WALL STREET,
MONDAY, April 29—6 P. M.

The stock market to-day opened strong and entirely reinvigorated after its late weakness. The strong tone which was developed at the close on Saturday afternoon was more than preserved at the opening of the market, and an immediate rise ensued. The movement referred to in this column to divide up the surplus stock of the Western Union took form to-day in the shape of a circular addressed to the Executive Committee of that company asking them to consider the question whether it would not be advisable to distribute the surplus stock among the shareholders. The origin of the memorial is clouded in mystery and is by many considered to be merely a stock-jobbing transaction. Whether it be or not there is no good reason why a part of the surplus, if it really exists, should not be divided up. The stock was very strong at the Board to-day, opening at 81 and advancing to 81⅞, with a subsequent slight decline. There have been several large purchases of late of this stock by investors who believe in the impossibility of any future rivalry. The inventions of the last year point to a system by which telegraphy can be much more cheaply used than ever before, and as the company possesses a genius who spends his moments of leisure in inventing such baubles as the phonograph it is not likely that any one can take their water. The remainder of the market was very strong and buoyant, particularly the Lake Shore and St. Paul stocks. A prominent operator who is remarkable for shifting his opinions and position in the market almost daily was credited with attempting to send the market down for St. Paul in order to buy. In order to do so he sold one thousand shares, and giving an order at the same time to buy found that his long stock all cost him more than his short. The friends of the Northwest road still continue to sing its praises and talk of its excellent "physical condition and financial value." The shipments at Chicago and Milwaukee of grain are very large and the receipts almost as great.
