DIOCESAN CONVENTION.

The tenth Convention of the diocese of Long Island was opened yesterday in Holy Trinity Church, Brooklyn. The morning was devoted to religious services. Dr. Moore preached the Convention sermon. The communion was administered by the Bishop. At the business session notice was given for an amendment to article 3 on the election and institution of ministers. The amendment proposes that the ecclesiastical authorities of the diocese shall be promptly notified of any election of a minister by a parish, and if they approve they shall make order for such rector's institution. The Bishop delivered a part of his annual address, which thanked his brethren for their kind remembrance of him in his affliction a year ago. The Bishop rejoiced that death had not taken away any of the clergy of the diocese during the year. He referred very tenderly to the recent decease of Dr. Muhlenberg, who built and equipped the first hospital of the church on this Continent and organized the first sisterhood. The Bishop confirmed 1,852 candidates in the diocese during the year. The condition of the churches spiritually, numerically and financially, is, on the whole, remarkably good. St. Paul's parish at Glen Cove, L. I., is building a new church at a cost of $30,000; a new church at Oyster Bay has been built at a cost of $12,000; at Rockaway Trinity parish has erected a new church at a cost of $10,000. Other parishes have improved their buildings and increased the value of their church property. St. Ann's Mission at Sayville has been organized into a parish and is now nearly self-supporting. Grace and Holy Trinity churches, Brooklyn, contribute more than half of all the money given for diocesan missions and church charities. There are four free churches in the diocese—St. Mary's, St. Luke's, St. Stephen's and Emanuel Church and their mission chapels, which presented 400 candidates for confirmation during the year. St. Paul's Church, at Flatbush, will be consecrated on May 31. Seven thousand dollars were disbursed upon the missions of the diocese and the Bishop made an eloquent appeal for more liberal contributions to all the interests of the Church. Reports were received from the several standing committees, and in the evening the Convention assembled to hear the balance of the Bishop's address.
