Silos Silos

Have you a Silo? If not, build one. Do not let the best of your crops, into which you have spent both your money and labor, go to waste.

Let us figure with you on a permanent structure in Cement Stave or Continuous Air-space Block Silos. They are the best and have been proven so by those who already have them.

Boy Scout Saves Life.

Young Harry Brereton of the Eagle patrol of the boy scouts of Canton saved Rowland Hunt, a boy two years older than himself, from drowning in the deep swimming hole near the Chautauqua grounds. Among them was Rowland Hunt, the only one not a scout and who could not swim. He got beyond his depth, as boys have a way of doing, and the current swept him off his feet into deep water.

No one of the boys happened to be near him at the time, but Harry was nearest, though on the opposite bank of the river. At the call for help, young Harry, true to the instincts of a scout, jumped into the river and swam for the unfortunate Rowland, who was now entirely under. When he reached the drowning boy, he was grasped by the arm and, as it appeared to rest of the boys rushing up to help, drawn under by the struggles of the other boy; but when questioned upon this point Harry said, "I just dived till I could reach bottom and lifted Rowland up so he could get a breath of air, because he was too heavy for me to lift out of the water while swimming. When I came up again, I grasped him by the hair and pulled for the shore. When I got to where I could reach bottom, Ben Kennedy came up and took him off my hands. I was pretty well in then."

Harry Brereton is a second class scout, fourteen years old. He is working hard to make the remaining points for first class scout. One of these is swimming, but his feat of Monday, certainly indicates that he is ready for his test.

The scout master, Prof. Tuve, says that, not only does it prove that he can pass his test for swimming, but from the evidence of eye witnesses it is apparent that he has earned a medal for life saving, and the facts will be laid before the local Court of Honor at their first meeting and application made to the National Court of Honor for an "Honor Medal."

Canton has a fine organization of Boy Scouts led by scout master, A. G. Tuve. Several of the boys are first class scouts and some have already passed examinations for "Merit Badges."

"Never Again!" said the kindly wife "Will I go any place but Puckett's."

Chautauqua.

Salvator Ciricillo and his band of talented musicians, the Canton Chautauqua closed their eight day program Monday night with enough receipts to meet all expenses and a small balance on hand. The Chautauqua this season has been a success and the talent introduced by the Midland bureau made a very good impression with the chautauqua patrons. William Jennings Bryan was a drawing card and swelled the attendance at the beginning, while the Ciricillo band the last afternoon and evening brought out probably the largest crowds and made a good impression with their well selected numbers which were given with precision and harmony as would do credit to the very best of the high class attractions in this line of entertainment. As an indication of their appreciation the audience extended a unanimous vote for the return of the Ciricillo band next season. The business men who backed the undertaking this year are in a great measure responsible for the success of the chautauqua, while special credit is due Secretary Lybarger and Rev. E. E. Hunt, the later acting as local manager and platform manager for the chautauqua company. Plans are already being made for next year's program and already 525 season tickets have been subscribed, which assures Canton a first class chautauqua in 1913.
