Professor Anderson regrets having to announce his last nights in New York. When he became the occupant of the Winter Garden a fortnight since, he announced that his engagement was for three weeks only. That term expires on Saturday next, and owing to the brief late appearance of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams, no re-engagement can possibly be effected. The great and really surprising success which has attended Professor Anderson's representations in New York—the densely congregated crowds which have nightly thronged
THE PSYCHOMANTHEION
—the sheerly fact of his having been found necessary to decline receiving any more money at the pay places after noon in the evening on each and all of fourteen consecutive nights, would be sufficient to prove that a performance which has attracted his city, and now runs a series of successive months, could be but get a stage to perform upon and an auditorium large enough to accommodate the expectant thousands who have notified their desire to attend. So place in New York being available, Professor Anderson reluctantly announces that these will
