Dr. Kellinger, in all his efforts to Medicate, arranges his great remedies at once agreeable and curative, and especially adapting his prices so as to come within the reach of all who have any means, and giving his agents extensive room of margin to be very liberal to the poor. He also has furnished, and continues so to do, the clergy, the faculty, heads of colleges, and the various public institutions, gratuitously. This course has been to the Dr. like casting bread upon the waters. They have returned from every quarter with money, for his remedies are sold in large bottles from 1s. to 8s. each. Those who buy the large size get a third more in proportion for their money. Dr. K. most certainly has great cause to feel elated at his success. He continues to be complimented and patronized by the wealth and distinguished, from every quarter of the globe. His Magic Fluid reaches every clime and character of disease, no matter of how long standing. Its first friends are its best. It is the only patent medicine that ever received the patronage of the elite and the faculty generally. The only danger in making a trial is, that you cannot afterwards resist its agreeable and enticing qualities. It causes a most delightful feeling after its administration, strengthening the patient at every application.
