ST. DOMINGO.

Departure of Judge O'Sullivan—A Loan Effected—Business Brisk—The Republic Tranquil.

PUERTO PLATA, Jan. 5, 1869.

Judge O'Sullivan, the agent for the New York line of steamers lately established, leaves in the steamer Pelayo, on his way back to the United States. The object of his visit is also connected with matters of the greatest interest to this island, the character of which has not yet transpired.

Mr. Harmond, agent of the London bankers who offered to make a loan to this government, has arrived at the capital, and I understand that the obstacles which had presented themselves for the consummation of said negotiation have been removed. Therefore the government will now soon be in receipt of the first instalment of said loan.

There has been a great deal of specie exported of late and business continues exceedingly brisk.

The tranquility of the republic continues undisturbed.

A NOVELTY IN SHIPBUILDING.

The Molasses Brig Novelty, of Boston.

[From the Boston Traveller, Jan. 20.]

A few weeks since we stated that the Atlantic Works, of East Boston, were building an iron brig designed to carry molasses in bulk, and have now to report that she will be launched from the Glendon Rolling Mills wharf on Saturday forenoon at high water. She is 150 feet long on the keel, 149 on deck, has 27 feet breadth of beam, 11 feet depth of hold, and will register about 356 tons. Her dead rise at half floor is 8 inches, and her has sufficient swell and sheer to impart an air of lightness to her general outline. All her accommodations are on deck, and consist of a trunk cabin, a house for the crew, galley and some small storerooms, leaving the hold entirely clear for cargo. Her ribs are of angle iron 3 by 3 inches and ⅜ of an inch thick, with reverse bars of 2½ by 2½ and 5-16ths of an inch thick, and are 21 inches apart. The floors are 18 inches deep, the stem and sternpost are solid and the plating varies from 5-16ths to ⅜ of an inch in thickness, closely riveted with Pembroke iron.

She has seven circular tanks secured on an iron platform and braced from the sides, and these are all connected with one another in such a manner that they can be either united or disconnected at pleasure. Their combined capacity is 80,000 gallons. On the top of each there is a turret to allow for expansion and also over each there is a hatchway, so that they can be examined around, above and below at all times. She has a powerful steam pump by which to discharge, and it is estimated that in six hours her cargo can be pumped out. At the place where she will discharge in Boston there is a tank to receive her cargo. The saving in casks, cooperage and leakage will be very great; and in the course of a few voyages will make up the difference in the expense of such a vessel compared with one of wood.

Besides the tanks she has considerable space in the wings and in the ends to stow away any outward cargo that may be required to ballast her, and even if the experiment of carrying molasses should fail, still the tanks can be taken out without difficulty, and she will even then be none the less a serviceable vessel. But we do not believe the experiment will fail, but on the contrary will be entirely successful, and that after she has made a few voyages others will be built like her.

She is brig rigged, is a good looking vessel, and we have no doubt will prove a swift sailer. Captain Havener, who is well acquainted with the rum trade, commands her, and she is owned by Messrs. Nash, Spaulding & Co. She has been rightly named the Novelty, for she is the only vessel of the kind in the country.

A SANGUINARY FIGHT IN TENNESSEE.

Two Men Killed and Two Others Wounded.

[From the Huntingdon West Tennessean, Jan. 14.]

A desperate fight occurred in the vicinity of Buena Vista, on Saturday night last, which resulted in the instant killing of James T. Steele and the wounding of Gray Butler, so that he died on the next day, besides the wounding severely of James and William Taylor. So far as we have been able to gather the particulars are about as follows:—

On Saturday Alphonso Freeland and a man named Pinkston had some sort of a difficulty at Buena Vista. Butler and the Taylors were endeavoring to induce Freeland to fight Pinkston, when Steele, who is Freeland's uncle, came up and reproved them for their effort to get up a fight. They then tried to induce Pinkston to fight Steele, which, however, he refused to do. After Steele had left it was reported to him that Pinkston, who was drinking, had proposed to bet $100 that he could whip Steele. Becoming incensed at this, Steele, with a company, consisting of his son, William Steele, his half brothers, Elbert and Daly Royal, and young Freeland, started in pursuit of Pinkston (who in the meantime had left), avowing their purpose to chastise him. After following the direction he was supposed to have gone some miles they learned from some source that Pinkston had not passed and they turned back. After retracing their steps some distance they met Butler, the two Taylors and John Owen, who had started with their hands for a fox hunt. Steele inquired if Pinkston was with them, to which Owen replied that he was not. After some further conversation angry words were used between Steele and James Taylor. One version of the affair says Steele drew his pistol and shot at Taylor, who returned the fire, striking Steele in the forehead, producing instant death. Another statement is that as soon as Steele dismounted Taylor at once fired, killing his antagonist.

The firing now became general. Young Steele, seeing his father fall, drew his weapon and attacked Butler, who received three wounds, from the effects of which he died the next morning. Both the Taylors were wounded—one of them severely. The other parties escaped unhurt. So far as we are informed none of the parties have as yet been apprehended.

DISAPPEARANCE OF A BRIDGEPORT MERCHANT.

A Young Wife Deserted—Career of an Arrant Hypocrite.

[Bridgeport, Conn. (Jan. 19), correspondence of the Hartford Courant.]

The sudden disappearance of Mr. H. Clifford, a gentleman engaged in the tailoring and clothing business in State street creates considerable interest. Clifford is an Englishman, who came to this country about three years ago, and has been since that time employed in Newtown, about fifteen miles north of here, as a practical tailor. While he resided in Newtown he took an active part in all matters pertaining to the church, the cause of temperance, &c. In fact his general intelligence and good address gained him many friends and considerable influence in that quiet country town.

In the month of June last Clifford removed to Bridgeport and commenced business here. He brought letters from citizens of Newtown and many others; one from the pastor of the church, testifying to his activity and meekness as a christian man. Before leaving Newtown, Clifford became engaged to a lady of that place, and on Thanksgiving day they were married. The lady is one of the most amiable and excellent to be found in any place. She came to Bridgeport with her husband and remained until last Friday, when she returned to her friends in Newtown.

It appears that about three weeks since Clifford persuaded his wife to place in his hands some government bonds belonging to her, amounting to about $1,400. This secured, and all that could be collected from his creditors having been called in, he went to New York on Monday of last week, ostensibly to purchase goods for the establishment of which he was the principal owner. Since then nothing has been heard from him. The impression is that he has left the country and returned to England. His goods in the store were immediately seized and the whole establishment cleared out most effectually. From all appearances the whole movement was a deep laid plan to get possession of the property of others by means the most reprehensible.

Clifford was a teacher in the Bethesda Mission Sunday school, was recently Worthy Patriarch of the division of the Sons of Temperance in this city, and enjoyed the confidence of all who knew him. It is to be hoped that something will yet transpire to place him in a better position than the one now accorded him by those familiar with the facts and circumstances of the case.

A TERRIBLE AFFLICTION IN BOSTON.

Ravages of the Diphtheria in a Single Family.

[From the Boston Traveller, Jan 21.]

A week ago last Sunday Mr. Ferdinand Zoehler, residing at No. 10 Seneca street, a well known musician and a member of Gilmore's band, lost a child, Henry F., seven weeks old, by diphtheria, and ere another Sunday had passed the malignant disease had attacked two other children—Ferdinand, a promising boy, aged seven years, and a bright little girl, Henrietta, about five years old. Both these children died on Sunday last, and while the three lay dead, side by side, a fourth child, a boy, lay sick in bed with the same disease, and at one time he was considered to be in a critical condition. The funeral of the children took place yesterday, and they were buried in a single coffin. The grief stricken mother herself, during this mournful season, was hardly able to attend to the wants of her sick children; and the father, broken down under the terrible affliction, was almost unnerved.

CURIOUS ADVERTISING CASE.—In the Baltimore City Court yesterday, before Chief Justice Scott, a case was tried which presented an amusing instance of rivalry between two well known city firms engaged in the same business. Messrs. Cauncer Childs & Co., North Charles street, contracted with G. W. Hawes, the publisher of a business directory, for a half page advertisement of their house furnishing store for twenty-five dollars, which was printed. But there also appeared lengthwise, upon the margin of the same page, a single line advertisement referring to the house furnishing advertisement of Messrs. Certian & Co., on Baltimore street. In consequence Childs & Co. refused to pay for their advertisement. Suit was brought before Justice Evans, who gave judgment for Hawes for five dollars only, from which Childs & Co. appealed. A member of the firm of Certian & Co. yesterday testified in court that he had the advertisement of his house placed there after he had acknowledge of Childs' advertisement. No other advertisement of the kind could be found in the book. The jury rendered a verdict for Childs & Co., and the judgment below for five dollars was reversed, thus wisely rejecting the plaintiff's claim to any payment.—Baltimore Sun, Jan. 20.

THE MARYLAND OYSTER LAW.—Isaac D. Jones, Attorney General of Maryland, in answer to an inquiry for his opinion upon the constitution of the clause of the Oyster law, section sixteen, which forbids dredging for "oysters in any river, creek, cove, inlet, bay or sound within the limits of any county of this State," says that he is of opinion that "it does not apply to rivers which form the dividing line between two counties, and which cannot properly be said to be within the limits of any county." This will open Choptank river to unrestricted dredging, as that river is between Talbot and Dorchester. It will also open the waters that separate Talbot and Queen Anne's and nearly all the other rivers on the Eastern Shore, the Nanticoke separating Somerset and Dorchester; the Chester, Kent and Queen Anne's, and the Sassafras, Kent and Cecil. Besides the Patuxent and other rivers on the Western Shore are within the scope of this decision. So much for the effect of a technicality. Sometimes law is one thing and common sense another.—St. Michael's (Md.) Comet.
