WALL STREET, TUESDAY, June 12—6 P. M.

The coal stocks seem to have gained as bad a name as the dog in the aphorism. They are to an inclination to hunt them to death, as though they were hydrophobic Spitzes, tagless and unregistered. As though the actual condition of the anthracite fancies was not lamentable enough in the natural course of things, the romancers of the Board to-day blurted out a report, which had been quietly whispered on Saturday, that the two Delawares would follow the Pennsylvania Coal Company's sale of 200,000 tons by an additional offering upon their own account of 500,000 tons more. This was piling Ossa upon Pelion with a vengeance, and implied a weight to be carried that the market for shares was unable to sustain. So prices fell to the lowest figures yet made, under this rumor and under the belief that the Reading road, with its swashbuckler policy, would sell its coal for the best price it would bring. To shareholders or unfortunate possessors of long stock there was but little balm in so unpromising a Gilead, but what little there was was extracted in the shape of a bonus upon borrowed stock, the charge upon Morris and Essex averaging ¼ per cent and upon Delaware and Lackawanna 1-16 per cent for one day's use. Although these rates would betoken an extended short interest, and consequently a latent supporting power, the quotations show a decline, as the extremes of the day, for Morris and Essex of 4¾ per cent, for Delaware and Lackawanna 2¼ per cent and for Delaware and Hudson 4 per cent. The rumors of these additional sales as threatened seem to have no basis in fact, and are lounded upon nothing better than "bounce," as understood by the originators of false reports. At the very close of the day prices looked up slightly, and there was a gasp for breath, which may or may not be satisfied in time to come. As the authracites were weak so were the railroads strong, particularly Central and Hudson, which attracted more than usual attention and was dealt in to the extent of over 23,000 shares. Mr. Vanderbilt since his return has been accepted as a new hand at the bellows and is expected to brighten up the fires of a fresh speculation in his favorite stocks. So think apparently the bow window party, who have been large buyers of both Lake Shore and Central and Hudson, the latter stock advancing to-day 1½ per cent under their purchases. The remainder of the market danced in attendance upon the leading stocks, being lively or depressed as the one was given them, but developing nothing of themselves that asks for comment.
