL.

Squire Ebbets last night ordered world's series caps for his dashing, crashing Dodgers. As he already had sent in measurements for new trousers the club needs only two more victories to achieve a complete outfit of bright new spangles for the clashes with the best in the American League which now appear inevitable.

For a while during the second game of the series with the Reds at the Flatbush stadium yesterday afternoon it looked as if the Squire would have to postpone that order for the caps. But the doughty Dodgers came through with a two run rally in the seventh inning, trounced the Reds again by a score of 3 to 2, and sent them hurtling down into third place, behind the New Yorks.

The game which gave the Brooklyns their caps—real leather sweatbands and all that sort of thing—served to demonstrate that the chances of the Giants or the Reds edging in ahead of the Flatbush crew are about as big as the undeveloped whiskers of a young Croton bug.

The Dodgers now hold a lead of six and a half games over the Giants and seven games over the Cincinnatis. And Brooklyn has only ten more games to play, five of them with the McGraw outfit. Brooklyn fans had better begin digging up those old rain checks.

Dodgers Score in First.

Yesterday's fracas started out to be a duel between two right handers—Hod Eller for the Reds and Leon Cadore for the Dodgers. An error, a hit batsman and a single got Eller off to a rather poor start and gave the Brooklyns a run in the first frame. But after that Hod and Leon had it out in a right smart way until the fifth.

Cadore was the first to break, the Reds getting to him for two runs and the lead in that inning. But Eller had a break in him, too. He got it out of his system, or rather the Dodgers prodded it out of him, in the seventh inning. A double and three singles gave the Brooklyns two runs and the game. With one down Adolpho Luque, the Proud Cuban, went to Eller's relief and stopped the dashing boys in the home uniform.

The assault which won for the Dodgers broke up what promised to be one of Eller's best days, for until the seventh he allowed only four scattered singles. Credit for organizing the swatting bee against Hod belongs to Ivy Olson, who followed the well known stretching process with a two base hit to right, far over Neale's head. Of course, the thing to do next was to sacrifice, so Johson did it. With Olson on third and one needed to tie Griffith did a noble deed. He sent his second timely single to centre and scored that much needed counter.

Myers Sends In Winner.

Now for the run to win. Wheat, who had not got a hit all day, blew himself to a one timer to centre and sent Griffith around to the hot corner. When Myers spanked his first hit of the fray to centre Griffith scooted home with the all conquering tally. So Myers was one of the real heroes of the afternoon.

At this stage Eller erased himself from the scene and Luque came in. He fanned Schmandt and saw Kilduff lift a fly to Duncan.

Brooklyn got its first run this wise: Olson was safe when Daubert dropped only a fair throw from Groh. Eller hit Johnston with a pitched ball. Griffith birched a single to centre and sent Olson scurrying over the plate.

An error also started the Reds toward the two runs which gave them the advantage in the fifth. Kilduff muffed Duncan's roller and Kopf walked. Neale beat out a hit to Johnston, filling the bases. Wille Kilduff was busy throwing out Wingo Duncan scored and tied the game into a knot. Kopf got all the way to third and went right on to home when Eller was retired by Cadore. Rath grounded to Kilduff for the third out.

And Kopf Fans!

The Reds threatened in the eighth, in which they filled the bases with two out, but Kopf missed his chance and fanned. Cadore locked pretty bad in that inning, for he walked Rath, Groh and Duncan, the last named being passed on purpose.

The intentional pass figured in the clogging of the paths by the Dodgers in the sixth. Wheat, Kilduff and Miller, who was given his pass on purpose, all walked. Eller figured on getting Cadore, and he did, for Leon fanned. The score:

Giants Displace Reds from Second Place

CLEVELAND increased its lead in the American League pennant race to one full game yesterday by defeating Washington, while Chicago was winning the second game of the series from New York. Brooklyn maintained its six game lead in the National League race by defeating Cincinnati, the world's champions slipping to third place and the Giants jumping ahead into second position.

Although Cleveland has a lead of eleven points in the American League, the first three clubs are so closely bunched as regards games won and lost that one day's results has little effect upon the chances of any one of three winning the pennant. At present it is a mathematical impossibility to figure out a certain winner.

The situation in the National League, however, is different, and although Brooklyn has not yet clinched the pennant, it will take almost a superhuman effort to nose out the Dodgers. They have ten more games to play, and if they win seven it will be impossible for New York or Cincinnati to tie them if the Giants and Reds win all their remaining games, fourteen and seventeen, respectively.

BOSTON, Sept. 17 (National).—In defeating Boston 9 to 4 to-day St. Louis made twelve consecutive hits. After Hornsby lined to Boeckel in the fourth the visitors made five hits in a row off Watson and also five straight hits off McQuillan, who relieved Watson. McHenry, the last batter in this inning, was out trying to stretch a double into a triple, retiring the side.

I. Townsend started the fifth inning in the box for Boston and Lavan and Heathcote hit safely. The streak was broken when Clemons filed to Maranville. The score:

BALK LINE BILLIARD TITLE.

The professional 18.2 balk line billiard championship for 1920-21 will be played in two sections this year, the preliminary tournament beginning about November 8 at San Francisco, and the final in this city December 6, 7 and 8.

According to announcement entries, limited to six players, for the San Francisco contests will close on October 18. Each game will consist of 400 points. Winners of the first and second prizes in the California games will compete with Willie Hoppe, the title holder, in the final series, limited to three players, which will be played here.

POLO FINAL TO-DAY.

The final match for the open polo championship of the United States takes place this afternoon on the international field at Meadow Brook when Cooperstown meets Meadow Brook in the closing tussle for the challenge cup. Both teams have gone through to the final with flying colors, and although Meadow Brook reigns favorite the opinion is that Cooperstown will be heard from with advantage when the last period is played. Of course Meadow Brook has the advantage of Milburn playing back, and he is sure to be on the hitting line at the crucial moment. Following is the lineup:

Meadow Brook.	Pos.	Cooperstown.
F. S. von Stade	No. 1	L. C. Rumsey.
J. W. Webb	No. 2	R. Wanamaker 2d.
R. E. Strawbridge	No. 3	C. C. Rumsey.

WHITE SOX TRIPLE YANKS TO DEFEAT

Supposedly Moribund Chicagoans Make Six Three Baggers and Win by 6 to 4.

Special to THE SUN AND NEW YORK HERALD.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The supposedly moribund White Sox sprung another batting orgy on the Yankees here to-day and tripled the hapless Hugginites to death. They developed a perfect mania for slamming three baggers to the furthermost limits of Meusel's section of the outfield and ran the languid Californian ragged while grinding out their second consecutive triumph over the once proud and haughty, but now severely chastened, Ruppert-Huston forces. The score was 6 to 4, and might have been even more so if the home guards hadn't taken to running wild on the bases after piling up a commanding lead.

Herber, Thormahlen, the author of impressive recent triumphs over the Athletics and the Indians, started on the mound for the Yankees and was hammered into submission in two innings. During this hectic period the Sox collected four of their six three baggers and three of them were converted into runs. Carl Mays assumed the pitching burden in the third, and was plastered with some profusion in almost every inning thereafter. Only one of the three runs scored against the underslung hurler was earned, however, the other two accruing when Ward let an easy roller trickle through his legs in the sixth.

Urban Faber, the hero of the 1917 world's series, opposed the Yankee hurlers on the hill, and was brilliantly effective when he had to be. Only two hits were registered against him in the first five innings and he yielded only eight all told. Three of them came together in the ninth in a belated and futile rally and gave the Yankees two of their four runs.

Yankees Much Subdued.

The Yankees were a spry and hopeful band when they clattered into Chicago yesterday morning, but two consecutive defeats at the hands of the White Sox, a club which was supposed to have cracked beyond repair, has taken a lot of the gimp out of them. As a result of their reverses here they are almost two full games behind the Indians, and it is beginning to look as though nothing less than a miracle would suffice to put them in front again. Manager Miller Huggins's abject fear of the Sox has apparently beaten the Yanks out of a pennant they seemed to have won.

Triples by three successive batters gave the White Sox two runs in their half of the first inning. With two out Eddie Collins tripled down the right field line and completed the circuit when Hannah let Pipp's good relay on Meusel's belated throw trickle through him to the stand. Jackson slammed another three bagger to the same place and rode across the plate on a similar blow by Felsch.

In the second inning Risberg led off with the Sox's fourth triple off Thormahlen, and Schalk fouled out to Ward. Thormahlen was as badly rattled as Huggins himself and was caught flat-footed on the mound when Faber bunted on a squeeze play. He made a bewildered sort of a swoop at the ball and overran it, Risberg scoring and Faber reaching first. Strunk then slapped a scorching grounder to Pratt, who grabbed it on the first bound and started a double play which retired the side.

Aaron Ward was the Yankee lead off man in the third and lined a single to right for the first hit off Faber. Hannah followed with a double over first, and J. Shano Collins, undecided whether to throw to third or the plate, compromised on the Chicago dugout. Ward and Hannah were both permitted to score on the overthrow, and Weaver voiced bitter protests in a high cracked tenor, but the decision stood.

Mays on the Mound.

Mays was on the hill when the White Sox went to bat in their half of the third, and the first hostile batsman to face him, Weaver, poked a single over second. Eddie Collins walked and Mays forced Jackson at second, and with J. Collins at bat the Sox attempted a double steal. Mays, intercepted Hannah's throw, however, and returned it to the catcher in time to nail Weaver at the plate.

A lull ensued until the sixth. Then Jackson drove his second triple—and the White Sox's fifth—to the customary right field corner, and Felsch drew a pass. J. Collins lined to Lewis in short left, but Risberg poled a single to left, scoring Jackson and sending Felsch to third and advanced to second on Lewis's throw to head off Felsch. Ray Schalk then tapped one to Ward, who let it roll between his legs, Felsch and Risberg both streaking home.

Lewis led off for the Yankees in the ninth, and hammered a single past Risberg. Ward's infield out put him on second, and Hannah's third hit, a single to right, brough him home. Fewster was named to bat for Mays, and Ray French, late of the Des Moines club of the Western League, broke into the game as a pinch runner for Hannah. Fewster walked.

Peckinpaugh slammed a single to centre, bringing French across, but Fewster tried for third on Felsch's momentary fumble, and was caught for the second out. Pipp then ended it all with a grounder to Weaver, who pegged him out at first. The score:

INDIANS EASILY DEFEAT SENATORS

Coveleskie Strikes Out Eight Batsmen and Allows Only Seven Hits.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 17 (American).—What started out like a pitchers' battle between Coveleskie and Courtney to-day ended in a rout for Washington, Cleveland winning, 9 to 3.

Long hits by Smith, Wambsganss, Evans and Speaker gave the Indians a lead, and with Acosta pitching the eighth inning Cleveland scored four more on two passes and three hits, two of which were for extra bases.

Coveleskie was effective throughout, striking out eight batsmen and allowing only seven hits. The score:
