AMUSEMENTS.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.
OPENING NIGHT
MONDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 22.
Laura Keene, in the inauguration of her present season begs to assure the public that her utmost efforts have been exerted to establish a style of entertainment that shall prove worthy their support. During the season of 1859, the company of this theatre was composed of artists of well known talent, and the highest standing in the profession, together with new candidates for public favor, several of whom now are prominent stars. The approval bestowed in this theatre having stamped them, they are now acknowledged in both hemispheres.
Laura Keene ventures to repeat her experiment, presenting a COMBINATION OF OLD FAVORITES,
who stand on the highest pinnacle of fame, and whose talent could have elicited the plaudits of foreign audiences, had they not preferred the favors of those who made them.
THE PUBLIC OF NEW YORK.
In conjunction with these, she will present
YOUNG ARTISTES, who, having achieved eminence in our sister cities, come asking for the encouragement shown their predecessors. Laura Keene dared to present many such in 1859, and in 1862 she asks her patrons again to confirm her selection, honestly believing that a large amount of
