We have heard quite a few complaints lately from the auto drivers concerning the actions of the children living south of the track. It seems that they will run in front of cars and then stay there until the car is a few feet from them then jump out of the way. Not only do they stop the cars to keep the driver from running over them, but they will try to jump on the side of the cars. Parents should stop this sort of play and let the sad death of the little fellow last Thursday night be a warning, that such accidents will not occur again.

Tales of A Heart
The hours I pulse life giving blood
Each drop has a meaning to me,
Only I know the torture each contains Or happiness there is to be.
With happy memories I sometime beat
As I feel the soul of my keeper,
Then again as I winter sleep
Covers me, I feel sorrow deeper.
Still again with murderous hate
I pulse madly, all in heat,
Only to cool and then too late
I realize my weakness and defeat.
But of all the passions that I feel
There is one, and only one
That makes my function human, real,
That is Love, ruler since the World began.
