quired; with it the revolution could be bought up, and the government, as then administered, continued in power. The United States had a full treasury, and circumstances would justify an application being made to it for that amount.

The subject in this condition was presented to Queen Isabella, as a matter of form, and received her approval. It was thought best to keep the resolution of the government from the knowledge of our Minister, and a special agent was selected as bearer of despatches to Washington, with a copy of the letter to the President, enclosed with instructions to the Spanish Minister. This letter proposed to the United States a settlement of the Cuban question on the last and final conditions made by President Polk, which were more favorable to Spain than any that had since been presented, by an amount exceeding fifty millions of dollars. A condition in the terms proposed by Mr. Polk was the payment of twenty-five millions of dollars on the conclusion of the contract, and the transfer of the island to the United States.

The Spanish letter was passed into the hands of Secretary Marcy, and through him an answer was returned to the Spanish Minister, purporting to have been the President's decision to the offer made by Spain. The answer stated that the conditions of Spain, as put forth in the letter to the United States President, could not be entertained, and that the terms were in her possession on which the United States was then prepared to treat. It was plainly intimated that the Pierce administration understood the question of Cuba and the interest of the country sufficiently well not to require foreign advice or suggestions, an unnecessary piece of severity on the part of Mr. Marcy, and which, it appears, the Spanish government properly appreciated, by avoiding as far as convenient the subject of Cuba, when subsequently called to her notice by our minister.

I have reason to believe that the particulars of this important correspondence were kept secret from Mr. Soulé. The twenty-five millions of money, in connection with the anticipated revolution, was not the only argument for pressing the sale of Cuba at that moment. Many of the first statesmen of Europe favored the immediate sale and transfer of the island to the United States as an act of true policy, for circumstances then justified a belief that Cuba was shortly to become the property of the filibusteros, then organizing their formidable forces throughout the United States, and that once in their possession, all hope of recovering the island would be at an end, and with an additional loss to Spain of one hundred millions of dollars. This reasoning must have had its influence in determining the Spanish government in its offer for the sale of Cuba, and that it should wish to make a good bargain with the United States was both proper and right, and could not with propriety justify the severe and undiplomatic answer of Secretary Marcy.

A prudent policy would have kept the offer an open one, for the action of Congress, and Mr. Pierce would doubtless have found support in that body, had he closed with the terms offered by Spain. The payment of the twenty-five millions was the only real obstacle then in the way of the United States purchasing Cuba, but an ingenuous and honest administration would have overcome that difficulty without much trouble. Congress would have voted the sum, in all probability, without unnecessary delay. Cuba, however, was not to become the property of the United States, unless she came in under the conditions offered by President Pierce—an event which, from appearances, is a long way off. It will remain for the new Congress to render more intelligible our recent doings with Spain, and many of the governments of Europe, by an expose of facts which the Pierce administration have dishonestly labored to keep from the attention of the public.

COURT MARTIAL UPON LIEUT. HALDEMAN, UNITED STATES ARMY.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.—The Court met at 10 o'clock A. M. on Saturday, pursuant to adjournment—Brevet Lieut. Col. Sands presiding.

Counsel for the accused announced that they were ready to submit their defence, and proceeded to read the same. It was very lengthy, occupying over two hours in reading. The accused began with alluding briefly to the nature of the court before which he was arraigned. The prolongation of the trial was apologized for on the ground of the importance of the issue to himself personally and to the service. He expressed his abhorrence of the crimes charged and his contempt for their littleness; declared that until condemned he stood before them a man of honor and a gentleman. Reference was made to the causes which induce young men to enter the army, and he appealed to his judges to say whether they had entered the service for such small pecuniary gains. He then proceeded to examine the nature of the several charges, giving to them their appropriate legal names; after which he entered upon an argument to show that a court martial being a court of limited jurisdiction, and having cognizance of military crimes and delinquencies only, that he was not legally called upon to answer to the court for the charges on which he was arraigned—contending that it was no part of his duty either as commissary or as an officer to take charge of the savings of the recruits or to distribute fresh beef to the officers. This position was strengthened by quotations from writers on military law. Waving, however, this technical defence, he took the bold ground that he was entirely innocent not only of criminality but of dishonor. He proceeded to examine the character of Sergeant Head, one of the chief witnesses for the defence. He alleged that Sergeant Head had fallen from his high position when he enjoyed the confidence of his commanders, and had gone down through a course of debauchery ending in long attacks of delirium tremens, and collated the testimony of Head's associates, averring that it proved that his general reputation for truth and veracity was bad. He stated the many perjuries he dictated to have been committed by Sergeant Head on the trial, and insisted that Head was totally unworthy of belief. Lieutenant Willard's conduct next came under review. The intimacy between Willard and himself was adverted to. Lieut. Willard was accused of ungenerous conduct during the tendency of the charges and the contradiction to his testimony was strongly urged. The accused, however, very generously stated how, even with these contradictions, that Lieut. Willard might be freed from such imputations. To the first and second specifications of the first charge it was urged that the payments by Lieut. Haldeman exceeded his receipts, to the 3d and 4th specifications of the same charge, full payments were insisted upon as having been made, and that the same was shown by an examination of Lieut. Willard's testimony and the evidence of Margaret Daily. The 5th and 7th specifications were declared to be dependent upon Sergeant Head's testimony, which was alleged to be absurd and inconsistent with itself. In answer to the 6th specification he referred to his former notes, and left the question of motive to the Court. The 8th specification was declared to be a legal impossibility as well as totally unsupported by proof. The whole of the second charge was answered by insisting that the facts, if true, did not constitute the crime alleged, but that the facts were not true, and that he had done or neglected no more than what all the other officers of the post had done or neglected. The accused closed his defence with a fervent peroration, insisting that his defence had been fully made out upon the merits, and claimed a triumphant acquittal at the hands of the court.

The Judge Advocate stated that he desired to reply to some of the points of the defence, and asked that the Court adjourn to Monday morning, to give him time to prepare his answer. The Court accordingly adjourned to Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

UNION COURSE L. I.—TROTTING.

A trotting match for $1,000, mile heats, best three in five, to 250-lb. wagons, between blk. m. Black Bess, and b. g. Soto, carrying seventy-five pounds extra weight, came off on Saturday afternoon. Black Bess won very easily. The race, in such a storm as was raging at the time, was anything but sport to either man or beast. The track, clogged deep with mud, the rain pouring in torrents, and the drivers blinded by "posh" thrown in their faces from the horses' feet, combined to make a very slow race, no matter how fast the nags might have been. But the race was play or pay, and postponement was out of question. When the race was over the drivers presented rather a grotesque appearance, being covered with mud from head to foot. As might have been expected, there was a very slim attendance. Black Bess was the favorite previous to the race at one hundred to forty. The following is a summary:—

SATURDAY, Oct. 20.—Trotting match.—$1,000, play or pay. Mile heats, best three in five, to 250 pound wagons.
W. Woodruff named blk. m. Black Bess..... 1 1 1
J. Shute named b. g. Soto, to carry 75 lbs. extra 2 2 2
Time—2:58, 2:59, 3:06¼.

A trotting match for $2,000 will come off this afternoon, at the Centreville Course, between Lantern and a horse called Buz, a stranger in these parts, but undoubtedly a good one, or he would not be matched against a horse so well known as Lantern.

TENNESSEE.

NASHVILLE RACES—DEATH IN THE HOUR OF VICTORY.—The fall meeting at Nashville this year has been an unusually spirited one. There were a great many celebrated horses assembled from Kentucky, Georgia and Tennessee. The closing day, however, presented a chapter of accidents. One incident in particular excited very general grief. The famous horse, Henry Perritt, which had made the fastest mile on record, Whirlwind, a capital Georgia mare, and Iodine, a Tennessee horse, were entered. Great interest was felt, both on account of the size of the purse, and the high reputation of the horses. Four heats were run, each horse taking a heat, and each horse falling during the race, on account of the heaviness of the course, caused by the heavy rain which had fallen the previous night. Perritt came off victorious, having won the first and fourth heats, but at the expense of his life, for he expired in a few hours after the race.

Can this be True?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

We frequently hear of outcries against French Post Offices, and the surveillance of the French police over letters deposited in the French Post Office. Now, I state it as a fact which can be proved, that a number of letters directed to a merchant of standing in this city were deposited in one of the United States Post offices—that these letters were never received by the merchant to whom they were directed, but their seals were broken and the contents delivered to other persons than to the merchant to whom the violated envelopes were directed. THE MILITARY.

AT A JOINT MEETING OF THE PHENIX AND Worth Guards, held Oct. 21, 1855, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Whereas, We learn with sincere sorrow of the death of our beloved associate, Christian Lewis Wise Miller, who departed this life suddenly, and in the midst of apparent health; and, while we deeply deplore the loss of our comrade, (acting financial officer of the Phenix Guard at the time of his decease,) we humbly bow with submission to the will of the Almighty, by whose mysterious decree of Providence he has been removed from among us; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the members of the Phenix and Worth Guards jointly attend his funeral this day, from his late residence, No. 68 Essex street; and that the members of each company wear the usual badges of mourning upon such occasion, and also upon their several ensuing excursions, in token of respect for our late companion in arms; and be it further

Resolved, That we offer our sympathy to the bereaved widow and her children, his aged father, and others, who have lost in him a kind and affectionate husband, father, son, and friend. They have to mourn the loss of one who had endeared himself to all by his manly qualities, industry, integrity, and general goodness of heart, in all the connections through life.

Resolved, That we commend to the mercy of Him who will protect the widow and the orphan, those who, in their bereavement and affliction, now mourn the loss of one so dear to them in life; and we would point out to our fellow members his past career as worthy of our future regard and consideration.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the New York Herald, and a copy sent to the family of the deceased.
