THE COMBINED VAPOR ENGINE.—THE SUBSCRIber, having obtained from the United States government a patent for the invention of the Combined Vapor Engine, is now prepared to sell the right to use said invention on reasonable terms. The invention of the subscriber is applied either to a single engine, with two cylinders and pistons, or, as is usual for small engines, two pairs of cylinders, with a cylinder and piston each. In either case, one of the pistons is acted upon by steam, and the other by the vapor of percholoride, or of any other easily vaporized liquid. The steam power is generated and applied as in the ordinary engine; but upon the escape of the steam from the boiler, instead of being exhausted in the atmosphere, it passes into an air-tight case, formed of superior, containing a number of small tubes charged with percholoride, or some easily vaporized liquid, occupying the space between, and coming in contact with the outlet surface of the tubes. The faculty of absorbing caloric, possessed by liquids of the class above mentioned, is so powerful, that the moment upon the steam coming in contact with the surface of the tubes charged therewith, a large portion of the caloric of the steam is absorbed by the liquid in the tubes, which becomes thereby vaporized, and the steam being thus deprived of its caloric, is immediately condensed and is then conveyed into the steam boiler. The vapor obtained by the action of the steam, or percholoride, or other liquid in the tubes, is conducted into the second cylinder, and after exerting its elastic force (which is greater than steam) upon the piston in the second cylinder, is condensed, and by means of a force pump returned into the vaporizer, which thus keeps regularly supplied, and is alternately vaporized and condensed. The cooling effected by this plan is in the small quantity of coals required for the steam, the smaller room occupied by it, and the avoidance of injurious effects in the boiler, the water being completely distilled by its deflectation, vaporization, and condensation. The portable engine, of any class of duty, occupies half the quantity of its tubes will last a considerable time, the alternate condensation and vaporization occasioning a very trifling loss in the tube, or quantity employed. A model and scale and diagram illustrative of this invention, can be seen, on application to the subscriber. For particulars as to terms of sale, &c., apply to the subscriber, at the Lackawanna & Pascoe, No. 52 Broad street, in the city of New York. PROSPER DU CHESNELEY.

The Forrest Divorce Case.

SUPERIOR COURT.

Before Chief Justice Oakley.

MAY 23.—On the case of Catharine N. Forrest vs. Edwin Forrest, a suit for divorce, being called.

Mr. O'Conor, counsel for the plaintiff, answered that he was ready.

Mr. Van Buren said that the plaintiff had moved for a struck jury in the case and that the motion was suspended till to-morrow, and that she had also moved for a commission to examine Mr. Forney in Philadelphia, which motion was also to be heard to morrow. He (Mr. Van B.) was gratified to find, that notwithstanding Mrs. Forrest had sworn that both the special jury and the testimony of Mr. Forney were indispensably necessary to ensure for her a fair trial, that the plaintiff's counsel avowed his readiness to go on. The defendant had also made application for a commission to examine a witness in New Orleans, which motion would also be heard to-morrow (Saturday). He, therefore, suggested that this cause be reserved until to-morrow.

Mr. O'Conor remarked that counsel had committed an error in stating that Mrs. Forrest had sworn to that effect; she may have sworn to the materiality of a witness, or a thousand witnesses, yet that would not prevent her being able to go on with five or less; and, although she had applied for a special jury, he was willing to go on with one from the present jury list. He (Mr. O'Conor) confessed that he was somewhat taken by surprise at finding that the cause was on the calendar for to-day; and though he had no witnesses in court, the opening statement would take some time, and the witnesses could, no doubt, be here at its conclusion.

The Chief Justice, under all the circumstances of the case, said he would reserve the case till Monday, as no jury trials were heard on Saturdays. Adjourned till Monday morning.

Court of General Sessions.

Before Judge Beebe and Aldermen Miller and Oakley.

MAY 23.—The Indictment against John Graham and De Witt C. Graham, for Assault and Battery.—The case of John Graham and De Witt C. Graham, indicted for an assault and battery committed on the person of Mr. James G. Bennett, in November last, was set down for trial on Thursday last; but as a case was on trial on that day which had been commenced several days before, it was found necessary to put off the Graham trial till to-day.

The District Attorney called the case this morning, and was about to go on with it, when the Court asked counsel if the trial would occupy more than one day. Counsel for the defence replied that it would. The Court then intimated that they would not take up the cause to-day, but would set it down for the first week of the June term, when they would hold afternoon sessions, in order to try it. The reason assigned by Judge Beebe for putting off the case, was that to-day was the last trial day of the term, and the Court was not willing to commence any business that was likely to continue beyond the expiration of the term.

When this disposition had been made of the matter, counsel for the accused arose and suggested to the Court that since it was now understood that this case would be tried in June, "all parties" should be admonished against making comments on the prospective proceedings.

Judge Beebe said the propriety of abstaining from comments would be apparent to all, and, therefore, it was not necessary for the Court to remark upon it. So the case went off.

Punished for Obtaining Property by False Pretences.—Two men, named Wm. F. Jarvis and Henry B. Rogers, pleaded guilty to obtaining a pistol, worth $32, from Charles L. Barnes, by false pretences. The prisoners were sent to the penitentiary for one year each.
