Machine Papers Before and After

Turner County Herald: One of the machine organs wants to know where Crawford would be in the election if the old machine papers did not turn in now and support him: Candidly, brother, we don't believe it will make a continental bit of difference whether you support him or not. Crawford is going to be elected by the biggest majority ever given a governor in the state and perhaps his majority would be a little larger if all the old machine papers voted. Harmony is a good thing and may be needed some day but it isn't strictly necessary this year.

Did not all the machine papers in the state oppose Crawford, and some of them are now showing signs of disloyalty while claiming to be loyal? A great many of these disloyal sheets are owned by the bosses and the editors are only machine totems, and as such the people know them.

The machine papers are as powerless as were the machine bosses in the face of an outraged people who have been robbed and plundered through the machine-corporation combine.

Every machine paper in the recent campaign, was run in the interest of men who have helped to rob the tax payers for years, and every machine editor knows this to be true.

Many of the machine editors and their papers were held in line by promises, lies and insurance statements, but the state convention pulled the corporation mask to pieces and exposed the brazen impudence of the machine gang and its impotence in the face of truth and justice and a square deal.

Many of the machine editors of the pre-convention period are machine editors no more and the brand applied by the people no longer burns them, because they have learned through an unpleasant experience that machine-corporation politics as applied by republican bosses who are corporation owned, is not republicanism at all, but the selfish arrogant demands of an infamous system.

The machine papers had no influence with the people when opposing a square deal in state affairs. The people wanted Mr. Crawford for governor, and the return of Mr. Gamble to the senate, and a square deal in taxation, and a chance to vote under a direct primary law, and many other needed reforms, and the people are going to get what they want, because they are going to send men to the legislature who will sustain Governor Crawford in carrying out every demand of the platform.

All the elements opposing the re-election of Senator Gamble are centering around Kittredge with a hope that he may be able to save them from the fate of all machine dupes, and while hoping through Kit are secretly damning Crawford, Gamble, Elliott, and other insurgent leaders. The chief boast of the machine heretofore has been its loyalty to party and platform. This was a delightful song before Crans burned the books, but since the people repudiated them they no longer sing they snarl and plot.

The fate of Martin, Burke and Elliott will be the fate of all bosses who come to be the state. Their fate will be Kittredge's fate, for the people can not and will not longer trust a man whose senatorial seat is mortgaged to the corporations.

It is reasonable to expect treachery from those repudiated bosses, and the Roosevelt republicans in every county in the state should be on their guard and see that no man is nominated for the legislature who is not a reformer as heart and willing to stand by the party platform from A to Z.

Hon. W. J. Bryan objects to a political condition that requires him to sit on a candidate stool for two years.

Every man and every woman are meddling from a Debs viewpoint. All are making a perfect condition of happiness and the best that life can afford.

One of the ablest speakers on the Assembly platform this year was Eugene V. Debs, the recognized exponent of socialism in the United States.

The shouting up crusade started against the Debs packing houses, and spread all over the country, and the state health officers are after Debs house owners who will be required to clean up and hang clean.

The Old Machine at Work

A cartoon in last Saturday's Argus Leader reflects the bitterness of soul covered by the hide of a defeated and discredited machine follower.

That cartoon assumes to picture Senator Gamble and United States Attorney Elliott in doubt as to whether Mr. Crawford is headed for Washington or Pierre, indicating plainly that Mr. Crawford might be induced to switch from governor to the senatorship.

In view of this baseless presumption it may be proper to state that the plans of the machine are well understood as to the election of Senator Gamble next winter.

The machine henchmen in the various counties are secretly organizing to defeat the re-election of Senator Gamble, and in order to accomplish this they are willing to enter any combination, no matter how disreputable, to accomplish their purpose.

Their task is a hopeless one, but the discredited machine bosses are desperate, and smarting under public condemnation with political obitration written across their backs, they care not for party or pledge or honor.

Their secret password is "anything to beat Gamble," and to this end every energy of the defeated bosses will be directed. They are also hoping to secure a majority of the senate and thus defeat legislation demanded by the people, but in this they will also meet a sweeping defeat because a great majority of the people favor the demands set forth in the republican platform, and a vigorous campaign would have given the insurgents every county east of the river, and this is amply vouched for since the state convention, notwithstanding the bogus claims of the machine.

No well posted politician believes for a moment that Kittredge, Martin, Burke, Ellrod or Campbell will give the republican platform or Senator Gamble any support. They are bitter at heart and sorely disgusted and would glory in the defeat of the entire ticket from Gamble down.

A number of machine followers have been at Sioux Falls recently and the purpose of their visit is not difficult to guess, but their schemes for vengeance will avail them nothing—the people are against them.

The tax payers of the state have no sympathy with men who have labored early and late to fasten a corporation and trust system of government upon them. They know what the bosses, have done, they know what they would do, and in this knowing will see to it that they are kept from doing harm in the future.

The reform element of the republican party need not expect to get reform measures through the legislature unless the right kind of reformers are elected. The machine will secretly work to induce two Roosevelt republicans to aspire for a legislative nomination and while this contest is seemingly safe from a reform standpoint, the machine will put up a man who may win out by the reform vote being split. In no county in the state can the Roosevelt republicans afford to split their vote. If they do they will meet defeat at the caucuses, and the caucus nominees will nominate a legislative ticket at the county convention. The reform forces must be united in every county. Let there be no guess work about this matter. The machine is desperate and will hesitate at nothing.

Farm House Burned

Early last Saturday morning Julius Machmiller and family, who live two miles west of Worthing, were aroused by the furious barking of a faithful dog. The moment Mr. Machmiller opened his eyes he realized that the building was being rapidly consumed by fire. Instant action was all that saved them and the faithful dog perished before it could be reached. Mr. Machmiller has his porch inclosed with a wire screen to keep out insects. The faithful dog was asleep inside the screen, and when it found the fire getting too close it barked furiously finally arousing the inmates who were asleep upstairs. Mr. Machmiller said that in five minutes from the time he was aroused by the barking of the dog, the roof collapsed and the destruction was complete. He is satisfied that the barking of the dog saved all their lives, for in a minute or so more suffocation would have rendered escape impossible, and as it was they barely escaped. When they got out it was too late to reach the noble dog that warned them in time to escape. Fire and smoke had killed the dog by the time the Machmillers had got out of the fire rymrce.

Mr. Machmiller carried $1,000 insurance on house and contents in the Lincoln County Farmers' Mutual, while his loss was fully $3,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Surprised

Hon. Edgar Dean has been president of the Assembly organization since the beginning, and all know how faithfully and earnestly he has worked every year to make it pleasant and comfortable for those who camped in the park. Early and late he was on hand to help campers—never tiring, never absent, always looking after the personal comfort of those who came to enjoy the program, and his Canton friends as well as strangers were liberal in expressing their appreciation of his work.

A number of friends were consulted with reference to presenting Mr. and Mrs. Dean with a testimonial of their appreciation, and it was decided that a little surprise would be in order. Accordingly one of those beautiful mechanical creations in the shape of an anniversary clock, was purchased from Syverud & Moe, the jeweler, and taken down to the cottage of Judge Kennedy, who had been selected to present it in behalf of the subscribers, who assembled quietly around the handsome Dean cottage to await the arrival of Mr. Dean who came down from the auditorium with "the remains of James Fax, the funny man." Fax's remains consisted of a lamp and a mirror, used in making his lightning changes in costume.

Mr. Dean was invited to take a seat on the porch alongside of Mrs. Dean and then the apparently uninterested friends drew nigh as Judge Kennedy began a speech in which "time" was referred to quite often. He told of a time away down in New York when Mr. and Mrs. Dean reckoned time because of a beautiful wedding ceremony thirty six years ago. From that time forward they had noted time in the many important events of life, and time had been kind to them in their beautiful lifetime, clear down to the time when their friends had noted time and called to notify them that a thirty-sixth anniversary covered a good deal of time. The speaker got in about two hundred more times than we can remember at this time, and Judge Kennedy uncovered time and presented Mr. Dean with the beautiful four hundred day time piece, and the crowd applauded.

Mr. Dean responded as best he could for the surprise was so nicely timed that he had no time to find a timely response. Mrs. Dean responded eloquently in appreciation of the timely time piece coming as a surprise on anniversary time, and the well pleased friends applauded both heartily.

Mrs. Dean was also presented with a very handsome souvenir spoon by those who presented the beautiful clock.

The clock presented Mr. and Mrs. Dean is known as an anniversary clock, because you don't have to wind it up but once a year, and all who participated in that pleasant surprise expect to present to see Mr. Dean wind up that beautiful time piece July 12, 1907, when congratulatory will be in order over their thirty-seventh wedding anniversary.

A New Depot

The Milwaukee Railroad company will begin the erection of a new depot, very soon, as men and material have been ordered to Canton. The plans call for a large modern structure, with sewerage connection and every convenience that the traveling public are entitled to. Canton is one of the most important business points on the entire system in this state, and ought to be a division headquarters. There is seldom less than three freight trains here at a time and on several occasions as high as ten. Canton has always been a loyal friend of the Milwaukee and Canton has every reason to expect the best the Company can give her. The new structure will be at the foot of Broadway, two blocks west of the present depot.

—We don't claim to have been repairing watches for more than 12 or 14 years, but we have advantages of the most modern methods, and guarantee satisfaction.
