"PLIN" WHITE'S WIVES.

A New Phase of the Criminal Life of This Noted Swindler.

THE HEAD OF THREE FAMILIES.

A New York Lady Tells the Detectives an Affecting Story.

MORE FRAUDS COMING OUT

History of White's First Matrimonial Venture Told by the Victim.

A TARGET FOR PISTOL PRACTICE.

BOSTON, April 24, 1878.

The publication in the HERALD, a few days ago, of the extensive frauds of Mr. Plymouth White, called also "Plin," has led to the discovery that while this protean operator was extracting from credulous capitalists enough money to shine in good society he was also speculating somewhat extensively, and not altogether unsuccessfully, in the matrimonial mart. People who read his graphic biography have been inclined to believe that he was a cold-blooded, calculating man, into whose stony heart the darts of Cupid had never penetrated; that he was impervious to the soft glances of the gentle sex; in short, that he was a morose woman hater and a confirmed money getter. But these theories have been dispelled by the developments of the past two days here. The New York mail yesterday brought to Detective Pinkham, of the State police force, a dainty letter from a female, who informed the officer that she might be expected to call on him and throw some new light on the history of Mr. White. She told him that she had read in the NEW YORK HERALD a sketch of Mr. White's career, and that the thing that attracted her attention and aroused her suspicion was the announcement that he had a wife and two children, of whose existence she had been previously ignorant.

THE STORY OF WIFE NO. 1.

In due time the lady arrived and was not long in finding the detective, to whom she told a very comprehensive and apparently convincing story that may increase the load of trouble that is fast accumulating on the shoulders of Mr. White. The story she tells is substantially as follows:—

"I became acquainted with and was married to Mr. White in the year 1854, being under the impression that he was a broker or something of that kind. Shortly after our marriage he persuaded my father (who was a wealthy farmer, residing near Saratoga, N. Y.), my brother and sister to intrust to his keeping at the least calculation $40,000 or $50,000 to aid him, as said, in his financial speculations, which were sure, to return large profit. This money was all lost, and as a result my brother committed suicide. About this time I began to understand the true character of the man to whom I was married, and from that time until I left him I never ceased to upbraid him for what he succeeded in inducing me to give him my diamonds, for the purpose of remunerating a poor farmer's daughter, who, he said, had attended him at one time when he had been attacked and robbed by masked men and cruelly beaten. The diamonds I have never seen to this day, and probably never will again, as he sold them and undoubtedly used the money for his own purposes. I left him then, as I have before said, and never have seen him from that day, which was ten years ago, until I saw him in Charles Street Jail. While living with him in New York city Spence Pettis was a frequent guest of his, and upon one occasion, when a guest at my house, he stole a set of diamond earrings from me. I told my husband, and he told me to say nothing about it, and that he would purchase me a new set, which he subsequently did."

About this time Mrs. White naturally began to make up her mind that her husband was a thief, and frequent quarrels occurred between them, but the diplomatic tongue of the wily "Plin" succeeded in smoothing over the troubles. This lady says she travelled all over the country with him, he stating to her that he was engaged in the insurance business. She went to Colorado and other places on the Plains, and always travelled in good style.

WIFE NO. 2.

During all this time Mr. White had another wife living, and it would seem that he arranged his visits and his crooked operations so as to keep the women apart and devote a fair portion of his leisure time to each. This course he pursued successfully for five years. Wife No. 2 was, it seems, at one time in the dry goods business in Denver, Col., and it transpires that he perpetrated one of his cleverest swindles in that city, for which the officers there are now seeking him. He used to ship goods from there to St. Paul and sell them down the river. In this manner he succeeded in getting out of one firm the sum of $80,000, and through this loss a member of the firm became so depressed that he committed suicide and another died soon after by poison.

While Mr. White was in Ludlow Street Jail, New York, for one of his little operations wife No. 1 was in constant communication with him through a mutual friend. She believed he was in Onondaga, N. Y., and she remained in Boston.

TWO WIVES IN COUNCIL.

After telling her story to the officer wife No. 1 proceeded to the lodgings of wife No. 2, in Lynde street, where a very affecting interview took place. No. 2 is in a very awkward position, she having two children by White. One of these is an interesting girl fourteen years old, who has had a very liberal education in Europe. It is stated that White crossed the Atlantic sixteen times to evade the officers of the law, and he always told his daughter that his visits to Europe were made to look after her education. One of White's first crimes was the obtaining of money by stating that the mother of his wife had just died and left her a large fortune. It was true that the mother had died, but the amount of money left by her was very small. After the interview at Lynde street, the party went to the cell of White in Charles Street Jail, where Mrs. White identified White and reproached him for his conduct and with being the cause of much misery to her. The lady looks much careworn and is old beyond her years. She is employed as forewoman in a large manufactory in New York City, and has supported herself for years.

A THIRD WIFE.

Other developments are expected that will add another and a greater crime to White's already long list. A man who knows White is authority for the statement that he has a third wife living in New York city, to whom he has been married only a short time. Whether she will appear and prove her claim remains to be seen.

NEW EVIDENCE COMING OUT.

Officer Pinkham has now in his possession a letter from St. Paul, Minn., written by Samuel Mayall in which he charges White with swindling him out of $9,000, and his brother John and another man who went into business with him out of $100,000 or over. Mr. Mayall expresses anxiety to know when the trial is to come off, as he is anxious to appear as a witness against White upon that occasion. Several days ago the latter wrote a letter to Mr. Clinton Lovell, one of his victims, in which he expressed a wish to have an interview, when he would make an exact statement of just how he stood financially; but as no intention of restoring his ill-gotten gains was exhibited Mr. Lovell paid no attention to the request. White is in the toils at last, and has but a slim chance of ever breathing again the air of freedom. His victims only wish he had a lease of life running long enough to satisfy their claims against him.

AN INTERVIEW WITH THE FIRST WIFE.

BOSTON, April 25, 1878.

Mrs. "Plin" White No. 1 is a comely matron of forty-five, with evident traces of former beauty, although somewhat dimmed by the heavy lines of care that are visible on her face. She was found last evening in her room at the Crawford House, and after some hesitation she consented to tell the story of her wrongs more fully and with greater minuteness of details than she did to the detective. Descending to the parlor on the second floor she sat down with an air of extreme fatigue and mental exhaustion and began her narrative:—Yes, sir, she said, my husband is beyond doubt one of the greatest rascals that I have ever known or read of. He has such an oily tongue and tells his stories with such an appearance of candor and sincerity that he can almost persuade anybody even against the evidence of their senses. There was a time when I placed implicit confidence in the man and his statements, and I believe that if I had the money I would have as readily and cheerfully let him have $50,000 as fifty cents.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT.

I first met him in New York city. I was residing at that time with my parents in Saratoga. I went on a visit to New York and there was introduced to him. He was an exceedingly handsome man, and added to his personal attractions he had a suavity of manner and an air of dignity and manhood about him that would have captured a less susceptible heart than mine. I returned soon after to Saratoga where my father lived—a man well provided with this world's goods. About two weeks thereafter "Plin" came to the Springs and called at our house, where he was well received by my parents and myself. He soon ingratiated himself into the confidence of my brother, and he was at once a favored suitor. He continued to visit our house at intervals, often staying a week at a time, until 1854, when we were married in New York city. We went to live in Albion place, East Fourth street, near Second avenue, which was then a very aristocratic neighborhood. For the first two years of our wedded life we lived very pleasantly; "Plin" was doing well, and we moved in the very choicest society of the neighborhood.

A WOMAN IN THE CASE.

In the fall of 1857 "Plin" became acquainted with a dissolute woman named "Austen," who was then boarding in a house of ill-fame in Crosby street. I noticed that he was absent from home a good deal, sometimes for two or three days at a time, but I was led to believe that he was absent on business. In the month of February, 1858, my suspicions became aroused and I set about watching his movements. For this purpose I secured the services of a detective and frequently paid little boys to "shadow" him. By these means I was not long in tracing him to the house of the woman "Austen." Becoming satisfied of his infidelity I accused him openly of it and gave him to understand that I was well posted as to his movements. I also asked him to render an account of the money he had taken from my brother and myself and placed, as he said, in the bank. I was aware that he had been squandering this in his revels with the woman. I told him plainly that unless he gave up the woman and stopped spending the little fortune we had intrusted to his keeping I would have his life. He promised faithfully to do as I wished, and the matter dropped. But I never relaxed in my watch over his conduct. I soon became convinced that he had broken faith with me and I determined to carry out my threat.

"SHOOT HIM ON THE SPOT."

I quietly purchased a revolver and loaded it carefully. Life was becoming a burden too heavy to bear, and I made up my mind to end the trouble. At that time we were boarding in Ludlow place. One Sunday morning on returning from church I found "Plin" quietly packing his trunks. I pretended not to notice what he was doing and went to my room, determined to await developments. That evening he told me he was going out of town on business, and about seven o'clock a carriage drove to the house. The driver rang the bell and asked for the trunks. I stepped up to "Plin" and asked him what he meant. He gave an evasive answer. I told him if he dared to leave the house I would shoot him dead on the spot. He appeared not to notice my threat, and turned to superintend the loading of his trunks on the carriage. The thought of all my wrongs, both in money and mental suffering, drove me almost frantic and I drew my revolver, and, aiming it at "Plin" as he was passing out of the hall, fired. The ball missed him and lodged in the casing of the door. He fled to the street, and, as quick as a flash, I raised the window and fired a second shot, out again missed him. This drew a crowd around the house and a policeman was summoned. I was arrested and brought to the station house. "Plin" refused to prefer charges and I was released. I wanted him to prosecute me so I could expose the whole fraud, but he was too shrewd and preferred to let me go away free.

HIS EARLIEST FINANCIAL FRAUDS.

"Plin" called on me a couple of days after this occurrence and made such a plausible plea for mercy and forgiveness that I became reconciled to him once more. He pledged his honor by a solemn oath that he would reform, go West and make a fresh start in business. He subsequently told me that it cost him $400 to keep the story of the shooting and my arrest from publication in the New York papers. He wanted the $400 and took this method of extorting it from me. He went to St. Paul, Minn., soon after and went into business. I remained in New York and heard from time to time that he was swindling merchants by the wholesale in the West, but whenever I wrote to him about the subject he managed to allay my suspicions and fears by his plausible manner and style. I visited him several times in the West and he seemed to be doing well.

THE WINCHESTER SWINDLE.

In 1862 he returned to New York, and soon after his return he managed to obtain the sum of $111,000 from Locke Winchester, brother of the proprietor of the Winchester House, in New York city. He talked Mr. Winchester out of this money without even giving him the least security for the return of the money. Mr. Winchester is now in the express office at No. 65 Broadway, New York city. "Plin" went West again, and I soon after followed him to St. Paul, Minn. We remained here quite a while, until he was suddenly summoned to New York on business, so he said. I patiently awaited his return—that was in June, 1868—and I was finally compelled to return to New York, and that was the last time that I ever laid eyes upon him until last Tuesday, when I was confronted with him in the jail in Boston. When he reached New York again Mr. Locke Winchester secured his arrest as an absconding creditor, and Judge Brady compelled him to give $50,000 bail. Being ignorant of his whereabouts, I was also kept in ignorance of his arrest and imprisonment. That's not the first time that he was ever placed in prison. He was arrested once before in New Hampshire for having a blackmailing libel published in a newspaper that he was connected with.

HE HAS BARRELS OF MONEY.

I went down to the prison to-day to see him, and Mr. Bradley permitted me to converse with him for over half an hour. He begged me to let up on him, and said that it would be all right; that he has "barrels of money," and that it I did so he would "fix" me for life. He furthermore informed me that people in Boston believed that he was "broke," but if they did they were very much mistaken. He denied having received $15,000 from Mr. Lovell, as charged, and stated that he had obtained only $3,000. Just as I was about to leave him he again implored me to "let up on him," but I am determined to prosecute him to the bitter end. He is a grand rascal, and I do not believe one word now that he says. Yes, indeed, no one can ever imagine what I have suffered from that scoundrel. After he had succeeded in obtaining all of my money and diamonds he then pledged my clothing, and insulted me repeatedly by bringing well known thieves, such as Spence Pettis, for instance, to my house and introducing them under false names, as the Hon. Mr. Bodfish or Colonel St. Julien, &c. For the past ten years he has failed to supply me with $1 for my support, and I have been compelled to seek employment at the hands of strangers.

"PLIN'S" MATRIMONIAL SPECULATIONS.

I see it stated in the papers that "Plin" married the servant girl of the woman "Austin." This is a mistake; it was his brother—Homer White, a minister up in Vermont—who married her. The way it came about was as follows:—Homer White was in New York city during the year 1863, and in very needy circumstances. He had just left college, and was studying for the ministry. "Plin" introduced him to the girl, and finding out that she had a few dollars saved up he married her in order to better his own condition. He is living somewhere up in Vermont. After I reached here on Tuesday I learned of wife No. 2, who lives on Lynde street, and I went to her house in company with one of the detectives. I asked her to show me her marriage certificate and also tell me her name, but she absolutely refused to do either. I do not believe that "Plin" is married to this woman at all. I firmly believe that she is just some woman that he has picked up and ruined. He can do it if any one can. I am sorry that I cannot stay here so as to push this case, as I am compelled to return to New York city to-morrow. I cannot afford to remain here. The Chief told me to-day that I cannot do anything to "Plin" here in Boston, on account of having been married in New York city, and that I must therefore conduct the prosecution there in case I wish to have him punished for abandonment and adultery. I know that he has money, and I also believe that he has lots of it, or barrels of it, as he stated to me to-day.
