WALL STREET WICKEDNESS.

Jackals Among the Bulls and Bears—Heavy Forgeries on Wall Street Banks—The Names of the Victims, but Not the Names of the Forgers.

There are certain animals of the carnivorous order which when they have once tasted of blood become utterly savage and will not be appeased until fully gorged with it. Now, without intimating that the bulls and bears of Wall street belong to that class of animals, it may be stated, without fear of contradiction, that the lesser creatures of the gold market, the wolves and jackals of the "street," sometimes develop ferocious instincts exceedingly dangerous to quiet people. The desire to obtain wealth, not by patient industry, but by a sudden coup, though somewhat general, is intensified in those whose special business it is to dabble in stocks and yell in the Gold Room. Call wealth blood, consider the disreputable operators of Wall street the bete noir of reputable bankers and brokers—jackals, and the simile will be complete. A successful hit on the rise or fall of gold, a bearish trick in scrip, or a bullish toss of stock, does not satisfy the thirst of these animals, but wheets it for fiercer efforts. From shameless deception in securities, by which the Wall street jackal fills his wallet at the expense of a foolish or country speculator, to absolute fraud and forgery, is but a short step. That many take it the record of the last few months bears ample evidence.

It will be remembered that in a recent article in the HERALD entitled the "Ways of Wall Street," it was stated that other revelations concerning the operations of swindlers would shortly be published in this journal. Rumors of frauds and forgeries in Wall street were afloat down town; but nothing very definite could be obtained until yesterday. Indeed this second chapter of the revelations is still incomplete, the names of several firms and the amounts for which they were victimized not having been obtained. Enough is given, however, to justify the hints thrown out in the article referred to and to put the officials of the banks on their guard.

On the 16th of last month Messrs. Fisk & Hatch drew a check on the Fourth National Bank for $56 62. On the following day it was presented and certified to in the usual way. The person who presented it for certification was a jackal; he put the precious paper carefully away and scampered off to some hole in the neighborhood not yet discovered. The check did not turn up again for some days; but when it did it had a very respectable appearance. The plea yune sixty-two cents had disappeared, but in their place stood two pretty o's, which made the legend on the paper with the red border read, "Pay to the order of Jackal $5,600." It was handed in to and promptly paid by the Tradesmen's Banking Association, No. 38 Wall street. As the stamp of the Fourth National Bank was on it and the alteration of the letters and figures very cleverly done no suspicion of forgery was entertained. The discovery was only made on the 1st of March, when the Fourth National Bank balanced their books and found $5,543 38 wanting. About the same time a jackal—probably the same—got a check for fifty dollars, drawn by Vermilye & Co. on the Bank of Commerce, and changed it to $15,000, first getting it certified, as in the first case. It is known that the jackal also tried how far he could go with the St. Nicholas Bank by altering a check for thirty dollars drawn on that institution to $6,000, but having received a hint that his impertinence would be resented gracefully withdrew. It is understood, however, that he was successful in other places and did a flourishing business. He is now supposed to be enjoying his otium cum dig. in some milder climate.

This "power true tale" has its ridiculous side. The victims of these bold forgeries hope that the jackal will repent and return one of these spring days in sackcloth and ashes and crying peccavi. At least, no other explanation can be given of their action, or, rather, inaction. The Tradesmen's Banking Association refuse to give the name of the forger or to state whether he had associates, while other bankers "grin and bear it" silently. The jackal has the money in his possession wherever he is, and, as long as he chooses to remain abroad, can drown every whisper of hush money in the refrain of "Shoo, fly." There might be some chance of catching the rascal if his name and description were given to the press, but as it is generally considered better to compromise with than to punish such exceedingly smart operators this will hardly be done until it is too late. It is to be hoped that Mr. Jackal will enjoy himself while on his travels and go into politics when he returns. The pity is that he was not employed to alter the New York charter; he would have done it well.

The success of the jackal mentioned above stimulated a brother animal yesterday to go and do likewise. A check was passed in at the Ninth National Bank for a sum not stated late in the day. The name of Charles Unger & Co. was forged and the check was duly certified. No particulars of the forgery could be obtained at the hour when Wall street put on its nightcap and rested from labor.
