THE BATTLES IN MARYLAND.

description. They smell to heaven! The battle was going on favorably to our side at the latest advices.

THE MONOCACY BRIDGE BEING REPAIRED.

Workmen are engaged in large numbers repairing the railroad bridge over the Monocacy. Great trouble is experienced in removing the debris of the magnificent iron bridge that once spanned the river. Until that is removed, work cannot be begun on the trestle work, over which the cars are to pass. It will probably be completed and in good order for passage of trains in a week.

DISPOSITION OF THE PRISONERS.

There are a large number of prisoners here, safely secured in engine houses and other public buildings. Many more are expected to-day, and the courthouse building, yet unfinished, will be used as a temporary guardhouse for their safe keeping.

The Union men are in good spirits to-day, and expect the rebels to be all out of the State by Saturday, or prisoners in our hands. We shall see.

MY JOURNEY TO FREDERICK.

Your correspondent reached this pleasant little city yesterday noon, having come by railroad as far as the Monocacy bridge on the first passenger train that had run over the road in ten days.

THE TRAIN

was laden with refugees returning from Baltimore, soldiers and outsiders. The train proceeded very cautiously after Ellicott's Mills had been passed, keeping in communication with Frederick at every station, in order to guard against surprise and capture, as well as against other accidents.

NO OBSTRUCTIONS WERE FOUND ON THE TRACK

up to the Monocacy, where the splendid iron structure spanning that stream was found a mere wreck in the bed of the river. Here we were compelled to take coaches and ride three miles over a rough and exceedingly dusty road to this city.

THE RETURNING UNION REFUGEES.

Among the refugees returning were General Edward Shriver, commandant of the State rendezvous of Western Shore; Frederick Schley, Esq., editor of the Examiner, and other prominent Union men of the State.

APPEARANCE OF FREDERICK.

The city wears a very busy and animated appearance. Through the streets are continually passing to and fro immense numbers of wagons, soldiers, horses and private conveyances, covered with dust, but pushing rapidly on. All the stores here seemed to be open, except a few (whose closed shutters indicate that their proprietors were with the rebels), and seem to be doing a fair business.

ON THE CORNERS OF THE STREETS

groups of citizens stand from morning until night, discussing the movements of our forces, the appearance of the last battle field and the prospects of the battle at Harper's Ferry.

THE UNION MEN,

and they seemed to represent the entire population, were smiling faces, and appeared in the best of humor. An immense number of Union men were in from Hagerstown and the country now in possession of the rebels, in their private conveyances, and many of them visited the battle field near Middletown, and rendered such assistance as they were able to our wounded.

THE LADIES OF THE CITY

are unremitting in their attentions to our wounded in the hospitals here, and appear anxious to relieve their sufferings in every possible way.

THE WOUNDED.

But few of our wounded from the last battles have arrived here, the greater portion of them being in Middletown, where the accommodations are not adequate to the large demand.

HOSPITAL STORES AND MEDICINES

are not abundant here, as the rebels made a clean sweep of all the government hospital supplies, and took away nearly everything they needed from the drug stores in town. A large supply is looked for to-day from Washington.

THE AMBULANCES WITH THE ARMY

are kept running night and day between the battle field and Middletown; but the task of removing all the wounded is a great one, and is not yet completed. As soon as the bridge across the Monocacy is completed the wounded will be brought here and transported to hospitals North, where they may be properly attended to.

THE LOSSES.

Of the numbers of our killed and wounded in the severe battle on the mountains I have not data upon which to base a conjecture. It was quite heavy, as the enemy had a strong position, with abundance of artillery, well supported by infantry, and tenaciously contested every step; but all their efforts were in vain. Our men drove them from their position, and followed them over the ridge of the mountain and down the declivity with great slaughter. In places the rebels were found lying four deep for rods about, attesting the terrible valor of our men.

THE REBEL LOSS WAS VERY HEAVY

in killed and wounded, and we captured several hundred prisoners. Everybody at Middletown is so excited, and there is so much confusion and turmoil, that it is impossible to obtain any reliable reports of the loss on either side. But in general terms it may be safely stated that it was heavy. Details will be sent on as soon as they can be obtained.

FREDERICK, Md., Sept. 17—2 P. M.

RECAPTURE OF HARPER'S FERRY.

Harper's Ferry is reported to have been recaptured yesterday P. M., and to be now in the possession of a portion of the force of General Burnside.

ARRIVAL OF PAROLED PRISONERS (UNION).

The main body of the paroled Union prisoners captured at Harper's Ferry have arrived here and been sent forward to the Monocacy Junction, from whence they will probably be sent to the camp at Annapolis until they can be exchanged. So hard pressed were the rebels that they had not time to parole the men in the usual manner, but did it through the regimental officers. It is a question whether such a parole is binding upon the privates, or will be so regarded by the government.

APPEARANCE OF THE MEN.

The men who have arrived here look well, and both officers and men are much chagrined at the unfortunate plight in which they find themselves, through no fault of their own. They are unanimous in the assertion that the surrender of Harper's Ferry was unnecessary. It is currently reported that before his death he acknowledged that his sympathies were with the South, and that he had not defended the important post confided to his charge as he might and should have done.

THE SURRENDER TO MARYLAND TROOPS

is said to have been entirely unnecessary. Our troops had maintained the position through the day, repulsing the enemy in three attacks, and had sent word to the Ferry that they could maintain their position, and requested that reinforcements should be sent on. Instead of reinforcements, they were astonished at receiving orders to spike the guns and evacuate the position. This they did in good order. Had they remained on the Maryland Heights the rebels would not have been able to cross the river in any force, and could not have taken Harper's Ferry while the supplies and ammunition held out. Before that could have occurred, they would have been relieved and the misfortune averted.

REBEL PRISONERS.

There are in and about this city some eight hundred rebel prisoners taken in the recent battles and stragglers picked up by our cavalry upon the roads. What disposition will be made of them I have not as yet learned. There are no officers of importance among them.

ARRIVAL OF WOUNDED.

All of our wounded who are able to walk or ride in ambulances, at Middletown, Bolivar, and other places beyond here, are now being sent into this city, where they can be more properly and conveniently attended to. Ample arrangements have been made here for the reception of a large number of wounded, and trains of hospital stores and equipments received from Washington for their use.

REBUILDING THE RAILROAD BRIDGE.

Laborers are at work rebuilding the railroad bridge over the Monocacy, and in a few days the cars will be able to run to Harper's Ferry, as heretofore.

NARROW ESCAPE OF THE REBEL GEN. LEE.

Gen. Lee, who commanded the rebel cavalry, lost his horse shot under him.

A BRILLIANT CAVALRY AFFAIR.

Three companies of the Eighth Illinois cavalry, under command of Col. Farnsworth, yesterday afternoon drove 1,400 of Stuart's cavalry out of Boonsboro, and pursued them to near Sharpsburg. We killed two rebel captains, two lieutenants and twelve others, all of whom were left behind by the fleeing enemy. Our loss was three killed and six wounded.

FREDERICK, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Arrival of the Paroled Harper's Ferry Soldiers—A Stirring Sight—Names of the Regiments—Gallant Conduct of the New Levies, &c.

To-day two officers and men lately paroled at Harper's Ferry by the rebels, after the surrender, arrived here.

It was truly stirring to every loyal heart, and also even grateful to the few spectators present here, to see those stalwart young men thronging out every avenue, numbering in all nine hundred strong, and yet have the privilege of assisting their comrades, a few miles away, in ridding Maryland of the horde of Vandals who have invaded her soil and sacred rights. Our officers and men, who are debarred the privilege for an indefinite time of winning glory on the battle field, take their present fate hardly enough. Long faces are abundant to-day, and even the glorious successes which our army, under McClellan, is hourly achieving over the mountains, do not seem to drive away the gloom which hangs like a pall over these brave, yet fast bound prisoners.

I could scarcely imagine on my entrance into town to-day that this was the joyous, jubilant city I left but two days ago.

The following regiments were at Harper's Ferry at the time of the surrender, and their officers and men are consequently all under parole until exchanged:—One Hundred and Fifteenth New York; One Hundred and Eleventh New York; One Hundred and Twenty-sixth New York; Thirty second Ohio; Thirty-ninth New York, Garibaldi Guard; Twelfth New York Militia, three months; One Hundred and Twenty-fifth New York; First Maryland; Third Maryland; Eighty-seventh Illinois, three months; Sixty-fifth Illinois, three years; one battery, Fifth regiment New York artillery; one battery, Fifth Indiana. These batteries did noble service, having but one round of ammunition left when the surrender was made.

The enemy had, previous to the capitulation, opened from seven different positions, concentrating their united fire upon ours. It does not admit of doubt that the surrender, under the circumstances, was unavoidable, unless our entire force was intended to be destroyed.

I am glad to record an account of a gallant action on the part of our new troops, showing that they may be depended upon in an emergency.

On last Friday Companies A, Lieutenant W. Ferguson; B, Captain W. H. Shaw, One Hundred and Fifteenth New York Volunteers, and some other companies were ordered to march at four o'clock Saturday morning on picket duty. That night they performed this, to young soldiers arduous duty, without creating unnecessary alarm. In the morning they were ordered to Maryland Heights. There they were fired upon by the enemy. But they continued their course under a constant fire of nearly a brigade of the enemy, some two hundred yards, to a small breast work, and there fought them for an hour, until the order was given to fall back. Indeed, they continued firing after the order was given. Their loss was four in killed and four men wounded slightly:—

Wounded.

J. A. Rhodes, Co. E, 115th New York, arm.
J. R. Jacobi, Co. E, 115th New York, leg.
Colonel Segoin, 115th New York, wounded.
Captain Wm. Smith, Co. K, 115th New York, thigh.
J. Van Broechlen, 115th New York, seriously.

The First New York, Colonel McReynolds, and the Eighth Pennsylvania cavalry, Lieutenant Colonel Griffiths and Major Enos commanding, returned a few moments ago from a scout to the Pennsylvania line, having gone thither on Saturday morning last. They met no considerable force of the enemy, but succeeded in capturing eighty rebels who had become separated from the main body, doubtless for the purpose of securing food and rest.

I must be allowed to say that for efficiency these two regiments of cavalry are not surpassed in the service. Major Enos, of the Eighth Pennsylvania, is an old and esteemed resident of New York.

We have various rumors from the front; but as they contradict I will not mention any of them. It is undoubtedly true that McClellan is having a glorious success in his Maryland campaign. Our advance is now near Boonsboro, about sixteen miles from this city.

THE PREPARATIONS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

OUR HARRISBURG CORRESPONDENCE.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 17—3 P. M.

All the Pennsylvania Troops to be Sent to the Frontier—Arrival of Rebel Prisoners—Perfect Confidence in McClellan—The Rebel Loss at Harper's Ferry—When and Where—Determination of Governor Curtin and His Fellow Citizens, &c., &c.

At the present moment the excitement in this State, between this city and the Maryland line, is unparalleled.

A despatch has been received from Gen. McClellan by the Governor, requesting him to send all the forces possible to the frontier. They are streaming southward as fast as all the cars and roads can accommodate them. They feel that this is the crisis in the rebellion, and that now is the time for them to lend a hand in crushing it.

Meantime additional squads of rebel prisoners continue to arrive here, who are sent to Camp Curtin.

The greatest enthusiasm is manifested in favor of McClellan and the army, and, though no news that is considered decisive has yet arrived here, perfect confidence is felt that the campaign will end in the virtual overthrow of the rebellion.

I have conversed with a man from the vicinity of Harper's Ferry, who was an eyewitness to the repeated repulses of the rebels from that place by General Miles' forces. He says the attacking columns were under the leadership of Stonewall Jackson, and that they numbered thirty thousand men, but lost about two thousand in the various assaults upon Harper's Ferry. The rebel position was in front of Bolivar Heights, about a mile and a half from the town, while our forces tried to defend the apex of a triangle, formed by the junction of the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers and our line of battle. It was in ascending the heights to come to the attack that the rebels suffered most severely.

It is impossible to describe the state of feeling which pervades the people here as each successive item of news from Maryland is received. Neither on the part of the people nor the Governor is there the slightest relaxation of the spirit which everywhere prevails to crush the rebellion.

It is said that after Jackson captured Harper's Ferry he immediately marched his column to the assistance of the rebels in Maryland.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 17, 1862.

Quiet from Excitement Restored to Harrisburg—Postponement of the Draft—Rebel Prisoners—The Effect of the Mayor's Proclamation—Sheladdling Not Allowed, &c.

The excitement from the fear of an invasion has completely died away. We all breathe more freely and easier. And why should we not, since the series of victories commenced in Maryland were done up so effectually by McClellan, and we also have an army in our very midst—the brave boys of the old Keystone?

The troops still continue to pour in by the thousands, and are sent rapidly up the Cumberland valley.

All the public buildings are occupied—churches, depots and schoolhouses, as well as the Capitol buildings. The park surrounding the Capitol presents the appearance of one vast camping ground.

Owing to the present excitement, the draft in this State has been postponed until the 25th of this month.

A great many rebel prisoners were brought to town yesterday from Frederick. They were a hard looking set of fellows, "all tattered and torn." They go to show to what a miserable condition the army of Jeff. Davis is reduced. They were sent to Camp Curtin, where they met with some more of their deluded followers. All of them were conveyed to Fort Delaware in the afternoon. A good meal to these fellows would indeed be a treat, and a pair of good shoes would no doubt be thankfully received.

Ex-United States Senator Bigler is in town.

The Mayor's proclamation, prohibiting citizens and others from leaving the city without a pass, has taken some of the cowards quite by surprise. Some of the merchants here, during the excitement last week, commenced to pack up, and were sending their goods away, with the intention of following them in a day or two; but in this they were completely sold, as the Mayor's proclamation put a stop to all of such kind of sheladdling.

It is reported that the first brigade of militia have been ordered to Hagerstown.
