Severt Ainess was among our visitors the other day. "Called in to smoke with the editor" at his expense and Severt always carries good cigars. He is of the opinion that the farmers will average a good half crop of small grain, some more and some less, but the average will be a good half. He thinks some early corn on light ground may have been injured some, but the average crop of corn is going to measure up big, and he further stated that corn is now showing up in such condition as to relieve the mind of many doubting Thomases.

Do not allow your kidney and bladder trouble to develop beyond the reach of medicine. Take Foley's Kidney Pills. They give quick results and stop irregularities with surprising promptness.

Avalanche Baffled at Last.

In the winter of 1909-10 an avalanche swept down the precipitous sides of the Cascade mountains at the little town of Wellington, Washington, and carried a Great Northern passenger train with almost one hundred passengers aboard, to a terrible fate in the depths of the canyon below. To prevent the recurrence of such a catastrophe was the problem that confronted the Great Northern's engineers, and spurred on by James J. Hill, who declared that the tracks must be rendered absolutely safe no matter what the cost, they finally determined upon the erection of reinforced concrete snowsheds protecting all the Wellington danger zone. These have just been finished at a cost of $500,000.

Construction of these solid masonry structures for a distance of 3,300 feet is regarded as a great accomplishment in the engineering world, for they are not merely coverings built over the tracks—they are indestructible hoards set into the mountain side. Future avalanches may thunder into the canyon, far below, all they please, but they will slide right over the concrete tubes, and trains may pass back and forth within them as safely as passenger traffic is carried on beneath the Hudson river in the McAdoo tunnels, or beneath the Detroit river.

"We must make the mountain district impregnable against snowslides, even if an outlay of millions of dollars is necessary," declared Mr. Hill emphatically and aside from the concrete sheds the railway magnate ordered more than $1,000,000 spent in an effort to prevent blockades and delays to through trains during the winter months. Two miles of the main line near Berne, east of Wellington, are in process of rebuilding, new buildings were erected at Wellington, a water supply system is being installed between Wellington and Scenic, and at Wellington a rendezvous has been made for the scores of men that each winter are used to fight the snow king in the Cascades. From this central point men may be rushed down the west side of the mountains or through the Cascade tunnel to the eastern slope.—From "Guarding Against the Avalanche," in April Technical World Magazine.
