Dr. Beale's Case.

PHILADELPHIA, April 2, 1855.

In the Supreme Court this morning, Chief Justice Lewis gave a decision granting a writ of error in the Beale case, on the ground that the jury that tried the case, instead of being sworn to render a verdict according to the evidence, were sworn to try the guilt or innocence of the defendant; also, that the defendant, instead of being sentenced to solitary confinement at labor, was sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor.

The wind this morning blew down the front wall of a forwarding house on Broad street, killing John Monahan.

NIBLO'S GARDEN—CONCERT BY THE PYNE AND HARRISON ENGLISH OPERA COMPANY.—There was a full house at Niblo's last evening to witness the first appearance in concert in this city of the English opera company, of which Miss L. Pyne is the prima donna. The performance was a very good one, embracing popular operatic pieces, selections from sacred music, and English glees and ballads. Miss L. Pyne appears to great advantage in the concert room, and the popularity which she has gained on the stage bids fair to be still further extended. She was particularly successful last night in the well known duet (with Miss Pyne) from the "Crown Diamonds," and in the recitative and air, "With Verdure Clad," from "The Creation." It was pleasant to find that her late severe indisposition has had no perceptible effect upon her delicious voice, while her execution has never been more spirited and brilliant. Miss Pyne, Mr. Harrison and Mr. Borrani also gave general satisfaction. Mr. Athins, who has a fine bass voice, made a good impression upon the audience. The concert was an entire success. On Thursday this company will give a concert in Brooklyn, and on Monday another, and the last, for the present, at Niblo's.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—A YOUNG WIFE'S DIARY.—A neat one-act comedy, under the above title, was produced at Wallack's Theatre last evening. Like most pieces of the kind, this comedy has been borrowed from the French. The present version was translated by Mr. W. Robertson from Les Memoirs de deux Jeunes Mariées, by MM. Dennery and Clairville. It was first played in Paris in 1843, and another translation, entitled "My Wife's Journal," was played in London two months since. The plot of this bagatelle is hardly worth a description. Two ladies keep diaries, which fall into the hands of their husbands, one of whom, at least, reads no good about himself, while the jealousy of the other is awakened, and his confidence finally restored by the same means—a perusal of madame's MS. The situations are odd, and the dialogue is always smart and occasionally witty. The piece was quite successful. Miss Rosa Bennett played Madame Dumontel with a great deal of spirit and vivacity. She has been, in some sort, a stranger to these boards during the past few weeks; but she is too clever an actress to be shelved. The two husbands found competent representatives in Messrs. Lester and Stewart. The piece will be played again this evening. The house last night was not full.

To Southern and Western Merchants.—We are pleased to learn that Mr. Udolpho Wolfe has established a depot in this city for the sale of his really valuable medical beverage. We intended some days since to notice the fact, but the press of foreign news and other important matters precluded the possibility of our giving the "Shenanpe" the attention they deserve. All persons know that pure Holland gin is as article as scarce as it is valuable, and physicians have often been obliged to use other less efficacious diuretics, solely on account of the difficulty of obtaining a genuine article; for it is well known that the majority of all the liquors imported into this country, are drugged and adulterated by mercenary dealers until they almost lose their identity. Gin in particular has been very unfortunate in this relation, so much so in fact that the "pure article" could rarely, if ever, be found.

Medical practitioners foresaw the evil effects this criminal adulteration would have upon the human system, particularly in cases of disease, so they decried its use generally, and it has only been within the last few years since Mr. Wolfe so successfully introduced his Sennapps, that they have openly recommended any article of the kind. From a pamphlet before us, we learn that hundreds of our best practitioners have sent Mr. Wolfe boldly written testimonials of the efficacy of the Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps as a tonic, diuretic, anti-dyspeptic, and invigorating cordial.

Practically, we can recommend the article in question, particularly to persons who are obliged to travel. We became acquainted with its virtues some two years ago, as we glided down the bosom of the Father of Waters—the reckless, rolling, erratic and muddy Mississippi. We took it as a medicine, and when we found ourselves safe landing on the levee of New Orleans, we were free from those cutting pains that calculi in the bladder always subjected us to. The Schnapps acted as a corrector of the fluids, actually dissolving and carrying off the alkaline deposits that form when the "river water" is used to any great extent.

Another virtue of the Schnapps is the absence of that nauseating flavor and taste common to gin always present; in fact, the Schnapps are rather more pleasant than otherwise. Mr. Wolfe has assured us, and we have heard it from other sources, that every berry he has distilled at his manufactory in Germany is carefully picked, and that none of the refuse, piney matters are ever allowed to go into the still. It is distilled from the best and purest barley, and flavored with the aromatic juniper berry of Italy.

We have a long chemical analysis before us from the pen of Dr. D. L. Mott, of New York, but the detail would be uninteresting, and in some points unintelligible to the general reader. All we can do is to recommend Wolfe's Schnapps to persons who wish a pure article, and at the same time caution them against counterfeit articles. Wolfe's preparation is put up in quart and pint bottles, in cases of two dozen each. Every family should have some on hand. The depot in this city is at No. 25 South Front street.—Philadelphia Daily Reporter, March 30.
