The French Consul Asks Relief for Starving Foreigners.

&c., &c., &c.

The rebels are determined to intensify their strength on several, as it were, cardinal points of their so-called confederacy, and one of the principal of these points is Mobile. A large sum of money and a great amount of labor have been employed since the breaking out of the rebellion on the defences of this place, already well defended by the forts erected by and at the expense of the United States. From the Gulf of Mexico there are three channels into the harbor of Mobile, two of them (the most easterly) being defended by Fort Morgan, while the western one is fully guarded by a casemated work known as Fort Gaines. The swash channel, which is the principal one by which vessels of any size can enter the harbor, runs directly under the guns of Fort Morgan, and it is by this channel that nearly all the vessels that have recently run the blockade of the harbor of Mobile have effected their object. It is said the foreign consuls, especially the Spanish, are heavily engaged in this business. To further defend the harbor or bay a line of spiles has been driven between the channels, and their tops cut off so that they cannot be seen when the tide is in, and are but barely visible when it is out. Spiles have also been driven into the Dog river bar, along the channel line and on either side of the entrance to the bay, so that it would be almost a matter of impossibility for a vessel, unaccompanied by a thoroughly versed pilot, to reach Mobile even if it passed the forts. Further than this, a sloop loaded with stone rides at anchor at the entrance, and at the first sign of invasion she would be scuttled and sunk in the channel. It is true the rebels place but little reliability in the power of resistance offered by Forts Morgan and Gaines; yet they would prove sufficiently strong to allow them time to complete so simple an operation as the sinking of a vessel prepared for the purpose.

From some cause to us unknown the rebels at Mobile are expecting an early attack upon their stronghold, and to repel any invasion they are now putting forth their utmost energies to be prepared when the time comes.

But once in the history of the war has any preliminary plans been made to reduce this place, and that occurred shortly after the capture of New Orleans by Admiral Farragut, when he sent Commander D. D. Porter, with a portion of his mortar flotilla, to ascertain if it was practicable to use his "bummers" in the open roadstead. Farragut himself intended to attack the city by running the forts, and a large portion of his fleet was marshalled at the portals o this rebellious city; but the overwise powers that be sent out orders that the attack should be postponed, and consequently the fleet was withdrawn, and the rebels have been unmolested in their preparations for the defence of the city and harbor.

One of the largest naval stations in the confederacy is located at Selma, some distance above the city of Mobile, on the Alabama river, where no less than one ram and four or five gunboats have been constructed for the navy of the confederacy. To give an idea of the importance of the naval station we have only to append a list of the officers on duty there:—

Commander—I. Farrand.
First Lieutenant—Van H. Morgan.
Assistant Paymaster—G. H. O'Neil.
Master—John Pearson.
First Assistant Engineer—W. Frick, Jr.
Carpenter—John T. Rustic.

In addition to these officers there have been attached to the station at various times ordnance officers of the best talent in the rebel service, and several hundred men have been constantly employed in the construction of new gunboats and in refitting old vessels; and at the present time the rebel navy in Mobile bay consists of the following vessels:—

Iron clad ram	Baltic.
Iron-clad	Morgan.
Steamer	Gaines.
Steamer	Selma.
Steamer	Alert.
Steamer	Crescent.

ADMIRAL FRANKLIN BUCHANAN IN COMMAND.

LIST OF OFFICERS OF THE REBEL RAM BALTIC.

Lieutenant—Jas. D. Johnston, Wm. P. A. Campbell, John Grunhall.
Second Lieutenants—Geo. A. Forebett, E. G. Read, A. G. Hudgins.
Surgeon—J. T. Mason, W. F. Carrington.
Assistant Paymaster—M. M. Levy.
Masters—Ivey Foreman, H. W. Perrin.
Midshipmen—S. P. Blanc, F. B. Dennis, J. H. Hamilton, E. A. Swain.
Engineers—W. M. Farmilecoy, F. G. Simpson.
Gunners—W. H. Haynes, D. G. McDonald.

LIST OF OFFICERS OF THE REBEL GUNBOAT MORGAN.

Commander—C. H. McBlair.
Lieutenants—C. J. Graves, T. L. Harrison.
Assistant Surgeon—E. G. Booth.
Assistant Paymaster—E. L. Muckell.
Midshipmen—H. H. Scott, T. G. Garret, W. F. W Hess, H. H. Tyson, J. R. Norris, F. Arthur.
Engineer—H. B. Wally.

LIST OF OFFICERS OF THE REBEL GUNBOAT GAINES.

Commander—T. T. Hunter.
Lieutenants—J. W. Bennett, Hilary Cenas.
Acting Surgeon—T. B. Ford.
Assistant Paymaster—J. E. Armur.
Master—E. C. Hawkins.
Midshipmen—J. A. Merriweather, J. M. Gardner, D. D. Coleman, W. D. Goode, W. H. Sterling, J. H. Tyrke, W. F. Clayton.

LIST OF OFFICERS OF THE REBEL GUNBOAT SELMA.

Lieutenant—P. U. Murphy.
Midshipman—J. B. Sidelfile.

LIST OF OFFICERS ATTACHED TO NAVAL STATION AT MOBILE.

Lieutenant—J. Eggleston.
Surgeon—J. W. Miles, G. S. Englehart.
Commander—E. Farrand.
Lieutenant—Alabama Barbett.
Paymaster—T. W. Ware, G. H. O'Neil.
Master—John Pearson.
Midshipman—W. S. Hogue.
Engineer—W. Frick, Jr.
Gunner—B. F. Hughes.

In addition to these are several sailing vessels, which belong to the State Coast Guard, and perform picket duty in various portions of the extensive bay. It has been reported that the ram is a failure, but such reports were set afloat previous to the dash made by the ironclads at Charleston. It is only when they are tried that the fact of their success or failure is truly ascertained by our fleets.

The entrance to Mobile bay is between Mobile Point and the eastern point of Dauphin Island. The distance between them is about three and a quarter miles. The interior of the bay has water enough for any vessel which can cross its bar, which has about fifteen feet upon it at low water. On account of a shoal formed opposite the mouth of Dog river, twenty miles south of the city, vessels drawing more than eight or nine feet cannot at low water go farther up the bay.

A short distance above the mouth of Dog river, and on the bar bearing the same name, obstructions have been placed, and in some places vessels have been sunk, to block up the channel, leaving only a narrow passage through them so that their own vessels can get through.

Lines of intrenchments have been thrown up encircling the city from near Dog river around to the Alabama river, and no less than twelve large independent earth
