BARNUM'S MUSEUM.—IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT, that the "Serious Family" is a highly popular and very interesting comedy, of a choice order. Also, that whenever it has been played, a crowded house would certainly ensue. Wherever this piece has been presented, our theatre-going people, and especially our numerous critics, have always showed an indulgent desire to watch after the important cast contained in the character of the very serious Aminadab Sleek. This same desire will be felt here, and we predict full and crowded houses at the Museum. Hadaway takes the character of Sleek—Clarke, that of Torrens, and Miss Chapman that of Mrs. Delmaine. The Political Revolution at Albany.

MASS MEETING OF THE DEMOCRACY—THE PROCLAMATION OF THE GOVERNOR, CALLING AN EXTRA SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE.

OUR ALBANY CORRESPONDENCE.

ALBANY, April 19, 1851.

Uprising of the People—Monster Meeting at the Capitol—The Twelve Apostles Sustained—Governor's Proclamation for an Extra Session, &c. &c.

If the meeting held at the capitol last night is any indication of public sentiment, then the members of the Legislature who attempted to pass the Canal bill, must certainly meet with condemnation from the people. It was called for the purpose of testing the sense of the people in this city in relation to the course taken by the twelve Senators who so willingly resigned, rather than remain and witness a palpable violation and disregard of an important provision in their State constitution. The meeting is acknowledged on all hands to have been the largest, most respectable and enthusiastic of any ever held at the capitol of the State. Many of the old and most highly respectable citizens, who have for years kept themselves aloof from active political action, have been awakened to the subject, and are preparing to engage in the contest with the ardor of youth and the wisdom of age.

The principal speakers were Horatio Seymour, of Utica, and Mr. Tilden, of New York city. The former gentleman came up valiantly in support of the constitution, and against the Canal bill; expressing his conviction of its unconstitutionality, and regarding it as a measure only intended as a matter of party speculation. Mr. Seymour is an able and pleasant speaker, carrying his hearers smoothly with him, without the rippling in the wave. Mr. Tilden informed the audience that he was a member of the convention which framed the present constitution, and on the committee with Michael Hoffman, in perfecting the financial article in the constitution which the majority in the Legislature have attempted to violate; and he remarked that it was agreed on all sides, by all hands in the convention, that it was supposed the constitution was so formed as to effectually restrict the Legislature from running the people in debt, without obtaining their consent. It was supposed that the article in relation to the finances was so securely guarded that no legislation could so pervert it as to create a debt, by any evasion or artifice. He gave the audience a very lucid account of the proceedings of the convention. He pronounced the Canal bill unconstitutional, and believed if the question was directly submitted to the voters of the city of New York—the city of his residence—the course which the twelve Senators had chosen to pursue would be triumphantly sustained.

A series of resolutions was introduced by Mr. Watts Sherman, cashier of the Albany City Bank. They are strong and decided, unequivocal in character, strongly approving the defeat of the Canal bill, and condemning the conduct of those members of the Legislature, especially the Senators who have been compelled to carry out the behests of Thurlow Weed in opposition to their better judgments. Over and over again, several of those Senators had doubted the propriety and expediency of the passage of the law; but they have been compelled to yield, giving evidence that they regarded their oaths to support the constitution, no better than custom house oaths.

This bill unites both sections of the democratic party. The adhesion will be quickly formed throughout the State, and the epithets of hunker or barnburner will no longer be bandied about. Both sections will drop the negro agitation, and march shoulder to shoulder in maintenance of the constitution. Last night were seen mingled, as in days past, the leaders and rank and file. They have forgotten all former differences, agreed to let all other matters rest, and make battle in common, and in fraternal energy, against the whigs. We now see Eli Perry, the Mayor, hunker, appointed chairman by a radical—Heratio Seymour, Watts Shearman, Erastus Corning, Peter Gansevoost, and other hunkers, in earnest unity with John VanBuren, Tilden, Stanton, bitter barnburners, joining their forces and fortunes in harmonious efforts to sustain the retiring Senators.

The enthusiasm of last night will soon spread throughout the State, especially in those twelve districts where another election is to be held. The great battle will be fought in the 20th district, comprising the counties of Madison and Oswego, lately represented by Mr. Stone; and in the 21st district, Jefferson and Lewis, from which Mr. Skinner resigned. The former is impregnated with a promise made by the leaders in the nine million corruption fund, that before the canals are finished, means will be accomplished to raise two or three millions more, to enlarge the Oswego canal. In Oswego, the canal interest will prevail; still, with a strong majority in Madison, Mr. Stone may, nevertheless, be returned.

In Jefferson and Lewis the interests of the Black River canal will draw off several votes from the democratic candidate. But the district is a very strong one, and it is very doubtful whether a sufficient number of worshippers of Michael Hoffman can be seduced into the support of the whig nominee, even with a prospect of a more speedy completion of that canal, by the manifest repudiation of one of the most important features of the constitution. There is no danger in any other district, that any constitution violator can be elected. And with an addition of those two whig Senators, for the sake of the argument, what can the spoilers gain? That will make, them only nineteen. Carroll and Crook will resign, as their colleagues have done, should the emergency arrive; and Dr. Brandreth, although a little crooked and unsafe now, will never stand out against the torrent of indignation which he will witness against the infamous nine million bill. He will also follow his democratic colleagues, if the time shall arrive demanding the sacrifice. The whigs need not flatter themselves that they will ever obtain his vote for the bill, while it contains three or four of its present obnoxious features. The Doctor is safe, notwithstanding the honeyed flattery of the Albany Journal.

Governor Hunt has issued a proclamation for an extra session of the Legislature. He has the power to do so under section 4, article 4, of the constitution, a subdivision of which, says, "he shall have power to convene the Legislature (or the Senate only,) on extraordinary occasions." He has appointed the second Tuesday of June as the time of meeting. In the meantime, he will also issue warrants to fill the vacancies occasioned by the resignation of the twelve Senators. W.

The following are the resolutions passed by the democratic meeting at Albany, on the evening of the 18th instant, called in consequence of the resignation of the twelve democratic Senators, on the attempted passage of the Canal Enlargement bill:—

Resolved, That the republican electors of the city of Albany have witnessed with astonishment the origin and progress of the project initiated by the State administration, and nearly consummated by the Legislature, of adding nine millions of debt to the burden of twenty-two millions, under which the energies of the State now labor. That a proposition of this character has struck us with surprise, originating as it has in a time of profound peace and prosperity, called for by no public calamity, by no unexpected necessity, by no stringent demand of business, not discussed before the people, nor petitioned for by them; yet attempted to be forced through the Legislature by a party vote, and urged with such recklessness as ultimately to disorganize legislation, and defeat the passage of important bills, by compelling its opponents to resort to the last act of resistance and resign their seats. And that we are here to express our indignation that so great a public wrong has been attempted.

Resolved, That while we know that this project of debt originated in no public necessity, or in any desire to promote the public good, we believe that we can detect in its features the evidence of other motives. It proposes to grasp, for more than twenty years in advance, the revenues of the public works, in order to form the basis of an expenditure of three millions a year for three years, and setting aside the Canal Commissioners, to place the control of the fund, and of the contracts under the law, in the hands of five whig politicians, constituting a majority of one in the Canal Board—whose terms are about to expire, and who compose a tribunal, whose past acts of improvidence, whose inexperience and looseness have forfeited the confidence of the people, and whose only hope of perpetuating power, or sustaining further the dynasty of which they form part, rests in the liberal expenditure of nine millions of money in favored localities and among active partisans.

Resolved, That the Canal bill, which has been defeated by the resolute and manly resignation of democratic Senators, is a direct, palpable, and audacious violation of the constitution of this State; that the expedient which it proposes for raising nine millions of dollars, by whatever specious name it may be called, is, in its essential character and practical effect, the creation of a debt; is inconsistent with the provisions of the constitution which prescribe the mode in which the surplus revenues shall be applied to the canals, and confine that mode to the expenditure of the surplus as it shall be actually received; is incompatible with the provisions which expressly prohibit the contracting of debts except in the manner therein specified; and is in utter disregard of the provision which deprives the Legislature of the power to authorize or direct the application of the revenues for more than two years in anticipation.

Resolved, That if the Canal bill were not clearly forbidden by the words of the constitution, it is undeniably within the meaning and intention of the express prohibition of that instrument, as shown by the controversies which gave rise to the convention and the discussions which attended the formation and adoption of the constitution.

Resolved, That the constitution is binding upon the agents of the people acting under it, in the sense and meaning in which its provisions were designed by those who framed them, and the people who adopted them, as shown by contemporaneous discussions and history; that the attempt to evade the real intention of an instrument between private parties by artful construction, is universally characterized as dishonest; and that the attempt to evade the real intention of the constitution by such construction by the legislative agents of the people, is a betrayal of a high trust, and a violation of the solemn obligation of the official oath.

Resolved, That if the Legislature still have the constitutional power to contract debts or to anticipate and consume the revenues for an indefinite period before they accrue, the present constitution has utterly failed of the object which induced the people to assemble a convention and to establish a new constitution; and it is vain to hope that any language will be sufficient to produce the effect designed by the people in restraining their legislative agents from creating debts and mortgages upon the public revenues; there is an end to all constitutional limitations upon delegated power, and the very foundation of republican government is swept away.

Resolved, That we are struck with profound amazement by the attitude of our Legislature, sworn to support the constitution, proposing to issue a paper "scrip" or "certificate," on the face of which all obligations of payment is expressly disavowed, and to authorize the reception of this as a basis of bank issues, when the constitution expressly declares that it shall be the duty of the Legislature to see that all such issues are "amply secured."

Resolved, That the people—the property holders—the laboring and industrial classes—all classes—all society are deeply interested in the paper currency of the State—that it can have no existence but by their will, and as it affects and measures the value of every man's property, should never be allowed existence unless upon a basis which renders it readily convertible into gold and silver, the only legal standard of value.

Resolved, That it is preposterous to suppose or pretend that "certificates," which on the one hand are affirmed to be unconstitutional and void, because they create a debt or liability on behalf of the people of this State—on the other are claimed to be legal, only because they create no liability for payment, can be that ample security which the constitution requires—that the issue of paper money upon such a basis as these certificates or scrip which acknowledge no obligation—no liability—on the contrary disavow both—is an outrage upon all the laws of wisdom and prudence—an outrage upon every sound principle, upon the property and industrial interests of the country, and above all upon the constitution of the people.

Resolved, That we regard the pledge of the public faith of a State as an obligation upon the honor and conscience of the whole people, never to be made except under the pressure of a vital necessity, and never to be trifled with or violated under any necessity whatever; that we point with pride to the position assumed by New York in 1842, of resisting the increase of debt, and devoting its energies to sustaining its credit; that the influence of that position was felt immediately in the restoration of public confidence and the elevation of public and private credit
