drink as usual. How absurd it is to make any law about drinking in Boston. There has been a law under the city government imposing a fine of $20 for selling without license. Licenses were not granted, but yet the public houses abounded. And so much did they sell that one of these—Brigham's—was fined in one year $700, and he was quite willing to pay the fines, for he could afford it. His plan was to go every month to the District Attorney, and pay up what was on the books against him. He never resisted any fine, and he has been known to offer to pay the fines in advance. Among the houses which applied for and obtained licenses, is the Adams House, hitherto a temperance house; and it seems strange enough that it should have done so now, when Governor Boutwell is staying there; and, it is said, selected it because it was a temperance house, as Mr. Walker, Secretary of State, has done, and Governor Briggs formerly. There is a rumor that Kossuth is about to take the pledge, notwithstanding the advantage he held out at Northampton, to the "wine bibbers, sinners, and publicans," of getting one hundred and twenty millions of gallons of wine annually from Hungary, at fifty cents per bottle, besides abundance of excellent brandy, if only enough of material aid was supplied to make his poor country independent and free.

Kossuth at Charlestown,

VISIT TO BUNKER HILL, ETC.

CHARLESTOWN, MASS., May 3, 1852.

Kossuth, accompanied by the Legislative Committee visited Charlestown to-day. He was received by Mayor Frothingham, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, who welcomed him in an appropriate and eloquent speech.

A military and civic procession then escorted Kossuth to the summit of Bunker Hill, where, at the base of the monument, he spoke for about half an hour. Eight or ten thousand people were assembled, and considerable enthusiasm was manifested.

At the close of his address, Kossuth ascended to the top of the monument, and expressed great delight at the extended view therefrom.

Kossuth and suite then returned to their quarters at the Revere House, Boston.

More of the Lola Montes Row.

The following is the reply of Chevalier Manetta to Count Kazinsky on the Lola Montes' fray:—

J. G. BENNETT, Esq.

Dear Sir.

I have read in the Herald of this morning, the charming letter of Count Cazinsky, who pretends himself challenged by me, the most peaceable of men.

As I interfered in this affair only to oblige my friend Mr. Carissimi who asked me to call on Mr. Cazinsky in order to prevent what had happened from being made public—and, therefore, as I have nothing to do with all this, I wish it to be known, that I went at the Howard Hotel two hours after the scene occurred in the room of the dethroned Queen of Bavaria, and that I was going to speak to Mr. Cazinsky, who, not withstanding his prussian royal indignation, had condescended to hear me when the fighting between Messrs. Pick and Carissimi began, so that I could not accomplish my peaceful purpose. Consequently I postponed my mission and wrote a few lines to the Count, which have been badly translated, or misunderstood, whether from ignorance or malice I do not know.

Here is a genuine translation of my note:

"To Count Cazinsky Howard Hotel.

"I pray you to allow me half an hour of conversation, "as I have to talk with you about an affair which con-"cerns you personally.

"As I called twice at the Howard Hotel without being "able to find You, you will have the kindness of writing "to me a few lines in answer, stating the hour and the "place, and to leave them in the office of the Hotel, "where I will call this evening."

Yours

"F. MANETTA."

Now, I shall ask Mr. Cazinsky to be kind enough as to tell me in what language the request of ½ an hour of conversation means "to give a challenge" and for what reason I should give him one. I have nothing against him, and either him or I, have the slightest reason for fighting a duel. As for myself I positively have none, and I assure you that by all means I have enough of bon gueit not to risk the chance of being caged up in Sing Sing for this Country-less Countesse. As for Mr le Comte, who makes himself the champion not of down trodden Poland (Roland has better hopes) but of a Pseudo-Terpsycore, I cannot help saying that he gives me the idea of a fussy little dog who barkes in order that he might be looked at.

I pray you to publish this letter, not that I care to give any explanation of the meaning of my note to this Polish Theseus, but to make manifest that this pretended challenge is a lie.

As for what your paper says about Jesuits, I think it is not worth any consideration.

Believe me, dear sir.

Yours

F. MANETTA.

P. S. It affords me pleasure, to let you know that a talented maestro has requested me to write a Comic Operetta on this subject to be set to music.

NEW YORK May 3, 1852.

So, after all, we are to have no indictment—no indictment—no conviction—no sentence to Sing Sing. The whole fearful tragedy of Lola Montes at the Howard House is to end in a comic Opera, set to music. This peaceable conclusion comes of letting the gas evaporate through the useful newspapers. So newspapers are very useful. Louis Napoleon was wrong to suppress them.

MISS CUSHMAN'S APPEARANCE AT THE BROADWAY.—Shakspeare's humorous and exquisitely quaint pastoral comedy of "As you like it," was produced last night at the Broadway Theatre. Miss Cushman sustaining the character of Rosalind. Her appearance was hailed with hearty applause, which was repeated several times during the performance. Her delineation of Rosalind, in her real and fictitious character, seemed to be in true accordance with the conception of the poet. She was, however, more successful in her feigned masculine character of Ganymede, consoling and joking, and philosophizing, with the lovesick Orlando, than when she disclosed herself in her own proper sphere and habiliments, as his inamorata. Rosalind is not, however, one of those characters entirely suited to Miss Cushman's talents, or in which she can shine as a great actress. Her forte rather lies in depicting the more violent passions of her sex, as exhibited in Lady Macbeth and Meg Merrilies, and in those roles she is perhaps unsurpassed on the stage. She was well supported by Miss Horn, as Celia, and Conway, as Orlando; but Davidge's impersonation of Touchstone the Jester was one of the most finished pieces of acting, and, probably, of all the characters, was the best embodiment of Shakspeare's conception. The piece itself, like many others of the same great poet, is better adapted for private reading than public representation. Its wit is of that subtle kind which cannot be well rendered or appreciated on the stage; and it also contains some inconsistencies and absurd scenes, such as the wrestling scene, which might be omitted wi hout the slightest injury to the plot. It occurs to us also that the pronunciation of the heroine's name, as if it were spelled Roz-lin, cannot be the correct one. It was clearly intended to be pronounced (as it probably was) Rosa-linde, the last syllable rhyming to mind, kind, lined. At the conclusion of the piece, Miss Cushman was called before the curtain, and was greeted with well-merited applause.

MURDER OF A WIFE BY HER HUSBAND—THE ARREST OF THE HUSBAND—VERDICT OF THE CORONER'S JURY.

A man named Joseph Sleeth, a blacksmith by trade, in the employ of William Waters, at the Dry Dock, foot of Tenth street, was arrested, about ten o'clock on Monday morning, by officers Barton, Whaling and Thorn, of the Eleventh ward, charged with the murder of his wife by violence, while under the influence of liquor. The murderous assault took place in the rear of No. 417 East Tenth street, where the accused and his family had moved on the first of May. The unfortunate woman was found dead in her bed early on Monday morning, with marks of violence on her person, and bloody froth flowing profusely from her mouth and nose. Coroner Ives was called to hold an inquest on the body, and, during the afternoon, held the inquest. The following is the TESTIMONY.

Mrs. Rosanna Wornworth, occupying apartments on the same floor with the deceased, being sworn, said, that on Sunday she heard loud talk in the room of the deceased, and supposed that she was quarrelling with some person; yesterday morning she, with a little girl who had been sent to the deceased on an errand, went to her room, where she saw Mrs. Sleeth lying on the floor, with blood and froth issuing from her mouth and nose, and her two little children, one four years, and the other one year old, crying beside her; the husband and father, at this time, was at the shop of Mr. Waters, and a message was despatched to him, by the witness, that his wife was dead. He left his work and came to the house, where, after remaining a few minutes, he turned away and went again to the shop, where he was soon after arrested. Elizabeth McAndrew, a sister of the deceased, residing at No. 316 Delancy street, testified that deceased and Sleeth had not lived happily together for two years past; that during that time he had frequently beaten his wife when intoxicated, in which state he was in the habit of getting several times a week; the deceased had frequently been beaten in presence of the witness, and on one occasion she had told her that she was fearful that her husband would take her life while he was in a fit of intoxication. Drs. Lidell, B. S. Budd, and Moran made a post mortem examination of the body, and found bruises on the right shoulder and left arm, below the elbow. The lungs were congested, and the passages contained an abundant quantity of bloody, frothy fluid. The liver was much enlarged and softened. A large quantity of coagulated blood and fluid was found in the right cerebrum. Dr. Lidell gave it as his opinion that the deceased came to her death by compression of the brain by extravasation of blood. In answer to a question put by one of the jury, the Dr. stated that such result might have been produced by violence. The case was then given to the jury, after a brief charge from the Coroner, and the following verdict was rendered by them: "We believe that the deceased came to her death by violence, and that the violence was inflicted by her husband." On the rendition of the verdict, the prisoner was committed by the Coroner to await the action of the Grand Jury. The deceased was a native of Nova Scotia, 21 years of age.

DIFFICULTY AMONGST THE COMMISSIONERS OF EMIGRATION.—A few days ago, six Commissioners of Emigration, out of the ten, appointed Mr. James L. Morris to an office denominated by them as "Vice President," at a salary of four thousand dollars a year, but what his duties are to be for that amount of pay remains as yet a mystery. Perhaps it is all correct and proper that such an office should exist, notwithstanding a difference of opinion has arisen between the Commissioners, the four opposing the creation of such an office, intend to enter their protest against it at their meeting on Wednesday. Some high times are expected growing out of this appointment.

Police Intelligence.

A Bold Street Robbery.—Yesterday morning, about eight o'clock, as Mr. Henry Gaines, a boarder at the "Rainbow," in Beekman street, was passing along Nassau street, a man pretended to stumble against him, and, at the same time, snatched from the pocket of Mr. Gaines a gold watch, valued at $45, with which he made off at full speed, aided by an accomplice. Mr. Gaines called out "stop thief," and pursued them, keeping up the alarm. Officer Walsh, of the Second ward, joined in the pursuit, and soon overtook and captured the two rogues. They were escorted before Justice Osborn, when they gave the names of John Craft and Luke Newsome. Craft is the rouge who stole the watch. They are both Englishmen, and have been in this country but a short time. The magistrate committed both to prison for trial.

Arrest of a Shoplifter.—A young man, known to the police by the name of John Boyce, aided by two accomplices, entered the store of Davis & Jones, No. 116 William street, under the pretence of making a purchase. Boyce was soon detected in the act of secreting under his coat a lot of silk handkerchiefs, valued at $40. The rogue was detained; but the accomplices made their escape. Officer Cavanagh, of the Second ward, was sent for, who took the accused into custody, and conveyed him before Justice Osborn, who committed him to prison for trial.

A BLOODY FIGHT IN KENTUCKY.—On the 23d ult., at Danville, Ky., two brothers, named Shelby, and F. Cowan, had a bloody rencontre about a young lady, sister of the Shelby's. Cowan was charged with sending her an anonymous letter. Meeting in the streets, pistols were drawn, and Shelby fired first. Cowan had three single barrelled pistols. Shelby fired all his barrels, one taking effect in the fleshy part of Cowan's thigh. The third fire from Cowan took effect on Shelby, the ball passing in on one side of his neck, and out on the other, lodging in his shirt. Shelby staggered in a store where his brother Alfred was, and fell. The latter then seized a bowie-knife, advanced on Cowan, and threw it at him without effect. Cowan then pursued Alfred with a bowie-knife in hand, when several persons interfered, and no further harm was done.—Cincinnati Inquirer.
