himself or any member of his company had ever seen this piece performed, and that therefore everything that was done had the merit of being original. He retired amid loud plaudits.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" is announced for this evening

Personal Intelligence

Mr. G. B Cooper, bearer of despatches to Constantinople; Mr. O. W. Bennet, bearer of despatches to London, and Prince Herman Bergman, bearer of despatches to the Court of St. James, leave for Liverpool to day in the steamship Atlantic

F. Heard and Lady, Boston; D. B Walker and lady, Charleston, S. C.; Hon. C Warren, Washington; Geo. Sanderson, Hertford, N. C., were among the arrivals yesterday at the Astor House

Among the present American and English visitors at Florence, says the correspondent of the Newark Advertiser, may be mentioned the Hon. Charles Fenton Mercer of Virginia; who at the age of 70, has just acquired the Italian language, thus surpassing Cato, who boasted that he learned Greek at 60; Hon. Willis Hall, of N. Y., who passes the winter here with his family; Mr. Barrenger, late Minister to Spain; Major Philip Kearney, late of the U. S. Army, who lost an arm in Mexico; Lord Normanby, the present Duke of Wellington, &c The Duke is no longer young; though not yet quite 50 he looks 60, and is the very image of his father in face, figure and voice. The resemblance is peculiarly striking; and if he does not inherit the rare intellectual qualities that ennobled the name he bears, he will transmit it unimpaired. As it seems to be the fashion in England to make a disparaging comparison, it is only just to say that he possesses a full share of English good sense and cultivation, with more than ordinary simplicity of manners. The large family estates, which yield of some $120,000 will descend through his younger brother's family, as the Duchess has no children.

The Hon. John S Keyes and family, of Concord, Mass., are in town.

P. J. Avery, Saratoga Springs; H. H Iden, New York; T. H. Hoag, Toledo, Ohio; D. A. Nickles, Detroit; W. A. Bangs, Boston; Jas H. Sherrell, Sandusky; John Acosta, Philadelphia; Daniel Lawrence, Bedford, Mass., were among the arrivals at the Prescott House yesterday.

Chas. Hamilton, Rochester; W Dwight, Philadelphia; Geo. Easton, R. H Hooper, G B Pearson, Maryland; John Van Lew, Kirkland; M. Scott, Scotland; H H Whitney, Montreal, Canada; S. G. Perkins, Boston, arrived yesterday at the St. Nicholas.

G. A. Henriot, Charleston; G. M. Robinson, Louisville, Ky.; Thomas B. Brown, Alabama; D. Young, Boston; Mr. Lynch and lady, Philadelphia; C C Alger, Hudson; Col. G. M. Bird, New Jersey, arrived yesterday at the Astor House.

To the Knickerbockers of New York.

As one of your fellow "old Yorkers," the "road cons of our early population," I ask your attention to the following letter, sent to Mr. Greeley to correct some wrong impressions he entertained and expressed in the Tribune respecting our time honored cemetery of Old Trinity. Possibly I have spoken too plainly to the "stranger within our gates," to entitle me to expect him to insert my communication though I have done it in charity and good feeling, and with disinterestedly having "nothing extenuated, nor set down aught in malice." I supposed that the Tribune was the place to be heard from in support of the people, and that those who were so familiar with "New York cries" would not be indifferent to the cries of New Yorkers; but it appears I was mistaken. The Tribune finds it "easier to teach twenty what they need to be done, than to be one of the twenty to follow the own teaching." It preaches better than it practices, and dislikes to correct its errors as much as mere mortals or ordinary sinners—like Falstaff, it "hates this paying back; 'tis double trouble." Having bungled into an injustice, it would have been a graceful mode of retreat to have published my letter. (not an illnatured, though a plain spoken one,) but since that condescension is not to be expected in a man, I am fain to ask another paper to insert my rejoinder, at least the substance of it, having merely retained a skeleton copy. I should have let the matter drop, so far as the Tribune is concerned, had not that "reformer" again opened its columns to the enemies of Trinity church whilst practically closed to her friends; and, therefore, I "will not undergo this sneap without tie lyf." In late paper he insects a long tirade against me, (which is are hash (if not a verbatim copy) of an old article published some six or seven years ago and not improved by age. It is confined to three points:—Trinity allowed Lee Roy street to be opened through the Clarkson street burying ground; Trinity dug up her churchyard to build her new cathedral; Trinity does not care for dead patriots, because she used to pray for the King. A word will answer all these charges. I did not oppose Lee Roy street going through her property, in obedience to the public wants, because she had never buried in that part of her grounds. She is an old institution, and prayed for Queen Anne, and continued to do so for King George, down to the Revolution, as did George Washington and John Jay, her cherished members and deserving sons. She has been an American church ever since, and has been foremost to the cause of freedom by protecting the remains of its defenders, whilst her John Bull calumniators were herding with the King's beef-eaters on the other side of the Atlantic. The other point touched upon by the Tribune's correspondent is met in the subjoined letter, which that paper declines to publish. Your friend and fellow-citizen, A BROO'KLYN KNICKERBOCKER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE.

In a note to a communication which you were kind enough to insert for me in your paper of Thursday, the 26th January, you have thought proper to indulge in a sarcasm at my remark, that "Trinity churchyard was the poor man's only resting place" in this city, and to indulge in a pleasantry which would be "very well timed," if it were not "marvellously out of tune." The truth is, Mr Editor, you are too much of a "Newcomer" to be well posted up in old Manhattan matters; and your want of knowledge turns the jest (if it be one) against yourself which you hope to raise against your correspondent. I will not say with the great poet, "not to know" us "argues yourself unknown," because that would give you an opportunity to say, in another note, that one of our church had gone to the "devil" for an illustration; and, likewise, because the quotation would not be entirely pertinent. You are known to be "old Yorkers," because we noted your advent; you came with the swallows, to be in time for our "hot corn" and other edibles, and we gave you a hearty welcome; whilst our antecedents you have not been long enough amongst us to comprehend. Had you lived in the days of the Coatsees and Coutants, and Collisters—those sextons of the past generation and their predecessors of an earlier day you would have paused a while before you committed yourself so far as to pronounce your correspondent's assertion "a joke." Every body ought to know that Mr. Collister alone buried more poor people in Trinity yard than the Tribune's whole edition of daily papers. What do you think of that, brother? The work of one sexton in Trinity churchyard! The price of graves in this "poor man's last resting place," was three shillings currency, or sixty two and a half cents for an adult, and one and a dollar, our money, or eighteen and three-quarter cents, for a child under twelve years of age If Trinity did not undersell all other cemeteries in graves, she underbought all the dead poor of New York—but not to make streets of their ashes. The fact is, Mr. Editor, for some reason or other you have got warped against that great charity, Trinity church; yet probably never took the pains to ascertain what good she has done, or is doing for the very classes you profess to advocate; you possibly have never attended service within her sanctuary, know nothing of her spiritual or temporal affairs; her creed and worship, or her receipts and disbursements. You have heard the slang of the irreligious world without against her as a powerful corporation, an aristocratic body composed of millionaires, high church exclusives, bigotted episcopalians, a awful sound, no doubt, to your extra liberal ears. Possibly you may once in your life, have had dealings with one of her communion whom you might have fancied unworthy, or who might have been so in reality, (for "where's the palace wherein no foul things sometimes intrude not?") Beyond this I will venture to say, and your own conscience will bear me witness I am right, you positively know nothing whatever of the great benefits to the souls and bodies of men of whom you profess to be the champion. You doubtless imagine you are attacking the "upper ten" when you let off a gun at her vestry not knowing you are firing squibs at poor lawyers, auctioneers, and custom house officers, physicians, merchants, and merchant tailors. If you want to know what this church is doing, go to her democratic and popular rector, and ask the amount of her communications and he is daily distributing; look at her donations and annual allowances to poor clergymen and poor parishes; accompany her spiritual clergy to the haunts of poverty, disease and crime; breathe for one hour the atmosphere they live in; expose yourself as they do to contagion from plague and fever, and then joke about her being the poor man's friend. Mr editor, have done. Let not false pride prevent your making the amend where you have committed injustice or fallen into error. A READER.

The Land of Gold——No 2.

Like the leaves of the forest when summer is green
That hest in the month of December was seen;
Like leaves of the forest when autumn hath blown
That hest in December was scattered and strown.

And like the leaves of the forest in number are the patrons of HOUT, the renowned daguerrian artist of No. 363 Broadway, who takes the most perfect oragon, stereotype, eyes-talk type and other pictures, in any condition of weather. Hout is the recipient of the World's Fair medal.

German System of Daguerreotyping—Portraits for 25 cents.

—Imitators need not disclaim having any thing to do with this system of picture making, as nobody would suspect they had from the specimens show of their own work. Good reason Jack won't eat his supper; eh, fogy? REES & CO., 289 Broadway.
