BOARD OF AUDIT.

In this Board yesterday a quorum was on hand at twelve o'clock noon.

The cases of Charles Devlin, William W. Burnham, Nesbitt & Co., John H. McCabe, William H. McKinney and Andrew J. Garvey were called, but the claimants were not on hand and the cases went over.

The case of Eliza S. Cox, executrix, &c., against the city for damages on account of the death of her husband was set down for Monday next.

Abram Depew presented a claim yesterday against the city for $2,000, on the grounds that by the grading of Fifty-fourth street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues, in 1856, his house had been left standing some ten or eleven feet above the street, and had been so damaged that he could not let it.

Mr. Dean, for the Corporation Counsel, opposed the claim on the ground that the statute of limitations debarred the complainant from any redress at this time. The counsel for complainant submitted that a resolution passed by the Common Council ordering the Comptroller to pay this bill had waived the statute of limitations. It appeared that the Corporation had had an investigation, and in 1865 had ordered the Comptroller to pay the claim, but that officer refused to pay it, inasmuch as no account had been named from which the money was to be paid. The resolution was amended by the Common Council in the early part of 1867, but the Comptroller then declined because all claims against the city or county should then be presented through the Board of Audit.

Mr. Dean contended that the grading of the street was a work done for the benefit of the public, and that no incidental damage to property located on or near the street could be charged to the city, and on that point, substantiated by the decisions in the cases of Kavanagh vs. The City of Brooklyn (38 Barbour, p. 232), and Mills vs. the same (32 New York Reports, Denio; J.), the defendant (the city) was entitled to a non-suit.

The complainant's attorney claimed that the same authority which had directed the grading of the street had, after examining the case, directed the Comptroller to pay the damages claimed, and that the Board of Audit could not go beyond the resolution of the Common Council in the awarding of the amount of damages.

William Robertson, musician, presented bills amounting to $424 for music furnished on July 4, 1865, to the Eighth regiment at the parade on that day, and at Tompkins and Franklin squares on the evening of the same day. Mr. Robertson claimed that he had been ordered to furnish the music by resolution of the Common Council, but although he had paid the men out of his own pocket and had sent the bills in to the Common Council as soon as possible he had never heard or been able to learn anything concerning the fate of his claim and had never been able to recover any portion of the money due him. When the Board of Audit was organized he thought it would be the proper place to bring his claim, and he accordingly preferred it at this time.

Decisions were as usual reserved, and the Board adjourned until noon to-day.

INTERNAL REVENUE MATTERS.

The passage of the Warehouse bill still forms the topic of conversation among all interested in whiskey, either as manufacturers or dealers. Not only has a finale been put to the granting of bonds for the removal of spirits, but even in cases where permits for removal have been heretofore granted (since the passage of the law and before official notification thereof was received at headquarters) the storekeepers at the warehouses, acting under orders from Washington, have refused to allow removals to be made. How this state of things will finally eventuate is matter of speculation; but the status quo will be preserved until the department reverses its order.

William H. Craig, Assistant Assessor of the Thirty-second district, reports having seized, by order of Collector Shook, the rectifying establishment of Mr. Pendergast, No. 482 Pearl street, together with its contents—2,300 gallons of spirits, eight barrels of sherry wine, two barrels of gin and eight empty barrels. The rectifier's book was not found. The cause of seizure is not stated in the report. Mr. Craig also reports having made the following seizures:—The rectifying establishment of P. D. Casey & Co., and contents, No. 154 Maiden lane. Cause not stated.

The rectifying establishment of John Brannigan, No. 84 Cherry street. Cause—Alleged discrepancy of 4,000 gallons between the manufacturer's book and the stock found on hand.

Collector E. T. Wood, of the Third district, Brooklyn, yesterday seized the large and licensed distillery of H. Lewis, 106 Plymouth street, for neglecting to bond spirits, or deposit "meter money." The Collector's officers had discovered likewise the place of deposits in New York of the spirits, and doubtless that will be also seized by the Metropolitan Revenue Board.
