WALL STREET, MONDAY, May 13—6 P. M.

The Stock Exchange being in the throes of a contested election which diverted popular attention from stock combinations to competing candidates, and allured idle and partisan brokers to much pouring of libations to the "best man" instead of hunting up orders, it was natural enough that the amount of business transacted should be limited and the changes in quotations unimportant. The market opened with a very decided strength, which was particularly noticeable in the granger stocks and Rock Island, the latter gaining over one per cent during the day and keeping most of it to the end. This unusual move in so quiescent a stock excited much comment as well as conjecture, neither of which were satisfied by the report set going that the company had in contemplation the division among shareholders of the 40,000 shares reserve stock. On the contrary, there were plenty of knowing old Stock Exchange birds who, declining to be caught by any such transparent chaff as this, were decided in their opinion that the whole matter was a put up job, and that the job itself was nothing more or less than that of making a market upon which to sell the Northwesterns. As a further prop in this direction it is to be noticed that information was communicated in quarters where it was expected to do the most good that the Northwestern directors would shortly meet and declare a dividend of 3½ per cent upon each class of stock. Despite of these stimulants the experiment of pressing the stock for sale turned out to be an unhappy one, for it proved to be easier to break the price than to find buyers, and the upshot of the whole matter at the end of the day was comprised in the fact that while the quotations had gone off nearly two per cent the amount of stock that had gone off was very limited indeed. It turned out quite a breezy day for Pacific Mail, transactions being unusually large and dealings animated. It looked at one time as if "bon voyage" might be wished to the sluggish craft, with some hopes of its being able to make one en route to higher figures; but as usual the movement gave out before the end and no progress was made worth speaking of. The whole gist of the matter appears to rest upon a report from Washington that the Senate Committee on Post Offices had agreed to report favorably the bill granting a subsidy to a line of steamers carrying the United States mails between San Francisco and Kong Kong, and between the former city and Sydney, Australia. Among the outlying gossamers the Ohio and Mississippi road showed fresh strength and activity, with an improvement in the mortgages and in both kinds of stock. It is so nearly certain that the reconstruction scheme will meet the approbation of the meeting of directors to be shortly held at Cincinnati that certain bears, who had sold the stock short at lower prices, were pretty active to-day in getting out of what threatens to be a dangerous position. The rest of the market remained neglected, but prices held well until near the close, when the list yielded somewhat under the weakness manifested by Northwest and St. Paul.
