pensure, and, with your own consent, to appoint the 13th of March for the same. The 13th arrived, B. was not yet found, and I was for the third time forced to let my good name again suffer for the cause, and to announce another postponement till the 28th inst. The 23d arrived, and to my very great affliction you told me in an evening conference, that we would leave on the 4th or 5th of April at the latest. Thus was I compelled for the fourth time to submit to all surmisions of my good name, and even to the danger of personal insult. The 31st inst. now arrived, and in yesterday's conversation you declared to me—"God knows when we will leave here; we may be very glad if we get off on the 7th of May." These words discouraged me to such a degree, that it was impossible for me to make any reply to them. To-day I will present several facts to you, and declare my mind like a man of honor. Several officers, whom I will mention to you by name, have built their expectations on my word of honor as an officer, and are in a situation which I will to-day describe to you. A friend of mine counts upon my firmness of character, gives up his situation on the 15th of March, in order to keep himself ready for the cause, and is now without the means of support.

2. Julius Merklein gives warning for the first of April, and is since that time without means of support.

3. J. Simons gives up his situation, sells the greater part of his effects, and is now without the means of subsistence.

4. Julius Clandek, Beesel, Hollizki, Schroder, Zollikofer, Teondisek, Sabi, Rake, Weiderhofer, Gerhard, Dr. Meyer, &c.

All these officers are men of word and honor, who justly expected the same from me; and if I was not so, for the first time in my life, in this affair, it is certainly not my fault, for in such a matter as ours we ought to have been prepared for every event; and had I been from the beginning so well informed of all details, we would then certainly not have these difficulties to encounter. Out of 350 men, the greater part have given up their situations, sold and consumed their property, and are now without means, punished for their good intentions, exposed to an uncertain—albeit, short lived misery. Things have gone so far that several of the men have declared they would have me sued in court for removing them from their situations by means of rash and flattering propositions. I have not to anticipate this from the officers; but, at all events, a branding of my name for ever and ever. That I am not inclined to let this occur, you will yourself probably judge. The solution of the difficulty I leave to you; to find out the different ways by which neither I nor the cause can be endangered. One, and the best, as well as most agreeable to me, would be the most speedy departure. The second is the maintenance of every individual until our departure. These two ways are open to you, and no other two—either to ruin the cause and save my honor, or to protect the cause, to go away from here, and thereby lose my honor. Your determination will guide me as to what path I have to take, in no case will I leave my previous position out of view and without honor enter upon another. It appears to me very suspicious that Mr. D. held a conference in which an independent situation was offered to him. Either I am the one who gives military directions here, or you are he; but I allow no game to be played with my name, position, and rank. Had I to do with military concerns here, I would not have found it necessary to write to-day; for, however unpleasant the reading of these lines may be to you, the writing of them is to me no less so. Take these lines for what they are—for the frank language of a soldier, who never thinks otherwise than he speaks; and believe me that I curse the hour of my departure from New Orleans. I will be at this evening's conference. I am sorry not to have seen Mr. S., as I was four times at his house. I will be in my room this evening after eight o'clock, and will be glad to hear something.

Rakow continued:—Q.—Do you know to whom the initials P. S. and J. refer? A.—I am not certain; Schlessinger only gave me the initials; I do not know to what person the initial D refers. I ask permission to add that Schlessinger did not trust Schoening, fearing he might divulge the secret; he (Schlessinger) then drew up an oath, which some of them signed; Schlessinger, after drawing up the oath, called a meeting of the officers, at which I was present, and we signed the oath. [Paper produced.] This is the paper to which I refer; it is in Schlessinger's handwriting, with the signatures of the officers signed to it.

The District Attorney stated to the Court that this paper was found in the pocket-book of Mr. Schlessinger. [Exception taken to the admission.]

The interpreter deposed that he had compared the translation with the original, and that it is a true copy.

The District Attorney said this was also translated by Professor Anthon. He then read the following:—

NEW YORK, March 2, 1851.

In the interest of the holy cause of freedom, we, the hereinafter named sole members, make the following declaration, being in the full consciousness that every action, united with a mean, or, indeed, treacherous purpose, must ruin, delay or transform the whole of the cause—a cause that involves the freedom of a nation, cause to which we have joined ourselves with body and soul, without any selfish private interest; a holy cause, where a whole nation, in order to be freed from the dominion of tyrants, beckons with its brother hand, and stretches it out to thank us for it in advance with blessings; in such an interest for the cause we make the following declaration, which we, by our own signature, as our satisfaction with, and submission to, the following points, each for all, and all for each, accept, confirm and mutually bind—

First—Each one of us declares it to be his holiest duty as a man, to do everything that may be capable of contributing anything in general to the advancement of the cause; to fear no trouble in working for a cause in which we have every engaged.

Second—Without any secret thought of mean or selfish views, which among officers must be banished, to employ, with diligence, the greatest foresight to the securing of our plan, for the cause itself, to do everything that may be necessary for the advantage of the whole, to refrain from every rash, exciting remark or attention, and avoid it; in a word to employ everything that can be advantageous to the cause, and to avoid, may, on the other hand, to fight with all possible arms of prudence, what may be disadvantageous to it.

Third—Strictly to beware, in accordance with rules hereafter to be established, of producing an early whispering against the cause; in the case of editors, to bring about that all belief that our plan consists in anything more than the colonisation of sixty men, be taken from them—to instruct or hoax the crew in the necessity of keeping the matter secret, in order, from this side also, to avoid all useless talk, and, in a word, to withdraw the matter from public conjecture and criticism.

Fourth—The melancholy proof which the last European commotions have afforded us that the cause of freedom has fallen in almost all states through weakness and treachery induces us to resolve that,

Fifth—Each of us to each of us, and all of us to each of us—that is, one to all, and all to one—confirm a mean, and certainly promise, never, in any case—be it out of revenge, selfishness, private interest, or whatever name it may have—to betray or thwart the cause, even only in such a way as that any of us should give, either directly or indirectly—even though only through a tenth person—to any embassy, consulate, government, or whatever name it may have, or to any other persons dangerous to the cause, information of the fact that our colonization has another military purport. In any such case, we give all to one, and each to each, power, not only to declare dishonorable the said individual or individuals who, manifestly under the guidance of dishonorable views, have thwarted, or even betrayed, the cause; but the right is granted to each of us, by all of us, to make, without any further consideration, such an individual forever harmless—that is to say, to strike him from the number of the living; and this same execution against the individual is made each and every one's belief duty.

Sixth—After closely weighing and adopting the above, and by our autograph signature declaring ourselves satisfied with what has been said, its efficacy goes into operation from this day of the signing.

We vow, in the sight of God and the world, that we can die, but never betray a cause that aims at the freedom of a nation.

Afternoon conference at three o'clock P. M.

LOUIS SCHLESSINGER,
Major of the expedition and Director of Affairs.
H. SCHROEDER,
Lieutenant of Artillery.
H. RAKOW.
LEONARD SABA SANISKY.
SHOENING.
F. SIMON.

Witness continued—(looks at the original)—I saw Louis Schlessinger sign this; this is in Schlessinger's hand writing; H. G. Rakow is my name.

Mr. Cutting—Do you spell Annabell with an H?

The District Attorney—It is the German way of spelling Hannibal.

Mr. Van Buren—Its the German way of acting "Hanibel." (Laughter.)

Witness deposed that he saw the other parties affix their names to the paper, and then continued—The condition when we signed this oath was that it should only remain in force until we were on board ship, and Schlessinger promised us to throw it in the sea as soon as we would get on the high seas; and also that it should become valueless as soon as it came into the hands of another person except ours who signed it.

The District Attorney asked the witness to explain the last answer.

Mr. Cutting said the witness should say what Schlessinger said, and not give any explanation of his own.

Witness—Schlessinger said he would keep the paper as safe as possible; nevertheless, should it come into the hands of others, who were not interested in it, then we were not any longer bound by it—that is to say, we were not obliged to kill each other (laughter); I now go back to the time Schlessinger dictated the paper (marked 44); he said O'Sullivan will get this letter this evening; a few days afterwards he published a card or advertisement in the New York Democrat, a daily German paper, in which it was stated that he was obliged to leave suddenly, but did not state where he was going to, and that Beezey and myself should fill his place; I believe it was in the Democrat of the 10th of April.

Mr. Cutting asked if the newspaper would be produced?

The District Attorney said he had sent to the office of the paper, and the answer he got was that they could not find the file.

The Court said if it could not be produced, the testimony on that point should be stricken out.

[Letter which had been marked 30 produced.] Witness continued—It is possible I may have seen the envelope in which this was enclosed, in Major Schlessinger's possession at Pittsfield. Q.—Did you see any letter in the possession of Schlessinger addressed to him as Major Lewis? A.—I saw a letter of introduction which Mr. Schlessinger had from Mr. O'Sullivan to the family of Hubbard, in which he was introduced as "Major Lewis." [This latter testimony was objected to, and withdrawn.] After Schlessinger went to Pittsfield, I followed him in a few days; he introduced me there as being a friend of Mr. O'Sullivan; Schlessinger told me to call him always Major Lewis, as he was introduced by that name; I agreed to do so; from Pittsfield both of us wrote a letter to Beezey, who represented us here, which letter is in court. [Letter produced.] This is the letter; the body of it is in Schlessinger's handwriting; the words "dear friend" are in Schlessinger's handwriting; after this, I myself wrote to Beezey five times, with my signature, and on the last page follows a letter in the Hungarian language, written by Schlessinger, addressed to friend Beezey, and signed friend Louis.

Q.—What did Schlessinger go to Pittsfield for? A.—Because the soldiers became so impatient and noisy that he preferred to be out of the way for some time; as far as I know, he sent the letter to Beezey.

The District Attorney then read the following letter, parts of which created great laughter. The Hungarian portion of it was not yet translated; when it was, he would read it:—

Dear Friend—I have just heard that you had written to me, and I lament exceedingly that I have not yet received the letter. I am glad to hear from Mr. Rakow that the greatest difficulties in our business matters are removed. I declare to Mr. Sabi that as he has expressed himself to that purpose, he no longer belongs to the cause. I break off all personal connection with him, and hereby charge you, as my representative, to put an end to every visit from Mr. Sabi, having reference to the cause, with this language:—"I have nothing more to do with you." Every claim on the cause vanishes on the instant when a person declares himself to be excluded therefrom, or is excluded by others. Both cases are to be applied to Mr. Sabi. If Mr. Sabi have personal demands on me—with which however, I am unacquainted—I will settle them at a personal meeting with him. This for Mr. Sabi. I did not think you so credulous, in spite of all the assurances of De Annas, that you should believe him, that he is to be salaried with any sum. As a proof of this, express in your next letter the wish that De Annas shall not belong at all to the cause; it will then cost me but one word—that he should not be allowed, even with the sacrifice of a great fortune, to participate in the cause. To procure yourself this proof depends solely and alone on your expressed wish. As to what regards Schoening, (?) who pretends to have a claim for $8⅝, he may call to mind that nothing whatever can be said about a claim. I have remained him to make a payment of $4½ balance, the moment before the embarkation, which promise I will keep at the proper time. To Simon—I am sorry that he is in that situation. In any case, I can do no more than provide for maintenance. He will receive $4 weekly in cash, for his washing, and I will settle the balance at $8 per week before the embarkation. To Wiederhoit—if he is not careful with regard to the contents of my lines, he can only ascribe it to himself if I cannot keep my promises towards him. To Hope, at Hastings's, City Hall place, you will deliver the enclosed lines. Rakow remains here until I receive a letter thence, as I hope for something decisive, which I am expecting hourly. You may tell Robbe I shall be glad to talk soon to him personally about those things; in any case I will be pleased to see him as a participator with us. My respects to Schroder, to Clandeck, I wish sound eggs, to Dr. Klamm, many patriots; to Helitsky, a pleasant journey. Beg Beaumas, in my name, to be so kind as to excuse me at the house—an unexpected intelligence called me away from the city. On my return, I will discharge my debt, and make an apology in due form. My respects to Syabo, without telling him whence. Should the Hungarians and Poles arrive from Liverpool, engage the Hungarians—the Poles I must decline. Look over the past office advertisements, to see whether any letters are there for me. If there are any, send them to me here in an envelope. My next letters to you, as well as all in future, are addressed "E. Bersey, Broadway Post Office, New York." This post office is very near, viz., two doors from Canal street. Should any article appear in the paper, cut it out and send it to me. I had expected from you, as you have assumed the office of defender of my name, that you would first have challenged Sabi in my name, and then turned him out of doors. Should a second opportunity present itself, and he seek for an excuse, and say he wishes to fight immediately, but not to wait, then be determined, and go with him to Albany; advise me of it, and I will be there. In such a case do not forget to borrow from Kobbe, or somebody else, a pair of pistols. I have nothing particular to communicate to you except to obtain as many musicians and artillerists as possible. As soon as I have arranged my affairs, I will telegraph to you in relation to my arrival, in order that we may be able to sail in two days at the utmost after my arrival. Of the financial situation Rakow will give you a verbal account. At all events, it is bread and butter, meat without sauce, and eating without drinking. For the cause itself, no expenses, under any name, are to be made, even if they were only a cent (to be made). With regard to segars, as you yourself do not smoke, I enclose a note from Syabo, whom you are not to inform of my whereabouts, to give you a box of segars of the worst kind that he has, at $1 50 per 250, for your visiters. You will learn from Rakow verbally, the particulars of my existence, prospects and expectations for others. My respects to you, in the hope of seeing you very soon, either here or there. Your friend, L. SCHLESINGER.

Friend Beezey.—I beg you, as a friend, to tell Schoening that I received no money for Sabi, and have not myself enough to pay him. He, therefore, has to procure money in other ways. As for us, money is also very scarce; but counsel comes with time. Respects to all. It is d—d threesome here. Your friend, HY. RAKOW.

The Court announced that, as they would not alter their time of sitting, nor commence evening sessions until Monday, the jury could now take a recess for four minutes.

On resuming,

Witness continued—After Schlessinger writing the last letter to Beezey, and after having received the $10, which I mentioned before, he gave me the advice to go back to New York, as he (Schlessinger) was too short of money; I then went back to New York; can't tell the date; I went to Pittsfield the time of the advertisement in the German paper, and remained there about five days; about ten days after my arrival in New York, and being in Broadway, at No. 290, the landlord came up with a letter addressed to Mr. Schlessinger, which I recognized to be in the handwriting of Mr. O'Sullivan; as Schlessinger had given me orders in Pittsfield to open all letters directed to him which might have any reference to the cause, I opened the letter as soon as I received it, and I read it. Q.—What became of that letter? A.—Schlessinger came back that very day from Pittsfield; I, in the meantime, went about to find Mr. O'Sullivan, but did not succeed; I saw Mr. Schlessinger, and when coming home I handed him the letter and told him Mr. O'Sullivan wanted to see him; I do not know what became of the letter; Schlessinger said, "Yes, I know Mr. O'Sullivan wants to see me, for I got a telegraph despatch from him;" Schlessenger went round with me in the evening to the Shakspeare Hotel, in order to show himself to the men and to appease them; he told me they had had a conference that evening and also that he had beaten his enemies (justified himself) before Mr. Sanchez; that everything was ready—the steamer prepared, the name of which he said was the Cleopatra; I am not certain whether he stated to me this letter fact that very evening or one or two days later; some days then elapsed, which time we spent in arranging the different classes of soldiers, selecting artillery, cavalry, infantry, musicians, and forming lists of the companies; we divided the city of New York into districts, setting down the number of men living in each district which had enlisted with us, in order to be able to collect them as soon as necessary. Q.—Were the names of the men written down in books? A.—Yes, the names of the men were written down in books; the lists were divided—made on pieces of paper—in order to give them to such persons as had to collect the men. [Books produced and marked 47, 48, 49, 50.] These are the books to which I refer; they are in the handwriting of Mr. Schlessinger, partly and partly in the handwriting of those who enlisted with us; these books were in my room for some time; I afterwards intended to give them to Mr. O'Sullivan, but he told me to give them to Cladeck. I did give them to Cladeck; I was boarding at the Pacific Hotel; I had three or four trunks with me, containing the baggage of the officers, and in Schlessinger's baggage those books were contained, in order to take them to South Amboy, the officers having nothing in their hands, to avoid suspicion; and this was to be considered as my passengers baggage; the day before we started, Schlessinger had all his things put in my trunks, and I believe sent them to the Pacific Hotel; these books were packed in my trunks; Schlessinger had a small box, wherein some papers and books were, and a map, which the District Attorney possesses; but these books, and some papers and lists, which I burned since, were placed in the bottom of the trunk.

Q.—Were these books in your trunk with Schlessinger's baggage? A.—It was a very large trunk in which the different packages of the officers were thrown; among these was the box of Schlessinger, which I mentioned before; the other papers he threw loose into the trunk. The same question was put, and the District Attorney asked for a direct answer. A.—Certainly. Q.—How did they get out of your and Cladeck's possession? A.—Rakiclewicz, the marshal's officer, took them in Rahway, N. J., on the 8th and 9th of May. Q.—How came you at Rahway? A.—I went to New Jersey, being afraid of being arrested in New York; Cladeck was with me; we put up at a farm house about two or three miles from Rahway; Rakiclewicz came to Rahway; saw me and Cladeck there; asked us whether we were in possession of those books; we said yes; he wanted us to give them up, which we did, and he then said, "Gentlemen, you are arrested;" I presented a pistol; Rakiclewicz seized me by the coat, and I then pulled out a pistol and said I would "burn" his brains out; Rakiclewicz told me not to be afraid; that we should go with him to New York; no harm would be done to us; in the meantime taking out of his pocket a revolver; (laughter) we agreed among each other to go; Cladeck gave Rakiclewicz the books; and we all went on to New York.

The District Attorney then put the books in evidence, under the objection of counsel for defence.

The interpreter read from the book marked No. 49, on the first page, "February, 1851, summary statement." It contained a list of names numbered, along with a designation, some artillery, drummers, infantry, officers, &c., &c. It had also written in it, "European House, Greenwich street." There were 297 names enrolled.

Mr. Cutting said that the book did not say enrolled.

The next book, marked No. 50, has on the first page a list of those enlisted in Philadelphia, with reference to the letters there. On the second page commences No. 1. Only six names are in it; but it is numbered to 202. Book 48 contains on the title page, "Summary list in alphabetical order, of the members of colonization under N. Louis Schlessinger, New York, March, 1851." It goes on with names and designation of officers, lancer corps, riflemen, infantry, and one saddler of cavalry.

Rakow continued—The names in the book of the book, No. 47, are in the handwriting of Schlessinger.

The District Attorney said it contained, on the first page, nineteen names of officers, the first of which was Captain Paul Cliwoski.

The interpreter continued—It has also the name of "Nissy, officer of the engineers at Naples, and commander of a company in Rome;" Poles, 67; Germans, 62; Italians, 67; Sclavs 13; five trumpeters. The book also contains a list of 21 men under Wiederhold; a list under the first lieutenant; Captain Savi is ordered to hand the annexed list to the persons named. [Slips of paper produced.]

Rakow continued—These lists are the lists referred to in the book; they were all in Schlessinger's handwriting, except the ones written by the men themselves; I added the numbers, but the writing is by Schlessinger.

The District Attorney remarked that these were the papers identified by Mr. Evarts as having been taken out of Schlessinger's valise.

The Judge said they were already marked from 11 to 15.

The District Attorney then read from those papers, which, he said, were similarly marked and designated to those he had just read from the books. One of them contained names of three doctors and one drummer.

Rakow continued—We made sheets containing one hundred names of artillery, cavalry and infantry; we got these names from the books; I dictated and Schlessinger wrote them down. Q.—For what purpose were these names distributed from the books to these lists? A.—In order to see how many we were; then we made another copy, written in such a way as to leave a line between each name, for the purpose of cutting them out and dividing them into districts, and to hand these divisions to the men who were to collect them. [Book 47 shown witness.] There is a piece of a leaf torn out of this; I tore it out; the word "New" stands here; I tore out the word "Orleans;" there was a preceding leaf in this book; I tore it out; on that leaf was a story or a narration of the Texas colonization, pointing in the meantime to a military character, which I tore out before giving it to Rakiclewicz; on the back of this paper my own name and Cladeck's were and I tore them out; I believe I tore it in Rakiclewicz's in the presence of Rakiclewicz, and I said, "we have been cheated in this affair, and others might be cheated too."

Q.—Narrate as nearly as you can what was on the leaf which you tore out? A.—What I recited before about the Texas colonization was on that leaf; when Schlessinger read it to me, he asked me if it wasn't got up in good style; it was written on the understanding between the General, Schlessinger, and Mr. O'Sullivan to conceal the real object of this book, or they undertook to hint only to a military expedition, and speaking more plainly about Texas colonization.

Adjourned to half past ten o'clock Saturday morning.

Theatrical and Musical.

Bowery Theatre.—A very rich treat is offered this evening, for the amusement of the dramatic public, comprising three highly popular dramas. The first on the list is "The Lady of the Lake," in which Messrs. Eddy, Taylor, Cony, Mrs. Grattan, and Mrs. Jordan will sustain the leading characters. The next feature will be the drama of "Robinson Crusoe," in which Cony and Taylor will appear, and the whole will terminate with the drama of "Oliver Twist," with Messrs. Stevens, Goodall, Griffiths, Lofingwell, Mrs. Grattan, and Mrs. Mason in the cast. Hamblin's endeavors continue to be well appreciated by the public.

Broadway Theatre.—Mr. Forrest, the American tragedian, will personate his great original character of Metamora, this evening, in the Indian tragedy of "[illegible]," that name. He will be supported by Messrs. Con[illegible]y, Barry, Fenno, Whiting, Mac Ponist, and Miss Crocker. Metamora being one of Mr. Forrest's best personations, an immense assemblage may be expected to-night. The popular farce styled "Dr. Dilworth," in which Mr. Davidge, Mac Vernon, and Miss Crocker will sustain the principal characters, will be the concluding feature. Mr. Forrest will appear again on Monday.

Niblo's Garden.—There will be no performance to-night at this establishment, but on Monday evening Mme. Anna Thillon will appear again as La Catarina, in the very popular opera of the "Crown Diamonds," in which she was received with such great delight and enthusiasm by very crowded audiences this week. Mr. Hudson, the favorite Irish comedian and vocalist, will also appear as Morgan Rattler in the laughable Irish farce entitled "How to Pay the Rent."

Burton's Theatre.—A bill of great variety has been provided at this theatre for to-night, consisting of Morton's admirable prelude styled the "Blue Devils," the popular comedy of "Paul Pry," and the laughable farce entitled the "J. J.'s." Nearly all the leading members of Burton's powerful company will appear in these pieces. It is unnecessary for us to say that there will be a full house, for it matters not what Burton announces, the theatre is sure to be filled to its utmost capacity.

National Theatre.—The national drama, entitled "Harry Burnham," will commence the entertainments at this establishment to-night. This will be succeeded by the Irish historical drama called "Brian Boroihme," and the favorite farce of "My Friend Jack" will be the concluding feature. Messrs. W. G. Jones, James Anderson, N. B. Clark, Armond, Taylor, Fox, Mrs. W. G. Jones, and Mrs. H. F. Nichols will appear in the above named pieces, forming as highly attractive an amusement as can be desired. The new drama, entitled the "Match Woman of Boston," will be represented on Monday evening next.

Barnum's Museum.—Professor McCormick, the Anti-podean Pedestrian, is announced to appear again to-day at this favorite place of amusement. The Oriental fairy spectacle of "Cherry and Fair Star," which is nightly witnessed by very crowded audiences with much delight, will be repeated this evening with the same fine cast. The laughable farces of the "Duel in the Dark," and the "Double Bedded Room," will be given in the afternoon.

Bowery Circus.—The benefit to the released Cuban prisoners, in order to enable them to return to their respective homes, will take place this evening at the Circus. The performance will comprise several of the best features of the arena, by the entire troupe of Sands and company. There will be a performance in the afternoon for the accommodation of families.

Christy's Minstrels.—This band of Ethiopian delineators have provided an exceedingly attractive programme for this evening, being for the annual benefit of N. Gould. No doubt his friends and the public will give him what he richly deserves, a bumper.

Wood's Minstrels.—This band of Negro Minstrels give an afternoon and evening entertainment to day. The programme selected is as attractive as usual, consisting chiefly of songs, dancing, burlesques, witty sayings, and instrumental pieces.

Temple of the Graces.—This place of amusement is becoming a very popular resort.

Lola Montez concludes her engagement at the Howard Athenæum to-night, on which occasion she appears in the beautiful ballet in which she was to have danced last evening. Our citizens have very generally been brought to acknowledge that the beautiful and witty Countess of Lansfeldt is a splendid dancer, as well as an independent and accomplished lady. Her success has been greater here than in any city, except, perhaps, Baltimore. She is supported by a very effective ballet corps, picked from several theatres in the different cities, and no pains or expense have been spared by Mr. Marshall to render the performances acceptable to the public. Lola is to leave to-morrow morning for Providence.—Boston Post, March 19.
