WASHINGTON, April 11th, 1837.

Congressional Burial Ground.

Among those who sleep "in cold obstruction, and who rot" in this city of the dead, are two who, wearied with the world, or in a fit of phrenzy, sought for rest in the grave. The o e was an officer of high rank in the government; and the other, a representative of the people. They are honored with the same memorial as those who lived out their term of life on earth, and their dust commingles with that of the mighty dead around them. Nil mortuis nisi bonum is not a correct maxim. The vices as well as the virtues of the dead should be recorded, as examples to be shunned or followed by the living. While strolling through this cemetry, one cannot but exclaim—

"How populous, how vital is the grave!
This is creation's melancholy vault,
The vale funeral, the sad cypress gloom;
The land of apparitions, empty shades;
All, all on earth is shadow."

But a few years have elapsed since this spot was covered with a primeval forest—the haunt of the savage, and the lurking place of the wild beast;—now how populous with the dead—now the last resting place of those who once fascinated the mind with their eloquence—charmed the eye with their beauty, and filled the heart with admiration by their bravery and patriotism. Here reposes, too, the body of an Indian warrior, whose last wish was, that the big guns should be fired over him, to waft his spirit to the region, where wanders the soul of his fathers. Pushmahata's wish was gratified, and a tomb has been erected over his remains, to indicate that he was the friend of the white man. He died as he had lived, the lofty and fearless warrior, and like Outalipi, he "—— would not stain with grief

The death song of an Indian chief."

The rude son of the forest, and the accomplished occupant of the drawing room, repose together in the bosom of their common mother. What a leveller is death!

Those who have the superintendance of this burial ground are attempting to ornament it with trees and shrubs, to render it a still more agreeable promenade. The tree of Heaven—the Babylonian willow—the elm, and the cedar—are beginning to spread their branches over the gravelled walks, and to afford their shade to the melancholy visiter. The arbor vita, rose, calicanthus and myrtle, are also planted and nourished by the hand of affection and tenderness; and it is curious to see "many a mouldering heap," covered with and putting forth the trees of life. But the cypress and the yew are wanting. These funeral decorations are not suited to this climate, and the is looked for in vain. And the yew, so common in the church yards of England, the symbol of immortality, the melancholy and appropriate companion of the dead, finds no abiding place here. I like to see its outspreading branches, and dark and sombre foliage, amid the scenery of a grave yard.

"Funéraire des morts, protecteur de leur cendres,"

Cheerless, unsocial plant, that loves to dwell
'Midst skeletons and tombs, epitaphs and worms,
Where light hoof'd ghosts and visionary shades
Beneath the wan cold moon, as fame reports,
Embow'ring thick, perform'd, their mystic rounds;
No other merriment dull tree is thine.—Blair's Grave.

A noxious tree is the church yard yew,
As if from the dead its sap it drew,
Dark are its branches, and dismal to see,
Like plumes at death's latest solemnity.
Spiry and jagged, and black as the wings
Which some spirit of ill, o'er a sepulchre flings;
Oh, a terrible tree is the church yard yew,
Like it is there nothing so ghastly to view.

But the rose is seen in all its varieties, unfolding its beautiful buds, and breathing its delicious fragrance, upon almost every grave. This plant, which, according to Anacreon

Preserves the cold inurned clay,
And marks the vestage of decay,

is a fine burial ground ornament, and an expressive emblem of affection. "Cette fleur qui fut appelée, par les anciens la splendeur des plants est si belle, son perfume est si délicieux qu'on en a fait un emblème universel. La Rose est le symbole des sentimens les plus divers, des choses les plus opposées entr'elles; la pieté en dicore les temples, l'amour et la gaieté en forment des couronnes, la douleur l'effeuille sur les tombeaux, la pudeur et la chastité la recoivent comme le prix le plus doux et le plus glorieux."

It was evening—the declining sun shed his rays upon the white tombs and marble monuments around me, and the dark foliage of the cedars gave additional gloom to the scene. The sound of the mattock with which the sexton was preparing a resting place for one who had just quitted this beautiful world, struck harshly upon my ear. I was leaning on a neat paling, which surrounded a beautiful little monument erected to the memory of a child. I recalled the lines of Malesherbes—

Elle est-il de ce monde ou les plus belles choses,
Ont le pire destin;
Et Rose elle a vecue comme vivent les roses
L'espace d'un matin.

A deep groan reached my ear. I looked round, and saw my friend Wallace seated on a grave at some distance from me, with his head buried in his hands. I had never seen him thus afflicted. "Pardon this weakness," said he,—"under that humble sod lies all that remains of those I once doated on to madness; a wife and two lovely children who were snatched from me in the brief space of six months, and have left me desolate and alone in this world.

Omnia tecum una periunt quadia nostra,
Que una in vita dulcis alibat amor.

I have planted their grave, for they sleep together, with flowering shrubs, and marked the spot where they repose in death with two scions of the tree of heaven. But how vain is all I can do to fill the aching void their heavy loss has produced. I long

——"for death
To year ning for the dead."

I hang over this grave and think of what it contains; that the beautiful beings whom I have so often and so fondly hugged to my bosom and kissed with rapturous joy, are now but sordid dust, an indistinguishable mass of clay: that I shall never, never see them again in this world, and that their lovely existence which memory dwells on with melancholy delight as a beautiful dream has passed away forever. With them the happiness of my life has fled never to return; but the subject is painful—we will retire.

There is no prospect of any alteration in the financial system adopted by this administration. The distresses of the country do not affect these worthies in the least. The influence of Jacksonism hangs upon them like an incubus, and they dare not propose a change. Van Buren is as little seen here as in New York, and he is moreover pledged to follow up the principles, if principles they can be called, of the last administration. This is the first instance in which he has ever been committed, and he finds himself in a dilemma. He appears also to want energy, and to be afraid of putting his head out of the shell. He will find his berth not at all comfortable, and that the mere glory of holding so elevated a situation is but a poor equivalent for the cares, responsibilities and toils of the office. It has been said with great truth that no country can bear to be worse governed than a republic, and I think the recent history of ours demonstrates its correctness The people can bear much, and I suspect they will have to bear it for some time, unless they will rouse from their dream of folly, and send men to govern the country who are more disposed to consult its interests than their own. Living here, as they do, at the public crib, the voice of distress is wafted to their ear from a distance, but not feeling it, they do not believe in its reality. They are moreover urgent to persevere in their mad policy by the ignorant and designing knaves of the party who neither feel nor know any thing of the condition of the country, and who being themselves beyond the reach of the pressure or fed at the public expense, suppose that it is nothing more than party clamor, and cry out the country is prosperous and the currency sound. God save Andrew Jackson and Martin Van Buren.

Whitney has been whitewashed. He has taken the benefit of the act of insolvency and paid off his creditors with some few articles of furniture, a carriage, &c. and means to pass his summer at the springs, and spend as much there as would pay off some of his debts. The Globe lauds his honesty. Well, be it so. I confess I do not understand the new code of morals which [illegible] at a [illegible]stration introduced. I have taken up my residence in the country for a time, but I shall visit Washington frequently, and write from it. I am pleased to see the ground you have taken. It is spirited and patriotic, and you deserve well of your country.

"I regret" says Coleridge, "to see that vile and barbarous vocable talented, stealing out of the newspapers into the leading reviews, and most respectable publications of the day. Why not shillinged, farthinged, tenpenced, &c.? The formation of a participle passive from a noun is a license that nothing but a very peculiar felicity can excuse. If mere convenience is to justify such attempts upon the idiom, you cannot stop till the language becomes, in the proper sense of the word, corrupt. Most of these pieces of slang come from America."

It is hard in the midst of many tempting objects to keep the golden bridle of moderation upon the affections. The heart of the Christian, like the moon, commonly suffers its eclipse when it is at the full, and that by the interposition of the earth.

Charges of Plagiarism are often made wantonly; yet the following resemblance can scarcely be casual. Shakspeare makes Brutus say,

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is
Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream.
[Julius Caesar, Act 2. Sc. 1.

In the poem Il Burdo, by Monti, one of the most noted of modern Italian poets, I find the following lines.

Tra la primiera genetrice idea
Di perigliosa impresa, ed il momento
Dell' esecuzione, l'intervallo è tutto
Fantasmi, e bolle de' pensieri il flutto.
[Canto vi. Stanza 50.

Lots at West Hoboken.

500 LOTS AT WEST HOBOKEN.—Mechanics and others are informed, that in consequence of the exorbitant prices demanded for rents in the city of New York, the owner is induced to offer a part of the above lots for sale on the most accommodating terms to those who will immediately build on them. But they are not for sale except for immediate improvement.

The above property is situated one mile west of Hoboken Ferry, and about 88 rods from the Elysian Fields, situated on a lofty and even elevation. For health, prospect and beauty of scenery cannot be surpassed in nature. Having a noble and commanding view of the sea, together with the cities of New York and Brooklyn, with their various rivers, harbors and shipping.

The prices of the above lots do not exceed one third that of Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, and Staten Island, having the same or less proximity to the city of New York, and possessing far less advantages, as may be shown on visiting the lots

Inquire of C. J. BROWNING, on the premises, or at his office, No. 21 Wall street, N. Y.

N. B.—Persons purchasing and wishing to contract, will have a beautiful and convenient cottage built for them at from $500 to $1000.

Also, two or all houses to let, together with suitable gardens attached. Possession given 1st of April and May. a4-1m*

FOR SALE—VALUABLE BUILDING LOTS—In the improving Village of Beekmantown, in the town of Mount Pleasant, County of Westchester.

On Wednesday, the 19th of April, will be offered for sale at auction, on the ground, or at Van Wart and Van Tassell's store, about 100 Village Lots, 50 feet front by 125 feet deep, very eligibly situated on the Main Post Road and the streets adjoining commanding excellent situations for business, and beautiful and extensive prospects of the river, scenery, &c.

Terms of sale—10 per cent on the day of the sale; 15 per cent on the day of the delivery of the deeds, being the first day of June next, and the remainder, if desired, to remain on bond and mortgage, at 6 per cent.

For further particulars, see Maps. a12 d119

TO THE TEACHERS OF THE FRENCH LANGUAGE.—We would invite the attention of the Teachers to the French Grammar by Mr. J. P. WIERZBICKI, just published by W. Sandford, formerly J. & W. Sandford. It is calulated to supercede all books of that nature that may be found in the market at present, and there is no doubt that it will become very popular on account of the improvements that there are, which facilitate all difficulties with which on English pupil meets: here we will specify some of them. Until now-a-days, it was thought that an Englishman could not learn the pronunciation of the French Language, without hearing one who pronounces it correctly himself; but Mr. Wierzbicki's Grammar teaches as the fancy of that opinion; for the fact is, that until now there was no grammar that gave any satisfactory rules facilitating the difficulty; his grammar on the contrary, gives all rules that there are in the language, (for he speaks about every letter giving its proper sound,) so much so, that we will not hesitate to pronounce that every one may acquire a good pronunciation of the French without even a teacher, though true, that that nicity of the pronunciation which cannot be described in no way but acquired and appreciated only by the ear, is left to be learned by the organ of hearing. Upon the whole the precise rules that he (the author) gives will enable every one to be understood by every Frenchman. He likewise made a new classification of the article which cannot be found elsewhere, that article the use of which puzzles every Englishman that attempts to speak French. Likewise he gives rules in what order the French words ought to be used in order to make an intelligible sentence; (this cannot be found in any other grammar;) finally the arrangement that pervades his grammar is a new and easy one, calculating to facilitate the study of that beautiful language for the pupil, and lessen the labor of the teacher, and we are so confident of its merits that we will say nothing of it ourselves, but solicit a candid perusal of the teachers, for we are satisfied they will be pleased with it. Indeed it bids fair to supercede all others. It can be had at wholesale or retail at the office of publication, 29 Ann st. N. Y.

BERLIN AND REFLECTING GRATES—DORIC AND MINERVA FIRE-PLACES.—Also, a large assortment of Grates and Fire Sets, suitable for parlors, chambers, offices, and stores, are offered for sale by the subscribers, wholesale and retail, at their warehouse, No. 67 Exchange place.

Berlin Grates.—These superb castings, equalling in finish the finest metal, are ornamented with rich and chaste designs, executed in bas relief. They are colored by a new process, not acted upon by heat or rust, and requiring water only to keep them clean.

The Reflecting Grate, recently introduced, unites beauty and economy, being constructed with brilliant metallic Reflectors, to throw into the room a large portion of the heat which ordinarily escapes through the flue.

Doric and Minerva Fire-Place.—This well established article is known to the public as one superior to any thing now in use for burning coal, as it combines all the advantages of both the usual modes of communicating heat, by radiation, as in the common grate and fire-place, and by transmission, as in close stoves. It diffuses warmth throughout the room by means of heated air, which by the construction of the Doric Fire Place is not permitted to come in contact with heated iron plates, which is well known to have the effect of destroying the oxygen of the atmosphere, rendering it often oppressive, and always injurious to the health. It is portable, a convenience easily appreciated, as they can be removed at pleasure. It is adapted to the parlor, the warehouse, and the counting room, uniting the comfort of an open fire with perfect safety and convenience. For sale by f11-1y BAXTER & BROTHER, 67 Exchange place.

TO HOUSE AND CHURCH BUILDERS.—The subscriber is now prepared to execute any orders for any kind of metalic Furniture used in Houses or Churches, such as Door Plates, Knockers, Figures or Numbers, Locks, Knobs, Escutcheons, Bell Trickers, Ventilators, &c. &c. &c., all of German Silver, which certainly is by far preferable to plated metal, as it bears a rubbing and polishing to the consumption of the metal itself and since the price for this metal in its finished state is yet below the price of plated ware, there is no doubt but what proprietors and builders of houses will also prefer it. All the builders and Proprietors of Houses, are invited to examine the specimens of the multifarious uses and articles manufactured by

CARL KING,
THE WELL KNOWN AND CELEBRATED
LADIES' PREMIUM STRAW HAT MANUFACTURER,

Would inform the ladies that he has a greater variety of fashionable shapes and of finer materials than any other house in the United States. He flatters himself with being in possession of the ONLY TRUE FRENCH GIPSEY HAT, with the flare entirely round, so much worn in Europe, in the most fashionable circles. It is manufactured of finer TUSCAN BRAID than ever before imported, and of which he is sole proprietor. This Hat is of a peculiarly graceful shape and needs only to be seen to be admired. He has also a varied stock of IMPORTED COLORED STRAWS AND COLORED TUSCAN of remarkable rare qualities, all made to the latest fashion—which he is enabled to produce earlier than any other manufacturer, thro' the vigilance of his European agents.

N.B. A great variety of fashionable Paris Ribbons, which he challenges the Union to equal.

JOSEPH P. SPENCER

☞ Having completed the arrangements attendant upon opening his Hat Warehouse, is now prepared to furnish an article suiting general use among the genteel community, and possessing the increased value of capacity for more lengthened service, at the standard price, viz. $5

As a guide to those who may favor him with their patronage, he would present the following rules, which will invariably govern his business.

Firstly. The hats sold at his establishment will be of the same value, though differing in shape and general appearance.

Secondly. The very moderate price demanded not warranting a system of credit, all sales must be subjected to cash payments.

He has also added to his stock a choice selection of Umbrellas, Canes, Gloves, Handkerchiefs, Toilet Brushes, &c.

The sales Room which is fitted up in a style commensurate with the growing taste and refinement of the city, is located at the corner of Wall and New streets, being a part of the building about to be occupied by the Courier & Enquirer. a8 3m

NEW FASHIONABLE HAT ESTABLISHMENT.

☞ BIRD, late foreman to, and many years with Leary & Co after the most successful experience in all the branches of his business, having established himself in the trade, now offers to his friends, at his sales room, No. 13 Nassau street, corner of Pine, a splendid assortment of hats of every variety of nap, from the medium to the plain, which, in style of model, material, and finish, shall be found unrivalled. He intends to sell at $5 only, and by directing his whole care to that single style, is confident of producing an article without any superior; and fashion and utility having established this quality as well for economy and elegance as durability, he deems it an obvious advantage to the public to confine his efforts to one purpose instead of making experiments in variety. Fearing no rival in the department of taste, he is willing to entrust himself in competition with any establishment in producing this article.

He has made arrangements for the London and Paris fashions with some of the best houses in these cities, and will always be first in the market with the new standard established by foreign taste. a5-1m BIRD, 13 Nassau corner of Pine.

TO TRAVELLERS.
NEW PACKET LINE BETWEEN PHILADELPHIA AND PITTSBURGH,
Via Pennsylvania Canal and Rail Road,
Express Line.

The Public are informed that the above line has commenced operations this spring.

The Boats and Cars are entirely new, and have been built on the most approved principles.

The Boats are wider and more roomy than any which have formerly been in use, and also are furnished in the most complete and handsome style. The models are such as to insure speed for running.

The Cars on the Rail Road are of the strongest kind and finished in the handsomest manner, and every precaution has been taken to build them of such construction as to prevent the possibility of breaking.

No pains will be spared by the proprietors of the "Express Line," to promote the comfort and accommodation of those who may patronize it. Speed in making the passage will be a primary object.

To persons travelling westward, the "Express Line" offers every inducement for a speedy and pleasant journey.

This Line also connects with the U. S. Mail Steam Packet Line, which leaves Pittsburgh daily for Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Nashville, New Orleans, and all intermediate places, so that passengers can go direct from Philadelphia without detention.

Office, No. 89 Chesnut street. A. F. GLASS, Agent.

Seats may be taken at No. 51 Chesnut street, No. 1 Arcade, East Avenue, and at the N. W. corner of Broad and Chesnut streets.

MISS PRESCOTT'S STUDY FOR LADIES. 89 Leonard street, one door West of Broadway.—Miss Prescott continues to give lessons to Ladies in the various branches of a solid education. Those finding themselves deficient, either in Penmanship, Arithmetic, English Grammar, Single Entry Book-keeping, correct Reading, Geography, History, &c., can receive such a course of confidential instruction, as will, in a short time, render them proficients, if not critics. The instruction is individual. Miss Prescott solicits the attention of those interested. She has a variety of specimens of pupils' improvement, and numerous references and recommendations from literary gentlemen, both in this City and New England, from which she deems it sufficient to offer the following:—

To whom it may concern: This may certify that Miss J. J. Prescott is, in my judgment, well qualified to give an accurate knowledge of English Grammar to those who wish to obtain instruction in that indispensable requisite of a polished education.

New York, 17th January, 1835. C. M. INGERSOLL.

With pleasure I testify in favor of Miss J. J. Prescott's knowledge of the theory and practice of Single Entry Book-keeping. I believe her fully capable of teaching that branch of a useful education. C. C. MARSH.

New York, December 1, 1834.

From the knowledge I have of Miss J. J. Prescott's superior skill in the art of Writing, I can cheerfully and confidently recommend her as being well qualified to teach this elegant and important accomplishment. NATHANIEL D. GOULD.

Boston, July 25, 1832.

This certifieth that Miss J. J. Prescott has been a very acceptable and perfectly well approved member of this institution; that she has studied here, with talents rarely equalled, and success of the most promising character, English Grammar, Geography, common Arithmetic, Latin, &c., and she has my entire confidence in her superior qualifications, both moral and acquired, to instruct pupils in the solid branches of literature. JOSEPH JOSLIN,
Preceptor of Monmouth Academy.

Monmouth, Me. Nov. 26 1832.

The high testimonials of character and scholarship which Miss J. J. Prescott has received from sources which I respect, and the strong affection and regard that she enjoys with an extended and respectable acquaintance in this quarter, afford me pleasure in adding my name to the introductions and credentials she has thought might be useful to her in establishing herself as an instructress in that section of the country which she now proposes to visit. J. NICHOLS, D. D.

Portland, February 24th, 1829.

Besides the above testimonials, she has others of her character and scholarship from the following gentlemen:—

Rev. J. WOODMAN, New Gloucester, Me.,
Hon. E. HILTON, Wiscasset, Me.,
Hon. J. M. HARPER, late member of Congress;

And numerous other names equally honorable, that can be seen by calling at her residence, 89 Leonard street.

Miss Prescott is happy to say that she has been instructing in this city nearly three years, and during that time she has given the most unqualified satisfaction to hundreds of ladies, both married and single, in the above branches, and to many of whom she is authorized to refer, if required

Penmanship.—Under Miss Prescott's tuition, the pupil may, in eighteen easy lessons, of one hour each, break up the most eligible or cramped hand-writing, and obtain a rapid, neat, and beautiful style, which the pupil may be sure of retaining. This is truly desirable. Two terms are quite sufficient to instruct those who have never written, and who cannot even read writing. Charge, including stationary and penmaking, $10 per term.

Reading.—This course occupies three months, four days in each week, and one hour in each day. It embraces a knowledge of Orthography, spelling, and fashionable pronunciation, comprising in the course the most critical rules of accent, quantity, emphasis, pause and tone. Ladies may be assured of improving their style, and of becoming good readers in that short period. Charge, $10 per course.

English Grammar.—Those persons who habitually speak bad English, do not know how much they sin against the ears of their more correct hearers. They are not aware that every error in a sentence they utter, is as obvious to the ear as a black mark on the face, would be to the eye. In teaching the science of English Grammar, Miss Prescott adopts as a text-book the well known work of C. M. Ingersoll, Esq., and in imparting a knowledge of practical Grammar, her care is to impose as little as possible on the memory of her pupils. This course involves twenty four lectures of one hour each, and will be delivered regularly twice a week.—Charge, $10 per course.

Book-Keeping.—Single Entry. This course comprises twelve lessons. It will be useful in a two fold sense, as it explains the nature of business transactions, gives a general knowledge of trade and commercial intercourse, and will enable a person the better to act as her own agent, or with more ability to inspect the accounts of her agent. In this branch, Miss Prescott pursues the valuable system of Mr. C. C. Marsh, now of this city. Charge, $10 per course.

Miss Prescott deems it not unimportant to say that her accommodations for pupils are of the very best kind, and that they are taught in a English families exclusively by herself. Married ladies, and others who wish it, may depend upon the utmost secrecy, if required.
